The Executive Committee of THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY met at 8:00 P. M. o'clock in room 1210 Inter-Southern Building—there being present:

Messrs. Henry Vogt, President; R. L. Callahan, Vice-President; A. J. Carroll, R. F. Vaughan, James Garnett, George M. Clark, W. T. Zur Schmiede, Secretary and T. K. Helm, by request.

Sale Stock of Ashland Natl Bank:

The meeting was called to consider the sale of the stock owned by THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY in the ASHLAND NATIONAL BANK, ASHLAND, KENTUCKY, at the request and suggestions of Messrs. Williamson and Field, directors.

Exhibit "Zur Schmiede No. 42"

Mr. Williamson opened the discussion by stating that owing to the failure of the National Bank of Kentucky and the sale of the BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY interest in Covington and Cincinnati, that the ASHLAND NATIONAL BANK interests that had sold out for THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY stock, which had now become worthless, desired, but reluctantly, to take over a controlling interest in an institution that meant much to their territory; that while the institution had suffered somewhat from withdrawals, it was in a sound condition with a little over $1,000,000.00 of cash available and salable bonds of about $500,000.00 and re-discountable paper of about $500,000.00 or more; that these represented, roughly speaking, $2,000,000.00 against present deposits of $4,000,000.00, which had been recently reduced from $5,000,000.00.

Messrs. Williamson and Field stated that in view of the fact that their stockholders had all sold out for THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY stock, with a total loss to them, and that while they were not authorized to offer any sum for the stock, they were authorized to say that if given an option at $30.00 per share on 4,000 shares, it would be acceptable.

It was pointed out to them that THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY on the representation of the officers of their own bank, had paid $200.00 per share for 7115 shares; it, therefore, stood THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY $1,423,000.00, and for the control of which they were offering only $120,000.00. (It was mentioned, incidentally, that THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY, and most of its officers and directors, had reached the point where they were not giving away any bank that might be liquidated for three or four times the amount they were offering.)

(In red ink) Stricken out in Minutes of Dec. 12.30 before approval.

The Committee and the negotiators then separated to consider further action, and upon re-convening it was stated to the negotiators for the ASHLAND NATIONAL BANK that the Committee would sell 4,000 shares at $100.00 per share and accept its chances on selling later its remaining 3115 shares, or might consider a firm offer of $500,000 for its 7115 shares, because the Committee would like to clear up its local situation, though it believed that a profit would be realized by the investors of at least 50% or more within six months on that purchase, if the local interests would get behind and support their local bank.

In the discussion it was also pointed out that the Bank had a capital of $800,000.00, a surplus of $300,000.00 and the most modern bank building in that section of the State, which building was yielding over 4% on investment, though it represented a relatively high investment of the capital of the Bank.

After further discussion, neither side being willing to yield their views, it was suggested that the meeting adjourn to consider this subject further at the meeting of the Executive Committee at 11:00 A. M. November 20th, 1930, in the office of Mr. A. J. Carroll, 14th floor of the Inter-Southern Building.

You will observe that there is a technical change in Section Five of my original draft in order to conform to the new Delaware Law. As a matter of fact it is more simple than the old form.

I also enclose statement of corporation to be filled out, signed by the President or Secretary of the new corporation and sent to the Secretary of State of Kentucky together with a filing fee of $1.00. When this is done, the corporation will be fully organized to do business in Kentucky.

There will be mailed to you tomorrow the original of the minute book containing copy of charter and the by-laws. According to instructions, I mailed the forty-nine directors elected at the organization meeting. All that will be necessary for you to do at the meeting on Friday is to elect the officers and if you so desire, also elect an executive

OFFICIAL REPORTER

Louisville, Ky., July 19, 1929.

To the Holders of Trustees' Participation Shares,
National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company:

1. Your Officers and Directors have studied the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business in America, with a view to preparing the two banking institutions under their management, to meet these changed conditions, and to take early advantage of new opportunities presented thereby.

2. The conclusion unanimously reached, as a result of their deliberations, is that the two banks, and the business conducted by them, should be reorganized by adding to this group a third corporation, which will make the operations of these banking institutions more profitable, expand their facilities, and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections.

3. Such a reorganization is in line with the trend of business and finance in this country; and the strength and influence of the new corporation will not only greatly benefit the two banks and the territory they now serve, but will also be a stabilizing influence in banking circles throughout this section of the country. The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank nor a trust company has authority to exercise, and can take advantage of many sound and profitable financial opportunities, frequently presented in the course of business of the two banks, but not available to them, because of the restrictions upon their powers and activities.

4. The following is the Plan of Reorganization agreed upon by the Officers and Directors of the two banks, and approved by formal Resolutions of the Trustees, under the Trustees' Agreement for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company.

5. There has been organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, a corporation known as The BancoKentucky Company, with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares, having a par value of Ten ($10.00) Dollars each. The stock will be exchanged or sold, in accordance with this Plan, on the basis of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share, which will give the Company a capital of Twenty Million ($20,000,000.00) Dollars, and a surplus of Thirty Million ($30,000,000.00) Dollars, or a total capital and surplus of Fifty Million ($50,000,000.00) Dollars. No stock will be sold by the Company at less than Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share.

6. The corporation is given broad charter powers, including the right to acquire stocks, bonds and other securities of other corporations, and evidences of indebtedness created or issued by other corporations; the power to underwrite securities and take part in syndicate management, and to charge fees and commissions for its services in connection with the reorganization or refinancing of other corporations; the power to issue bonds and to guarantee the obligations of others and to become surety, guarantor and endorser thereof. The foregoing is merely a brief summary of the broad powers given the corporation; complete details of these powers appear in the Certificate of Incorporation of the Company, copies of which may be examined at the offices of the two banks by any one interested.

7. It is an essential part of this reorganization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks. The BancoKentucky Company, therefore, offers to the Trustees' Participation Shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, through the Trustees as agents in the transaction, its entire capital stock, on the bases and subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set out:

8. It is an essential part of this Plan that:

(a) On or before September 19, 1929, the holders of the Trustees' Participation Shares must deposit their Certificates with the Trustees for exchange into the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and for each Participation Share thus deposited, the Trustees will cause to be issued to the holder thereof, Two (2) shares of the stock of the new corporation. In addition thereto the depositing shareholder will have the right to subscribe for as many additional shares of the stock of The BancoKentucky Company as he may desire at the price of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share subject to allotment ratably if over-subscribed. Trustees' Participation Shareholders who fail to deposit their shares on or before September 19, 1929, will be deemed to have waived their rights to thus exchange their shares and subscribe for stock in the new Company, unless the Trustees shall extend the time for deposit and subscription (as they may do in their discretion), in which event the Trustees' Participation Shareholders will be deemed to have waived their rights, unless their shares are deposited within the extended time.

(b) The entire Plan of Reorganization, and the deposit and subscription privileges and rights hereinabove set out, are all, and each of them is, conditioned expressly upon the acquisition by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, either by deposit for exchange, or by direct subscription as above, of at least a majority of the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and further conditioned upon the acquisition by The BancoKentucky Company of at least a majority of the Trustees' Participation Shares issued and outstanding as of September 19, 1929.

9. It is the unanimous recommendation of your Officers, Directors and Trustees of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, that the Trustees' Participation Shareholders immediately deposit their shares under this Reorganization Plan, and that they exercise their right to subscribe to the additional shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

10. There is enclosed herewith a subscription form covering this transaction, which you are asked to sign at your earliest opportunity and deposit with the Trustees, at their office, 421 West Market Street, together with your Certificate or Certificates for Trustees' Participation Shares, endorsed in blank and witnessed. There will be issued to you an Interim Receipt for the shares deposited which, when the Plan has become effective as above set forth, may be presented for exchange for the permanent certificates of the BancoKentucky Company, in accordance with the Plan of Reorganization.

OFFICIAL REPORTER

Mr. James B. Brown, President
National Bank of Kentucky
Louisville, Kentucky

Dear Sir:

In Re: Bancokentucky Company

On yesterday you asked me whether the holders of the Trustees Participation Shares would be subject to income tax, in the event they exchanged their shares for the shares of Bancokentucky Company, in accordance with the terms of the prospectus.

I have conferred with my associates, Messrs. Miller and Chevalier, and submit herewith our composite view on this question.

1) If the Bancokentucky Company cannot be considered as a "reorganization" under the Revenue Act of 1928, then, undoubtedly the holders of the Participation Shares would be taxable on the transfer, on the amount of the profit realized from the transaction. This profit would be the difference between the cost of the Participation Shares and the fair market value of the shares of Bancokentucky Company, which would be $25.00 or more. In view of the fact that every shareholder of the National Bank of Commerce is still a shareholder in the two institutions, it will be at once seen that the taxable gain would be very large, were it not possible to treat the Bancokentucky Company as a reorganization under the Revenue Act of 1928.

2) We believe that the Bancokentucky Company will be treated as a reorganization, provided it acquires not less than a majority of the Trustees Participation Shares. A reorganization is defined in the Revenue Act as a merger or consolidation, including the acquisition by one corporation of at least a majority of the voting stock of another corporation. For the purposes of our transaction, it is our opinion that the Trustees for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company will be treated as an Association or Corporation. This opinion is based upon two facts:

a. Because the Rules and Regulations Section of the Income Tax Unit have held that Trustees, under similar trust agreements, are to be treated as an Association or Corporation for income tax purposes; and

b. Because under Section 701 of the Revenue Act of 1918, the term, corporation, is defined to include "Associations."

42. " Bancokentucky Company.

Assuming that we are right in the foregoing conclusions, then, no taxable gain will be realized as a result of the exchange of the shares, under Subsection 3 of Section 112, Revenue Act of 1928, which reads as follows:

> "No gain or loss shall be recognized if stock or securities in a corporation, a party to a reorganization, are, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, exchanged solely for stock or securities in such corporation, or, in another corporation, a party to the reorganization."

Of course, the foregoing Section would apply only in the event the Department should treat the Trustees, for the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, as a corporation, for, in that event, the Trustees would be a "party to the reorganization" within the meaning of the above Section, and the Bancokentucky Company would be the other party thereto. It is our best opinion, as above stated, that the Trustees would be so treated by the Department, and, therefore, that no taxable gain would result from these transfers.

In order to clinch our right, as far as possible, to claim for our stockholders the immunity provided for in the above Section, we believe it will be necessary to add a clause to the prospectus, providing that, the offer of the Bancokentucky Company stock on the plan outlined is conditioned upon the acceptance thereof by at least a majority in interest of the Trustees Participation Shareholders.

Yours very truly,

Robert F Vaughan

SUGGESTED PREFACE TO THE PROSPECTUS

To the Holders of Trustees Participation Shares,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Your Officers and Directors have, for sometime past, been seriously considering a reorganization of your banking institutions to meet the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business in this country, and also, to prepare for still greater changes, which, in our opinion, are rapidly approaching.

We are unanimously of the opinion that the first step to be taken by our shareholders in this reorganization is the creation of a third corporation, under state laws, with broad powers and strong resources, to be operated by your Officers and Directors in conjunction and in close cooperation with the two banks, expanding their credit facilities and supplementing their functions in the financial world.

Accordingly, your Directors have caused to be organized, subject to your approval, as hereinafter set forth, a corporation under the laws of Delaware, known as The Buncokentucky Company. In keeping with the idea of its formation and the plans of its future operation, it is essential that the shares of the Company, or at least a substantial majority thereof must be owned by the present holders of the Trustees Participation Shares.

of our banks for they can feel certain of loans running beyond the usual sixty or ninety-day time limit of commercial banks.

Capitalization

There will be for the present only one kind of stock, common, $10.00 par value, two million shares, representing a capitalization of $20,000,000.00. The first offering of this stock will be made at $25.00 per share, and to the present stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company we offer two shares of this stock for every share of bank stock that they now own. In addition to that, we offer to each stockholder one share of the BancoKentucky Company for each share of bank stock now owned for $25.00 in cash. As an example, if one today holds ten shares of bank stock, he can trade this for twenty share of stock in the BankcoKentucky Company and at the same time he has the privilege of buying ten shares of stock in the BancoKentucky Company for $250.00.

Should our stockholders all decide to do this, the BancoKentucky Company will own all of the stock in the banks and the stockholders will own the stock in the BancoKentucky Company. Stockholders will please understand that there is nothing obligatory about this at all - we are simply making the offer which you may or may not accept at your own pleasure. You can retain your bank stock just as you now hold it if that is what you prefer. You may or may not buy the new stock, just as you prefer.

Should all stockholders exercise their option, it will still leave in the treasury of the Company 275,000 shares of stock, which the Directors will sell a need for capital arises, or they will use it in purchasing other institutions that we would like to have allied with us.

The Directors and Officers of the two banks have given serious consideration to this proposal, and all unite in commending the company to you. Not only will it serve a very useful purpose in our community in promoting industry, but, in our opinion, it will make a very profitable investment for you.

Mr. James B. Brown, President
National Bank of Kentucky
Louisville, Kentucky

Dear Mr. Brown:

IN RE: THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY

Supplementing my former letter to you under date of July 6th, on yesterday I had a conversation with a lawyer, representing the Income Tax Unit at Washington, in the General Counsel's Department, who shortly expects to become a member of the firm of Miller and Chevalier, my office associates in Louisville, which firm, as heretofore explained, specializes in Federal Tax cases, with offices in Washington and New York.

The gentleman gave as his opinion (without opportunity to study the history of the entire transaction) that it was highly important that every preliminary paper, resolution, etc., dealing with this Company and its organization, should clearly recite that the Company is a "reorganization," within the purview of the Revenue Act of 1928.

In other words, the issue and delivery of two shares of stock of the Company, for one Trustees Participation Share, must be made to appear (so far as the Bank's stockholders are concerned) as a mere receipt of the same property in another form, and not as a closed transaction wherein they part with one species of property in exchange for an entirely different species of property.

I believe we can accomplish this result, without in anywise impairing the structure of the setup already agreed upon, by prefacing the prospectus with some general remarks, as per the enclosed draft herewith submitted for your criticism.

Yours very truly,

Robert F. Vaughan

To the stockholder addressed:

The officers and directors of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company have caused to be formed under the laws of Delaware a corporation named THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY. Its authorized capital stock is 2,000,000 shares of common stock, each share of the par value of Ten Dollars, making the aggregate capital Twenty Million ($20,000,000). This stock will not be sold for less than Twenty-Five ($25.00) Dollars per share.

The corporation will not do a banking business but its powers are large and diversified. Among the things it is authorized to do, in any State of the United States or any foreign country, are the following: The acquiring of all or any portion of the capital stock or assets of any other corporation; the buying, selling or holding of shares of the capital stock, bonds, securities or evidences of indebtedness, created or issued by any other corporation; the purchasing of any promissory notes or other evidences of indebtedness executed by any person, firm, association or corporation; the financing or managing of any commercial, manufacturing or business enterprise; the underwriting of any issue of stocks, bonds or other securities issued by any corporation; to undertake or assume the whole or any part of the liabilities of any person, firm or corporation; the power to act as registrar or transfer agent of any corporation and to act as agent in general for any person, firm or corporation; the power to issue bonds, debentures or other obligations; the power to guarantee the obligations of any person, firm or corporation and to become surety therefor and to become joint maker, endorser or acceptor of any such obligations; the right to charge fees and commissions for all services rendered by it.

In addition to the above, the corporation has many broad powers, covering practically all business or financial under-

As stated, the corporation will not do a banking business or compete, in any manner, with the National Bank of Kentucky or The Louisville Trust Company. On the contrary, it will act in full co-operation with these two institutions.

In view of these facts the officers and directors of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company deem it just and proper that the opportunity be afforded to each stockholder of these institutions to acquire shares of the new corporation before disposing of such shares to others. Accordingly, the following offer is made: In exchange for each participation ~~certificate~~ share, owned by stockholders of these institutions, the new corporation will give two shares of its capital stock at $25.00 per share making a total present exchange value of $50.00 for one $10.00 par value participation ~~certificate~~ share. In addition, the right will be given to each stockholder to purchase one additional share of the new corporation for each participating ~~certificate~~ share now owned by him, at the price of $25.00 per share.

It must be understood that no stockholder of the National Bank of Kentucky or The Louisville Trust Company is under any obligation either to make the exchange, as above stated, or to purchase shares of the new corporation. It is entirely optional, but the officers and directors of these two affiliated institutions unanimously recommend that every stockholder take advantage of the above offer. In their opinion, the formation of a financial group of the character of The Bancokentucky Company, The National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, is necessary to meet the changing, increasing and broadening scope of financial and commercial affairs; that it is in line with the trend of modern, financial deve- ent that the assets of the corporation, wisely managed, will n nly be of great benefit to these two institutions and the territory they now serve but also will be a stabilizing and developing influence in this entire section of the country. The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank or trust company has authority to exercise; it can take advantage of many sound and profitable business opportunities and the stockholders of these two affiliated institutions will reap the benefits from its activities.

Should all stockholders exercise their option it will leave in the treasury of the company 375 750,000 shares of stock which the directors will sell as need for capital arises or they will use it in purchasing other institutions that in their opinion should allied with us.

Each stockholder who desires to take advantage of this offer must on or before , 1929, deliver his participation certificates, or such number thereof as he desires to exchange, to The BancoKentucky Company at its office at Louisville, Kentucky, and two shares of the stock of the new corporation will be exchanged for each participation ~~certificate~~ share so delivered, and each stockholder may, on or before the above date, subscribe and pay for if any such additional shares of the Bancokentucky Company as he may desire, at the price of $25.00 per share.

The BancoKentucky Company has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware to carry on a general operating and investment business. The Officers of the two interested concerns - The National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company - for a long time have felt the need of an organization in Louisville with sufficient capital and experience to meet the growing demands for a constructive financial service in our community. Most lines of business have undergone radical changes in the last few years, and commercial banks must furnish the kind of service that these changes demand. Those corporations which formerly borrowed during their heavy season from commercial banks have sometime since sold stocks and bonds to the public so they no longer need bank loans.

Investors holding stocks and bonds of our industrial corporations find themselves no longer welcome at commercial banks because of the inflexibility of banking regulations. These, we will serve. Prosperous but under-financed corporations are unable to pay off their bank loans every year, and the new company can handle loans of that nature because it is not necessary that its assets be liquidated every few months as is necessary with a bank. Investments in securities can be bought and carried for a while to the great advantage of our stockholders, and this represents another type of service we can render.

The BancoKentucky Company will operate under very flexible policies, rendering service to manufacturers and merchants that, in our opinion, are worthy of support and are safe and profitable. Such a policy will be a great relief to the patrons

CALDWELL & CO. IN STRONG POSITION

James B. Brown Makes Statement; Deal With BancoKentucky Never Closed.

James B. Brown, president of the BancoKentucky Company, has made the following statement with regard to Banco Kentucky and Caldwell & Co.:

"Negotiations which have been in progress for several days between Caldwell & Co. and the BancoKentucky Company have not been consummated. The BancoKentucky Company is therefore not involved in any way with the affairs of Caldwell & Co. Moreover, I consider Caldwell & Co. perfectly sound and in a strong position. This is the judgment also of the committee of Nashville bankers who made an examination of the company as set forth in the statement issued at Nashville.

"Caldwell & Co. is one of the largest investment houses in the United States. It is of vital importance to a large section of the country and especially to the South.

"The company has felt the same situation that has confronted scores of investment houses in the country as the result of the abnormal business conditions that have prevailed for more than a year. It holds millions of dollars worth of bonds and securities due to commitments which had been made and which the company has not. These securities are perfectly sound but it is impossible to sell them at present at anything like their real value."

Caldwell & Co. also owns and operates several corporations, including banks and insurance companies. Mr. Caldwell has decided to dispose of his insurance properties and arrangements of this sort are expected in a short time. This will give the company a large amount of cash and will adjust the situation by doing away with the necessity of waiting for a change in the condition of the securities market.

Other articles approved follow:

ROWE DECLARED VICTOR AT N. A.

Democrat Defeats Congressman Dunbar; Incumbent Carries Home County.

Eugene B. Crowe, Democrat, defeated Congressman James W. Dunbar, Republican, for representative from the Third Congressional district, according to unofficial returns. Dunbar carried his home county, Floyd, by 433 votes, it was revealed at Montgomery Thursday.

Congressman Dunbar refused Thursday morning to concede the election of his opponent, saying he had not received official figures from some of the counties in the district. Harry T. Ferguson, district Democratic chairman, claimed the election of Crowe by 202 majority.

The official tabulation of votes cast in Tuesday's election which was completed Wednesday afternoon by the board of election commissioners, shows that all of the county and township officers, excepting three, were won by the Democrats.

In some instances the majorities were small, while in others they reached the normal Democratic figures of the past.

Robert A. Lotz, Democratic candidate for treasurer, defeated Capt. Otis Pyle, Republican, by only eighteen

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., November 6

THE [illegible] of a free people are not the only methods by which expression is given to a sound and constructive public opinion but also the means of revealing and thereby healing internal disorders and discontent. New Home of National Bank of Kentucky

BANK TO OCCUPY BUILDING AT 421 WEST MARKET BY DECEMBER 1.

THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY will move into its new home at 421 West Market street, formerly occupied by the Louisville Trust Company, by December 1.

Announcement was made today by Joseph H. Brown, president of the National Bank of Kentucky, that the bank will occupy its new quarters on that date. Preparations for the move have been under way since the Louisville Trust Company returned to its building at Fifth and Market.

The new home of the National Bank of Kentucky is one of the finest and most up-to-date banking buildings in this section, it is declared, every modern banking facility and a number of unusual ones having been installed and serviced.

The new building gives the National Bank of Kentucky the space and convenience for its customers for which the present building at Fifth and Market has proven inadequate. The bank has been at Fifth and Main since 1913.

The new home at 421 West Market makes only three locations for the bank in its existence of almost one hundred years. The first home was the building on the south side of Main street, just east of Third, where the bank began in 1834, ninety-six years ago.

LOUISVILLE, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 12, 1933. THREE CENTS. [illegible]

BANK OF KENTUCKY IS CLOSED BY RESOLUTION OF DIRECTORS

Other Louisville Financial Institutions Are Solvent and Sound, Their Officials Assert.

STATEMENTS ARE ISSUED

First National, Citizens-Union, Liberty Bank and Trust Company, Lincoln and Others In Splendid Condition.

The following statements were made by officers of Louisville financial institutions:

ATTILIO H. BENEDRAN, president of the First National Bank and the Kentucky Title Trust Company:

I am in a position to say that neither of our banks have at any time had any connection in any way with the Caldwell Company and that these banks are in a thoroughly liquid condition.

JOHN H. BOWDEN, president of the Citizens-Union National Bank:

I am glad to say that the Citizens-Union National Bank was never in a stronger position than it is today. It is prepared to serve the community and the service at all times has. We have lived up to our motto—"Strength and Liquidity."

BENEFEE WRIGHT, president of the Fidelity & Columbia Trust Company:

The Fidelity & Columbia Trust Company deeply regrets that the affairs of their long-established associate, the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company due to their connection with the Caldwell situation in Nashville. It is most fortunate that the other local financial institutions were not in any way involved with these unfortunate interests. So far as the Fidelity & Columbia Trust Company is concerned, it has never been in a stronger condition than now.

JOHN E. HUNER, President of the Liberty Bank & Trust Company:

It is a matter of extreme regret to the entire staff of the Liberty Bank & Trust Company in view of the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company. This naturally creates an unusual situation in the business life of our city, but the [illegible] can be greatly helped by intelligent public cooperation.

It is gratifying to us to know at a time like this that we can confidently say that such a severe shock to the Liberty Bank & Trust Company is in no way its financial position than at any time in its history. Our deposits are in excess of $22,500,000.00 which is higher than ever before; our total resources are more than $31,000,000.00, and our cash reserve larger than ever in our history. We believe we have one of the strongest boards of directors of any bank in the city, including personalities of wide experience who have been successful in Louisville and Kentucky. We have men of tremendous financial responsibility, who are recognized nationally as businessmen and industrial leaders.

The Liberty Bank & Trust Company operates only in the city of Louisville, having no outside connections or affiliations. We have served the people of Louisville faithfully and continuously since 1904. Our bank has grown steadily and naturally with Louisville without the aid of a merger or consolidation. Its policy has always been based on a strict adherence to the sound principles of conservative banking. Public confidence is expressed by more than 100,000 bank accounts or the result.

We sincerely believe that the fundamental soundness of the business and financial structure of Louisville is not endangered.

Speaking for our own institution we are proud to know that the Liberty Bank and Trust Company, established upon financial strength in 1871, successfully weathered every financial storm of the history of the United States. We are grateful to be able to affirm that our assets are sufficient to insure that the Liberty Bank and Trust Company will continue to meet all of its obligations promptly and fully to depositors.

NOEL BUSH, President of the Lincoln Bank & Trust Company:

The Lincoln Bank & Trust Company has made no loans to [illegible] and has no interest of any kind with any of the officers of [illegible] Company. Our deposits are down only a little more than the average of banks in the city and our cash reserves are in excess of the requirements of the law. The Lincoln Bank & Trust Company is in no way connected with the [illegible] and is prepared to serve all of its customers as in the past.

JESSE F. STERLING, Executive Vice President of the Morris Plan Industrial Bank, 427 W. Market:

The closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company in no way affects the Morris Plan Bank. Our loans are all secured either by [illegible] or [illegible] and our deposits are represented by Calder, Stevens or Bayless [illegible]. There are 113 Morris Plan Banks throughout the country and not one penny of insured or personal has ever been lost by a depositor in any Morris Plan Bank.

RICHARD BARFIELD, Secretary of the United States Trust Company:

We are in a sound condition.

LEON F. LEWIS, president of the Jefferson Savings & Building Association:

The closing of these institutions will result in no disturbance to the Jefferson Savings & Building Association. Our association is a healthy condition with a [illegible] investment.

C. H. WILDER, president of the South Park Bank, Johnson and Main Streets:

We are in a very sound condition with a very high reserve, and are absolutely solid.

The Shelbyville Bank is one of the strongest institutions in the country and always has been.

GUSTAV FLEXNER, [illegible] of the Security Trust Company & Building Association:

I don't know how this institution could be any safer. This is a time every bank in Kentucky should be [illegible] all of them are sound banks in [illegible] condition.

LEE CRUSER, president of the Louisville Home Federal Savings & Loan Association:

Our bank is in no way affected by the closing of [illegible]

Organize Financial Affiliate of Joint Banks in Louisville

National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Co. Affiliated in Financial Unit

LOUISVILLE, KY. A banking reorganization similar to the Transamerica Corporation which gives Louisville a financial institution with assets of $135,000,000, and resources of $170,000,000, including trust estates, is announced in a statement to the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co.

The plan of reorganization gives Louisville an entirely new financial organization, the BancoKentucky Co., with capital and surplus of $50,000,000.

The directors of the BancoKentucky elected the following officers: James B. Brown, president; Richard M. Bean and John Sites, vice-presidents; W. T. Zaschmiede, secretary and treasurer.

The BancoKentucky Co. is affiliated with the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co., in a financial combination which makes Louisville its business and its industries independent in any field of operations they choose. It will enable the business men and industrial leaders of Louisville to finance their enterprises without seeking outside help, and without being subjected to the restraints that might be imposed by organizations not entirely devoted to Louisville and this section of the country.

The announcement is the most important of the kind that has ever been made in Louisville. It means not only that a financial organization has been formed with the tremendous strength indicated by the resources, but also that this unit brings to this entire section of the country financial scope and power such as have never been known before.

Assets and Resources

The BancoKentucky Co., has capital and surplus of $50,000,000.

The combined statement of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co., as of June 29, 1929, showed assets in excess of $85,000,000.

This gives Louisville's new financial organization assets of $135,000,000.

In addition, the Louisville Trust Co. has trust estates of $35,000,000 which bring the total resources of this organization to the splendid total of $170,000,000.

The board of directors of the BancoKentucky Co. is composed of the directors of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co. They are:

Organized to Meet Changing Conditions

The statement sets forth that the officers and directors of the two institutions have studied the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business in America, with a view to preparing the two banking institutions under their management to meet these changed conditions and to take early advantage of new opportunities. The conclusion unanimously reached by the officers and directors is that the two banks and the business conducted by them should be reorganized by adding to this group a third corporation "which will make the operation of these banking institutions more profitable, expand their facilities and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections."

Carrying out this decision, the statement sets forth, there has been organized under the laws of Delaware, the corporation known as the BancoKentucky Co. It has authorized capital of two million shares, having par value of $10 each. This stock will be exchanged or sold on the basis of $25 per share, which will give the company a capital of $20,000,000, and a surplus of $30,000,000, or a total capital and surplus of $50,000,000. No stock will be sold by the company at less than $25 per share. This entire capital stock is offered to the Trustees' Participation Shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co., through the trustees. The holders of these Trustees' Participation shares may exchange them into the BancoKentucky Co. shares on the basis of two shares of the BancoKentucky stock for each Participation share. In addition the depositing stockholders may subscribe for as many additional shares as they desire on the basis of $25 a share, subject to allotment if the stock is oversubscribed. This exchange must be made on or before September 19, 1929.

GUARANTY CAPITAL $90,000,000

The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York will increase its capital stock to $90,000,000, according to an announcement by William C. Potter, president. The increase of capital stock is $20,000,000 and will be offered to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 24, at $500 a share for 200,000 shares, for subscription and payment ratably in the proportion of their respective holdings. The date of the issue of the $20,000,000 increase will be July 22, payment to be made on or before that date.

Thus, if the plan is approved, each stockholder of record at the close of business on June 24 will be entitled to subscribe for one new share of stock at the price of $500 a share for each three and one half shares of stock held by him. The proposed increase will add $20,000,000 to the capital and $80,000,000 to the surplus of the company. Accordingly, upon the increase of the amount of capital stock as planned, the company will have a capital of $90,000,000 and a surplus fund of $170,000,000. Directors consider that this additional capital and surplus can be used to advantage in the business of the company.

The above increase will be considered and acted upon at a special meeting of stockholders of the Guaranty Trust Co. to be held June 24. If such increase shall be authorized, an assignable subscription warrant or warrants for a ratable proportion of such increase will be mailed to stockholders shortly after June 24.

The Guaranty Trust Co. also has declared a dividend of 5 per cent for the quarter ending June 30, 1929, payable June 29, to stockholders of record on June 14. The new shares which are to be issued as of July 22 will be entitled to participate in dividends declared subsequent to that date.

Vacation Tour Booklet Issued.—A beautiful "Vacation Tour" booklet has been prepared by and is ready for distribution at the travel bureau of San Diego Trust & Savings Bank, San Diego. The tours planned are of particular interest to those who are considering trips to foreign countries this summer.

CANADA FARMERS FARE WELL

It was the speculators and traders who were the principal victims of the recent slump in the price of wheat, the Canadian Bank of Commerce points out. The Canadian farmers, on the whole, have fared well. In its monthly letter, the bank says:

"The heaviest loss from the drop in the price of wheat was felt by speculators and traders, for the farmers had but small stocks on hand, although, of course, that part held by the wheat pool was in reality the property of farmer members. The latter, however, seem to have been protected as far as possible. Furthermore, Canadian farmers shared to a greater extent than any others in the higher prices which prevailed earlier in the season. This does not mean that comparatively favorable market conditions prior to the recent price decline placed the Canadian growers in a position where they need feel unconcerned regarding the present situation, but probably it has been made clear that they have fared better than their competitors in a year of a large world surplus of this commodity.

"The new American tariff bill, if passed in the form now proposed, will affect a list of Canadian products sold to the United States in the year ending March 31 at a value of about $90,000,000, and it would, therefore, constitute an unfavorable development for Canada, although its effect should not be as serious as when the preceding revision of duties took place, for the world market for all commodities is now much stronger. Moreover, it seems that the United States must continue for at least a year to augment its domestic supply of meats by importations, and that certain sections of that country must continue to rely on Canada for a part of their supplies of milk and cream until their own dairy herds are greatly increased, or arrangements can be made for shipments from states more distantly situated than the present Canadian sources. Time, therefore, may be a factor in Canada's favor, and this can be devoted to the establishment of new and more stable markets."

BARNUM TO PILOT BANKERS

L. Barnum, vice president, First National Bank of The Dalles, was elected president of the Oregon Bankers Association at the twenty-fourth annual convention in LaGrande June 17 and 18. Mr. Barnum succeeds John F. Daly, president of the Hibernia Commercial & Savings Bank of Portland.

Will T. Wright, president, Bank of Oregon City, was elected vice president, and Ira C. Powell, president of the First National Bank of Monmouth, was named treasurer. J. P. Cramer, Jr., of Portland, was retained as executive secretary of the association.

Members appointed on the executive committee were Sam Baker, Grants Pass; John F. Daly, Portland; Walter Hol., Portland; H. E. Coolidge, LaGrande, and Fred Callister, Albany.

Attendance at the convention was the largest in the history of the association, more than 300 bankers and their wives visiting the eastern Oregon city during the two-day conclave. An invitation was received from Medford to hold the 1930 convention in the metropolis of the Rogue River Valley, but no action will be taken on the matter until next January.

John H. Carkin, member of the state tax commission, who was one of the principal speakers this year, declared that taxation can be successfully administered only after careful study and investigation, by practical application and by education of the public. Among the major problems now before the state commission, he said, are the recently enacted excise, intangibles and income tax measures, proposals for a full-time tax commission, and centralized control of assessments.

George H. Greenwood, of Seattle, in a paper entitled "Investment of Secondary Reserves," suggested the following as a standard for operation of a $2,000,000 bank: Twenty per cent in cash, 20 per cent in quickly convertible paper, 15 per cent in bonds, of which 40 per cent should be due in less than five years, and 45 per cent in local loans.

Mr. Daly, in his annual report, urged bankers to supply the constructive leadership needed for Oregon's development.

Other speakers included Ward M. Buckles, manager of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank at Spokane, and Frank W. Simmons of New York, manager of the Clearing House Section of the American Bankers Association.

Cincinnati Banks Added To Banco Kentucky Chain

New Purchases Increase Resources to $215,000,000

Special to the Herald Tribune

CINCINNATI, Sept. 26 – The Brighton Bank and Trust Company and the Pearl Market Bank and Trust Company here have been acquired by the Banco Kentucky, in which James B. Brown, Louisville, Ky., publisher, has a controlling interest, it was learned here today.

The two banks will become a part of a Middle West chain of banks which Brown is forming, after the model of great Canadian banks which have many branches.

The two local banks will merge into what is probably to be known as the Brighton-Pearl Market Bank and Trust Company. Another Cincinnati bank is said to be under consideration in the development of the Middle West chain. Present plans call for the extension of the system in Chicago and Indianapolis. Eventually other cities in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois will be included in the chain.

The Banco, Kentucky Company will have resources in excess of $215,000,000, the largest in the Ohio Valley, with the acquisition of the institutions here. A downtown office will be opened here with ratification of the merger by the stockholders sometime next month. Stockholders of the Brighton Bank and Trust Company and the Pearl Market Bank have until October 10 to send in their stock to their institutions for purchase by the Banco Kentucky Company. Brighton stockholders will receive $900 a share and Pearl Market stockholders $750 a share.

Gustave L. Mosler, president of the Brighton Bank and Trust Company, will become president of the merged institutions. Joseph Heimers, executive vice-president of the Pearl Market Bank and Trust Company will become a vice-president. Brown and Galvin will become directors of the new bank.

The Brighton Bank and Trust Company paid 22 per cent dividends in 1928 on $500,000 capital. Its surplus and undivided profits last year amounted to $425,951.

The Pearl Market Bank recently split its shares ten for one. It had $500,000 capital, on which it paid 20 per cent dividends. Its surplus and undivided profits were $809,957.

Tears Stream Down Star's Face at Brief Funeral Services.

Boston, Jan. 17.—A simple funeral service was held today for Mrs. Helen Woodford Ruth, wife of Babe Ruth, who died in a fire in Watertown last Friday.

Ruth sat through the brief service in silence except when he burst into sobs. Tears streamed down his face when he entered the small parlor in the Woodford home and knelt beside the coffin in which the body of his wife lay.

There were scores of floral tributes many from friends and associates of the famous baseball player.

The service was read by the Rev. Richard A. Burns, curate of St. Augustines church. It lasted only ten minutes, after which the funeral portage to the old Calvary cemetery of Forest Hills started. A brief service was held at the grave.

In the procession Ruth occupied an automobile with John F. Fennell, his counsel, and two friends. Forty police officers were needed to keep back the crowd which had gathered about the house.

JURY POSTPONES NISBET HEARING

Illness of Richardson Holds Up Chieftain's

[illegible] of the failure of his attorney, Jack L. Richardson, Albert R. Nisbet, bond treasurer of the Baptist Tabernacle did not appear Thursday before the grand jury which is investigating his defalcation of $189,000 it was announced.

Mr. Richardson notified George Mayer, assistant Commonwealth's attorney that he is confined to his bed and could not appear with his client, requesting that the interview be postponed. He said however that if he is still ill Friday he will permit Nisbet to go before the jury without him.

Several days ago Mr. Mayer set Thursday as the date for Nisbet's interview after he was informed that the blind treasurer had sufficiently recovered from a nervous collapse which he suffered soon after his financial difficulties became known.

The jury began its official probe of the Nisbet case Wednesday when it began hearing testimony of the investigating committee appointed by the church. The first witness to be heard was the Rev. A. K. Knight, pastor, who is chairman of the committee. Ten members of the jury also were heard.

Officials and members of the church also will be interviewed by the grand jury when Emily Hall, stenographer for Nisbet, was among those who appeared Thursday. She testified before the jury from 10 to 1, 30 o'clock.

The grand jury is making its investigation to determine whether to return indictments in the case. It was indicated Wednesday that no indictment will be sought for an accomplice of Nisbet, because sufficient evidence toward that end has not been received. In considering the case the grand jury will view records of the church investigating committee.

The jury adjourned at 1:30 o'clock

DRY LAW BILL CAUSES WRANGLE

Senators at Odds Over Proposed Appropriation for Department.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Heated Senate debate on a proposal to make an additional $23,500,000 immediately available for prohibition enforcement drew a counter suggestion today from Senator Jones of Washington that $250,000 be provided instead for a country-wide appeal for law observance.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senator Harris Democrat, of Georgia, asked the Senate today to provide an additional $23,500,000 for prohibition enforcement, notwithstanding Secretary Mellon's suggestion that an investigation should first be made to determine how the money should be spent.

The senator said Mr. Mellon had admitted that money could be used to advantage for border patrol educational work and coast guard activities and, asked:

Why is he against this increase when he admits the money can be used? Why has he waited eight years to make recommendation as to how more money could be used?

Senator Bayley, Democrat, Kentucky contended that if it was shown to be true that Mr. Mellon had appointed the wrong sort of men to enforce the law and had refused to cooperate with the States, such facts ought to influence the Senate in determining how much weight was to be placed upon his letter refusing the additional appropriations.

You added Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, "and it will argue against giving him any money."

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, said such facts would demonstrate the futility of giving Mr. Mellon the additional funds. "Unless he can show that he will use his money better than he has, and the Volstead [illegible] Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, [illegible] commented that bootleggers are prospering throughout the country. He was asked by Senator Harris if there was enforcement in Maryland and replied:

Oh yes we have our raids in Baltimore and two upright judges who are seeking to enforce the law without fear or favor."

Was my impression, Harris said, "that when liquor could not be obtained in the District of Columbia the person wanting it found no difficulty in obtaining it over the line in Maryland."

Well there are bootleggers in Maryland, Bruce blamed back, but nevertheless I know they are prospering all over the country.

Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, said the debate had developed that enormous quantities of liquor have been vended in Pennsylvania and that law enforcement up to this date has been a farce.

In that farce he said "we have spent $200,000,000 and we are spending $30,000,000 directly and indirectly yearly. That which Pennsylvania cannot do the United States likely cannot do."

The industrial expansion which the city is enjoying has made necessary banking facilities that will enable Louisville to compete on equal terms with any other city in the industrial area. The financial strength that is given Louisville by this new banking organization makes the city second to none [illegible]

The [illegible] position of Louisville, at the strategic point on the trade route between North and South, the abundant natural resources of Kentucky and the remarkable industrial activity that has developed in recent years makes Louisville the capital of an industrial empire that is not surpassed by any other section of the United States. The assurance of abundant financial facilities that is afforded by the National Bank of Kentucky with its $85,000,000 resources gives Louisville everything that is necessary for continued industrial and business expansion.

Statement of Merger

The statement setting forth the merger plan issued after meetings Wednesday is as follows:

Mr. John Stites, president of the Louisville Trust Company; Mr. Richard Bean, president of the Louisville National Bank and Trust Company, and James B. Breen, president of the National Bank of Kentucky, announce the proposed merger of the Louisville National Bank and Trust Company with the Louisville Trust Company. Details are now being worked out by the directors and officers of the two institutions, and the plan will be submitted to the stockholders for their approval.

The name of the Louisville Trust Company will be retained for the new institution. This is in line with the trend all over the country, which shows the large commercial banks are taking on names of trust companies because under that style they can group not only the trust business, but commercial and [illegible] patrons of all three institutions the increased convenience of modern facilities and the use of the seven branch banks throughout the city. Furthermore it offers to all three groups of depositors the varied kinds of service—trust banking, investment, insurance, real estate, safety vaults etc.

The executive personnel for the Louisville Trust Company will consist of John Joh. Stites as chairman of the board, Mr. Richard Bean, president; Mr. Nicholas [illegible] executive vice president, Ben J. Mayfield, vice president, and the titles of the officials of both institutions will remain as they are at present.

The new company will have an investment in capital and surplus of about $3,500,000 and deposits of about $10,000,000.

The new trust company and the National Bank of Kentucky will be under separate management but their stocks will be trusteed thus putting under joint ownership the National Bank of Kentucky and the newly merged institution. The consolidated statement of these two institutions will show capital and surplus of approximately $10,500,000 deposits of more than $70,000,000 and total resources $85,000,000. In addition to these figures estates amounting to more than $35,000,000 are held in trust.

The directorate of the new company is composed of outstanding business and professional men whose counsel and cooperation will always be available to the institution and its patrons.

This association of three strong financial institutions is the answer made by Louisville to the challenge of the times. For as industry has continued to assume [illegible] proportions [illegible] has been necessary to [illegible] capital in order to serve better those industries. Having these institutions Louisville is in a position to compete financially with any Southern city.

"Our civic campaign, 'Advertising Louisville,' is carrying our city message all over the country and the eyes of manufacturers seeking better facilities are turned this way. Our Industrial Foundation—ever on the alert for opportunities—is fostering these new enterprises in a splendid manner.

NEGRO ARRESTED IN FUR ROBBERY

$3,000 Theft Laid to "Dollar Bill" Williams; Loot Recovered.

The $3,000 robbery of the fur store of S Goodman & Sons, 227 East Market street, Tuesday night was completely solved Thursday, the robber in jail and the furs returned, according to police.

Robert Williams, alias "Dollar Bill," 30 Negro, 339 Pearl street, has confessed the robbery police said. Williams was arrested Wednesday night at Preston and Liberty streets by Capt. George Ratcliffe, Lieut. Oscar Doerting and Patrolman Estill Hack.

Immediately afterward the furs were recovered in a vacant house at the rear of 249 East Market street. The loot included 580 weasel pelts, 80 red fox and 100 raccon pelts.

The robber had broken through three doors to enter the fur store. It was discovered Wednesday morning. He had selected the best furs.

Leonard Goodman, president of the company, announced that a $300 reward will be divided between the investing officers.

Captain Ratcliffe said the arrest of Williams and the subsequent recovery of the furs was due primarily to the keen eyes of one of his men. The officer passed the Negro on the street and noticed there was some fur on his coat. The Negro was stopped and the fur carefully pulled from his coat and compared with some fur similar to that which was stolen at the store. Police found that the fur matched the stolen articles and Williams was arrested.

Police also charged Williams with violation of Kentucky Statute 1130, which concerns habitual criminals. If convicted on the charge the Negro will be given a life term in the penitentiary.

Williams, according to police records, has served two terms in prison. He was sent up on July 8, 1915, and again on August 12, 1921.

BABE RUTH SOBS AT WIFE'S RITES

District Attorney Robert T. Buttorff and State Fire Marshal George C. Neal in statements set at rest any suspicion that Mrs. Ruth's death last Friday night in a fire at the home in Watertown, Dr. Edward M. Kinder, Sharon, dentist, was not accidental.

Mrs. Ruth had been known to neighbors as Mrs. Helen Kinder for more than a year.

District Attorney Buttorff said a second autopsy conducted by Medical Examiner George B. Magrath of Middlesex county had confirmed the verdict of a first that Mrs. Ruth's death was caused by fire.

Fire Held Accident

The fire is said to have been established as accidental by the state fire marshal's office. There was no evidence of arson, the case is closed so far as this office is concerned, said I hope for the sake of the unfortunate woman, who cannot speak for herself that it is closed as far as anyone else is concerned.

Mrs. Ruth's family, the Wadfords, immediately responded to Buttorff's request that the case be allowed to rest. They said their counsel, Judge Cunningham, that the inquest will be resumed so far as the family of Mr. Ruth is concerned.

State Fire Marshal Neal declared that experts investigating the origin of the fire had reported to him that it probably had been caused by overheating of a receptacle in the partition of the first floor.

Legal Action Scouted

Rumors that the Wadfords would use legal action against Ruth for Mrs. Ruth's estate and for the custody of Dorothy were set at rest by Municipal Judge Cunningham who declared there is no breach between the Wadfords and the Ruths and none is expected.

Cunningham said however there appeared to be sound reason to believe that Dorothy was not the child of the Ruths and was neither the child of the Wadfords. He said that was what the sound feature was but declared the Wadfords would take no part in it as it was proved that she was not the Ruth child. He added this did not mean any attempt would be made to adopt the child.

Dorothy's existence first became known to friends of both couples after Mr. and Mrs. Ruth said she was born. It was later reported the couple had taken her from an orphanage in Brooklyn, N. Y.

HOOVER SETS MONDAY FOR FLORIDA TRIP

Speech to Be Drafted

After that Mr. Hoover will get to work on the inaugural address which he expects to have in final form before he sets out on the return trip to the national capital. This would make it possible for copies of the speech to be mailed to all newspapers in ample time for delivery before March 4.

After nine days of continuous rounds of conferences with Republican party leaders Mr. Hoover decided today to take a day off to devote to cleaning up his personal correspondence which has accumulated since his return from Central and South America.

While his office force has taken care of a great volume of the general mail, the President-elect likes to give his personal attention to a great deal of the correspondence that comes to his office and he will spend the greater part of the day on this.

The conferences with leaders will be resumed tomorrow and carried on through Saturday by which time Mr. Hoover hopes to complete the task of developing views on Cabinet appointments and a variety of other subjects so that he will be left free to devote the time in Florida almost entirely to the preparation of the inaugural address.

Extra Session Limited

Yesterday was perhaps the most strenuous day the next President had had since his return to the national capital. He talked with nearly a score of members of the House and Senate as well as with a number of others, and left late in the afternoon for Hialeah.

Out of the conferences came the definite word that proposals for veterans developments will await the regular session of the Seventy-first Congress late in the year with the extra session limited to farm relief and tariff revision and such urgent matters as appropriations to defray the expenses of the special commission Mr. Hoover intends to appoint to study the whole subject of prohibition enforcement.

Among other legislative matters to which Mr. Hoover is giving preliminary study are veterans relief, the army and navy employment stabilization, Indians reclamation, water power developments such as the Great Lakes to the Gulf and the Atlantic projects, and many others. He probably will submit most of these in his first annual message to Congress next December.

Jardine Calls

While Mr. Hoover had made no engagements for today he had a breakfast conference with Secretary Jardine and received a few callers at his headquarters. Among them were Senator Shortridge of California who said he had urged that the special session of Congress be called for April 1 if the House ways and means committee, behind new tariff revision measure ready by that time.

While no statement was forthcoming it was assumed that the President-elect and the secretary of agriculture talked about farm relief among other subjects. Mr. Hoover now has his own ideas for elimination of the "dumping" evil, and Postmaster General Work with whom he hopes to have a conference before he leaves for Florida.

Since the return of the next President to Washington there have been suggestions in some circles that Secretary might be reappointed to his present post. A number of others also

BOOTH OUSTED; FIGHT PRESAGED

Commissioner Hay as president of the council this morning moved a formal notice of the council's decision by a vote of 56 to 8 to relieve the general of his command but he gave no intimation of what further steps would be taken.

Legal Action Planned.

One of the army officials at the hotel where Evangeline Booth, American commander and leader of the "reform" movement is making her headquarters said the council will meet tomorrow to elect a new commander and to take legal steps, if necessary, to obtain possession of the army's huge property now vested personally in Bramwell Booth.

During the morning a notice signed by the Salvation Army solicitors was displayed outside international headquarters. It touched on the question of authority in the army during the period between the deposition of General Booth and the selection of his successor. The notice read:

"During the interval between the vacation of office by any general of the Salvation Army and the appointment of his successor, the chief-of-staff is authorized and empowered under the constitutional deeds of the Salvation army to exercise with certain specific limitations all powers and discretions pertaining to the generalship."

The statement was signed by Ranger Burton and Frost, the army's solicitors.

General Frankun Fight

Now that the high council has come to its decision regarding General Booth, interest is centering on what the general's next move will be. As quoted today by the Daily Mail, the general apparently will carry the fight for command to the courts, the newspaper quoting him as saying:

"I haven't much money but I will spend what I have in defending my position.

Peace in the prolonged struggle however must be in sight to the view of well informed circles within the army.

While nothing authoritative has come from the deposed general, feeling was gaining ground today that he and his family eventually would acquiesce to the council's desire that he retire, expressed by such a large majority last night.

Discussing the question of possession of the army's huge properties an official at the American headquarters said:

The position is that General Booth as one trustee for the Army has vested in him properties in England, France and Australia amounting to £2,000,000 and it is necessary that he should execute a deed to divest himself of that trust. If unfortunately the general should refuse to do this it will place upon the council the onus of initiating proceedings in the high court to settle the matter. This is bound to create a very painful position.

FALLS REPORT STIRS PROTEST

Senate Enters Fight

The case involving the application of the Cumberland Electric Power Company for permission to develop the project has been reflected in the Senate which yesterday adopted a resolution by Senator Nye of North Dakota directing the power commission to give the Senate all protests received by it against the application.

The resolution also called on commission to submit protests against Secretary Wait sitting as a member of the commission in considering the Kentucky case because of his former stockholdings in the Samuel Insull utility enterprises. The secretaries of war interior and agriculture make up the power commission.

The letter from Mrs. Nelson quoted from the Merrill report statements such as "Upon the Falls of the Cumberland which are alleged to have great scenic value and it is a reasonable demand since industrial development is their only hope," and that "Tourists in search of scenic beauty would have scenes of other equally attractive places to visit as the Cumberland Falls were to be seriously injured." The letter asserted in protest that "the reaching of opinions and conclusions are matters only for the commission itself."

Scenic Value Championed

Concerning the scenic value of the falls the letter added among statements of opposition to the project had come from David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Stanford University, Irving Cobb, the writer and Stephen T. Mather former director of the National Park Service.

The Merrill report was described as giving the impression that circulars sent out in opposition to the project contained information which was not correct.

The national conference on State parks wishes to call to the attention of the federal power commission the fact that its circulars were submitted to the executive secretary of the commission for criticism before publication, and that whenever any statement in these circulars was considered by him not to be entirely correct, it was modified," the letter said.

The Cumberland Falls project, the letter declares, will not assist in flood control and says the Merrill report does not state how many acre feet of water will be stored beyond the proposed dam.

Tourist Traffic Cited.

Offering to submit further statements to prove that tourists would not have other equally attractive places to visit, the Nelson letter insists that artificial regulation of the

INDIANA BANKERS WITS COAL COMMISSION BILL

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States appeared today before the Senate interstate commerce committee in opposition to the bill to stabilize the bituminous coal industry.

The delegation included Fulton M. McWhirter president of the Peoples State Bank of Indianapolis, and Charles F. Conn, president of the Aluminum Fertilizer Works, Chicago.

When McWhirter began reading a statement favoring the bill Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, asked him if the Chamber of Commerce had any constructive suggestions to offer to solve the bituminous problem. McWhirter said the chamber had none, that the committee was merely appearing in opposition to the bill.

Guy W. Dyer, professor of economics of Vanderbilt University, also opposed the bill. In answer to Senator Wheeler he said he "was asked to come by the National Coal Association."

"Were you paid to do so?" Wheeler asked.

"I am being paid my expenses and a moderate amount for my time," the professor replied.

DRY AGENTS CONDUCT SCHOOL IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, Jan. 17. (AP)—After listening to lectures for several days on how prohibition agents function, fifty students at the local prohibition school today were given some laboratory work.

"We will now show you how we conduct raids," the teacher said.

Eagerly the students with notebooks and pencils in hand followed after the supervisory agents who led them to five alleged liquor establishments which were raided. Five arrests were made.

While the raids were being conducted the students made copious notes for future reference when they begin enforcing the prohibition law.

LOCAL CHAPTER DINES BANKERS

Delegates to American Institute Meeting Royally Entertained.

A dream of twenty-eight years ago in the interest of more education and development in banking has become a great realization with sixty-five thousand members and with chapters scattered all over this vast country, Frank M. Totten, president of the American Institute of Banking told 500 members of the Louisville chapter at a banquet followed by a dance in the gold room of the Kentucky Hotel, Wednesday night.

President Totten, one of a dozen or more distinguished visitors and officers of the American Institute, is with the Chase National Bank of New York City and he, Dr. Harold Stonier, educational director of New York City and Judge Huston Quin, former mayor of Louisville were chief speakers at the third annual banquet of the local chapter, addressing executives, employes of Louisville banks, members of the institute and out of town delegates and friends. President Totten urged that the big family get better acquainted and carry forward the good work that has been accomplished in elevating the plane and making more scientific year by year the business of banking.

Dr. Stonier explained the functions of the banking institute and stressed the accomplishments of its educational department. He praised the work that has been done by the Louisville chapter within the past three years and declared the local organization a credit not only to Louisville but to a chapter five times as large as the one here.

Col. Richard H. Stout was master of ceremonies and introduced the speakers while Col. William M. Dorr and Reagh Watters, joint chairmen, circulated through the assemblage from time to time and helped make everybody happy.

Whistler's Jug Band paraded among the tables for half an hour rendering song selections accompanied by vaudeville antics in costume and a. Patty Leonard, "The Kentucky Nightingale" and others had been treated with encores. Rockliffe Moore, Herald-Post staff artist, and "successor" to Thurston, entertained at magic with card tricks delusions and illusions until the big ballroom was turned over to the dancers.

A Herald-Post special edition bearing greetings and presenting a front page of pictures of distinguished visiting guests present was circulated as the evening festivities began, and made a big hit. There was animation throughout the entire evening and praise from the out-of-town speakers as the cordial Kentucky reception.

Individual flower trophies were distributed among the ladies, every inch of the gold ballroom was occupied with filled tables, and the menu was elaborate and efficiently served. Name cards were at each plate and pink and red roses were provided with pins for the men.

Judge Quin was in his happiest mood and attended wholehearted welcome to the distinguished guests. The Louisville Chapter continued its banner season Thursday.

NORTHCOTT CONDUCTS OWN MURDER DEFENSE

Riverside, Cal., Jan. 17. (AP)—Gordon Stewart Northcott, 22, was cast in the double role of defendant and defense attorney today in his trial here on charges of murdering three small boys. He took over the reins of his own defense yesterday after a long argument with his counsel and against the advice of Judge George R. Freeman.

The slender-eyed youth has attorneys argue when Northcott who claims to be a correspondence course student of law insisted on questioning Stanford Clark, 10, his nephew and principal accuser.

At first terrorized by the necessity of submitting to the question of his uncle, Clark gained confidence and went on his story in the cross examination which frequently was rambling. Although Northcott's questions failed to shake his nephew, the defendant expressed himself as well pleased with the day's events.

The judges were confronted with the largest number of entries ever gathered together in any similar contest held here. It was necessary, because of the excellence of the entire group of entries, to arrive at a selection of the best by a process of careful elimination. The contest was saddled by a sub-committee of the Real Estate Board composed of J. Edward Melbrough, chairman; Mr. J. E. Reising and Mrs. E. E. Brisker.

Their leader covered Bowlesman. Three of the others handled the three men and the secretary into a room from where they bound and gagged them, and then tied them all together.

Meanwhile the leader and one other bandit had removed their hats to pose as clerks. They took jewelry from the show cases and one compartment of the safe.

Police said it was the largest New York holdup since Gerald Chapman and Dutch Anderson staged their million dollar mail robbery a number of years ago. The biggest theft credited to the Richard Reese Whittemore gang was the stealing of diamonds valued at $170,000 in Forty-eighth street just off Fifth avenue about three years ago.

Legal Action Scouted

Rumors that the Woodfords would take legal action against Ruth for Mrs. Ruth's estate and for the adoption of Dorothy were met at first by Hannigan, who declared there is no breach between the Woodfords and the Ruths and none is expected.

Hannigan said however there appeared to be sound reason to believe that Dorothy was not the child of the Babe and his wife either by birth or adoption. He would not say what the sound reason was but declared the Woodfords would like to care for Dorothy if it was proved that she was not the Ruth child. He added they did not regard any attempt would be made to adopt the child.

"Dorothy's existence first became known to friends sixteen months after Mr. and Mrs. Ruth said she was born. It was later reported the couple had taken her from an orphanage in Brooklyn, N. Y.

CHAMBERLAIN REFORMS

Extra Session Limited

Yesterday was perhaps the most strenuous day the next President had had since his return to the national capital. He talked with nearly a score of members of the House and Senate as well as with them in official and private life.

Out of the conferences came the definite word that proposals for veterans developments will await the regular session of the Seventy first Congress late in the year with the special session limited to farm relief and tariff revision and such urgent matters as appropriations to defray the expenses of the special commission Mr. Hoover intends to appoint to study the whole subject of prohibition enforcement.

Among other legislative matters to which Mr. Hoover is giving preliminary study are veterans relief the army still navy employment stabilization Indian reclamation, water ways development dam at the Great Lakes to the Gulf and the Atlantic projects and many others. He probably will put most of these in his first annual message to Congress next December 4.

Jardine Calls

While Mr. Hoover had made no arrangements for today he had a breakfast conference with Secretary Jardine and received a few callers at his headquarters. Among them were Senator Shortridge of California who said he had urged that the special session of Congress be called for April 1. If the House ways and means committee could have a tariff revision measure ready by that time.

While no statement was forthcoming it was assumed that the President-elect and the secretary of agriculture talked about farm relief among other subjects. Mr. Hoover now has about all the members of the Coolidge cabinet except Postmaster General New with whom he hopes to have a conference before he leaves for Florida.

Since the return of the next President to Washington there have been suggestions in some quarters that Jardine might be reappointed to his present post. A number of others also have been recommended for the cabinet portfolio.

Resolution Introduced

The resolution introduced this morning by Wilson to submit protests against Secretary West sitting as a member of the commission in considering the Kentucky case because of his former stockholdings in the Samuel Insull utility enterprises. The secretaries of war interior and agriculture make up the power commission.

The letter from Mrs. Nelson quoted from the Merrill report statements such as "Upon the Falls of the Cumberland which are alleged to have great scenic value" and "It is a reasonable demand since industrial development is their only hope," and that "Tourists in search of scenic beauty would have dozens of other equally attractive places to visit, even if the Cumberland Falls were to be seriously injured." The letter asserted in protest that the reaching of opinions and conclusions are matters only for the commission itself.

Scenic Value Championed.

Concerning the scenic value of the falls the letter added strong statements of opposition to the project had come from David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Stanford University, Irving Cobb the writer and Stephen T. Mather, former director of the National Park Service.

The Merrill report was described as giving the impression that circulars sent out in opposition to the project contained information which was incorrect.

"The national conference on State parks wishes to call to the attention of the federal power commission the fact that its circulars were submitted to the executive secretary of the commission for criticism before publication and that whenever any statement in these circulars was considered by him not to be entirely correct, it was modified," the letter said.

The Cumberland Falls project, the letter declares, will not assist in flood control and says the Merrill report that does not state how many acre feet of water will be stored beyond the proposed dam.

Tourist Traffic Cited.

Offering to submit further statements to prove that tourists would not "flock" to the really attractive places to visit, the Nelson letter insists that artificial regulation of the flow over the falls is something which can be seen in many places in the country and that completion of the project would place a ruinous contingency constantly along the banks of water which one week might be a few feet away from the front porches and the next week might be organized from the porches by a expanse of slimy rocks or muddy flats.

In the report much is said about the State of Kentucky wanting to create a park through the aid of the power interests," the letter concludes. "But in order to give the entire pro and con of this matter attention must be called to the fact that nowhere in the report is mention made of the magnificent offer of ex-Senator Coleman du Pont, a former Kentuckian who as your commission knows from the statement made by his representative at the hearing on this matter offered to donate $250,000 or more—who ever is necessary in order to make a real State park of Cumberland Falls and Cumberland Falls not regulated in a way and of a surrounding region not marred by a lake with a fluctuating water level of from twenty-five to fifty feet.

INDIANA BANKER HITS COAL COMMISSION BILL

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States appeared today before the Senate interstate commerce committee in opposition to the bill to stabilize the bituminous coal industry.

The delegation included Felix M. McWhirter president of the Peoples State Bank of Indianapolis, and Charles F. Clark, president of the Armour Fertilizer Works, Chicago.

When McWhirter began reading a statement opposing the bill, Senator Wheeler Democrat, Montana, asked him if the Chamber of Commerce had any constructive suggestions" to offer to solve the bituminous problem. McWhirter said the chamber had none, that the committee was merely appearing in opposition to the bill.

In answer to Senator Wheeler he said he "was asked to come by the National Coal Association."

"Were you paid to do so?" Wheeler asked.

"I am being paid my expenses and a moderate amount for my time," the professor replied.

London, Jan. 17 (AP)—W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, addressing a meeting of Whitechurch, Salop, last night, defended the course pursued by Great Britain in the recent naval armament negotiations with France and denied there was any secret pact behind the scenes.

The first lord said, "there is in America extraordinary suspicion attached to any offer we may make them.

We don't resent any claim they may make for their own defense and there is no reason why they should not have a navy second to none in the world. We say we claim the same privilege for we must protect this island from starvation."

AFGHANS CROWN THIRD MONARCH

He hails from the North of Kabul and is a member of the Pejak tribe which speaks Persian. A few years ago he was in the Afghan army. Whether he was discharged or deserted is not known but in some way he became outlawed and since has been ranging the hills with a comparatively few followers.

That Habibullah profited from his military experience was shown by the way he shooed down on Kabul and routed Amanullah's foreign trained troops. It was believed first that Habibullah only wanted to loot the city and return to the hills but later reports indicated he had political ambitions and that the Afghan throne itself was his goal.

Another aspect of the situation is that Habibullah does not appear to have started the recent trouble in the country but to have jumped in after the Shinwari tribes in Southern Afghanistan revolted. Amanullah succeeded in pacifying the Southerners but other malcontents accepting the king's western reforms rallied around Habibullah, known to Bacha Sakao or the "Water Boy."

NORTHCOTT CONDUCTS OWN MURDER DEFENSE

Riverside, Cal., Jan. 17 (AP)—Gordon Stewart Northcott, 22, was cast in the double role of defendant and defense attorney today in his trial here on charges of murdering three small boys. He took over the reins of his own defense yesterday after a long argument with his counsel, and against the advice of Judge George H. Freeman.

The showdown with his attorney came when Northcott, who claims to have a correspondence course knowledge of law, insisted on questioning Sanford Clark, 15, his nephew and principal accuser.

At first terrorized by the necessity of submitting to the question of his uncle, Clark gained confidence and fought back in the cross examination which frequently was rambling. Although Northcott's questions failed to shake his nephew, the defendant expressed himself as well pleased with the day's events.

Many Groups Participate In Day's Rise In Stock Prices

GAINS RUN 2 TO 18 POINTS; MONEY EASIER

Chile, St. Joseph Lead U. S. Steel, Auto Life, Others Hit New Peaks.

New York, Jan. 17. (AP)—Speculators for the advance assumed control of the price movement in today's market bringing forward new leaders in the steel, rail, copper and motor groups. Scores of issues were marked up 2 to nearly 18 points with new high records established by such popular shares as United States Steel common, Chile Copper and Electric Auto Lite.

American International Montgomery Ward, Murray Corporation, Liquid Carbonic and Columbia Graphophone were among many stocks that rose vigorously in the final hour, stimulated by a further drop in the call money rate to 6 per cent. Johns-Manville got into the 200 class again and St. Joseph Lead and By Products Coke sold at 90½, and 120¾, respectively. The closing was firm. Sales approximated 4,150,000 shares.

The strong resistance shown by the shrewd leaders around the low prices of December, coupled with easier credit conditions, helped to revive bullish confidence, and led to active short covering. Call money opened at 8 per cent, and dropped to 6 as the mid-month payments flowed back to the banks. The prospect of an increase in Federal Reserve brokers loans tended to restrict the volume of trading.

There was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Stockholders of the American International Corporation ratified the 3-for-1 stock split-up proposed by directors, and the Gulf States Steel directors voted to increase the amount of common stock outstanding from 125,000 to 300,000 shares and to issue the new stock at $90 a share to common and preferred stockholders in the ratio of one new share for each two now held.

Non-ferrous metal shares changed hands in large volume at advancing prices. Chile Copper and St. Joseph Lead each ran up more than 7 points to new high levels at 83¾ and 78, respectively. Greene Cananea Copper, Calumet and Arizona, Cerro de Pasco and Howe Sound sold 4 or more points above yesterday's final quotations, and Anaconda, Kennecott and several others advanced 2 to 3 points.

U. S. Steel common ran into some profit-taking after setting a new peak price at 173¾. Radio rose 10 points to 370 and Electric Auto Lite 9 to 192. Chrysler, Reality General Electric, Packard Motors, Commercial Solvents, Johns Manville, Peoples Gas, New York Central and Curtiss sold 5 to 10 points higher.

Wright Aeronautical ran up more than 6 points to 182, and then fell back to 177. Allied Chemical fell back 3 points and Eisenlohr, Westerfield, International Telephone, Otis Elevator and American Sugar Refining sold down 2 points or more.

GULF STATES STEEL TO CHANGE CAPITAL

New York, Jan. 17. (AP)—Directors of the Gulf States Steel Corporation of Birmingham, Ala., today proposed changing the par value of the common stock from $100 to no par and increasing the authorized amount from 125,000 to 300,000 shares, or if allowable, even at a meeting February 25 approving the proposal. One new share will be offered at $90 a share to holders of each new share which they subscribe for, or proposed here.

Net income for the year ended December 31 was $6,000,000, or $48 a share, after $1,200,000 preferred dividends, equal to $7.60 a share on 337,500 shares of common stock.

COTTON

New York, Jan. 17. (AP) The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 10 points on covering by shorts and commission house buying prompted by the absolute lack of selling pressure. The demand was conservative in spots, while there seemed to be a little more cotton for sale around 16.90 for March and May deliveries and prices eased off 6 or 7 points in reaction to liquidation. Reports of steady Southern spot markets also favored the reports from Lancashire centers generally trade seemed to be somewhat burned during the decline however and the market held steady at the end of the half hour at 16.90 to 17.00 prices showing general scattered closing quotations.

Private cables reported continental buying in Liverpool and there was also buying that came with a cable from Bombay and from India and on active demand from China.

Last Minute Flashes From Stock Market

By S. W. GRATZER.

Final prices in today's stock market were nearly the best. In many instances up-top quotations of the day prevailed as trading ended. Indications that the money situation was easier was seen in the marking down of call loan rates from the renewal level of 8 per cent, to 7 and finally 6 per cent, despite the usual mid-month strain on credit. Monetary requirements evidently had been taken care of without trouble and the outlook was held to be for easier conditions in credit. Stock trend to a new record high of 173¾ in an outburst of trading this morning, held above 171 in later transactions and wound up strong at 172¾.

A stock dividend is expected at the January 29 meeting. Electric Auto added to general gains with a quick move to 188 in the last few minutes, up 8 points from the opening and a new high. The company will start delivery February 1 of 1,000,000 generators to the Ford Motor Company during 1929. General Motors also rose sharply in the last few minutes, closing at 199. Standard Oil of New York attained top for the day at 44¾ and Johns-Manville at 201, up nearly 10 points for the day. Nickel, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Can, Allied Chemical, Packard, Columbia Gas, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, Studebaker, Murray Body and Hupp were other strong spots at the closing hour. Hupp finished at the top quotation of the day of 80¾, following a 5,000-share lot at 80¾.

Mengel Company sold off gradually after opening at 33 and closed at 31¾. Louisville Gas and Electric of Delaware "A" and Louisville Gas were backward, closing at 37½. Standard Sanitary finished at 95¼ and American Radiator at 206. They are beginning to move in unison, indicating the reported four Sanitary for one Radiator merger terms are about correct.

Curtiss Flying Service closed at 31¼ on the Curb. North American closed at 50¾, finishing at 50¾. Universal closed at 75. Aviation Fisher Tobacco closed at 38½. U. S. Foil 37½ and Vanadium 182¾. Standard Oil of Kentucky new, which has been much stronger lately, closed at 43¾.

The cut in the call money rate, coming on the day the weekly brokers loans figures will be announced after the close, was hailed as a welcome sign of ease in the money market. The loans figures to be announced this afternoon are expected to show a reduction. A slight increase, however, would not be very disturbing to the market.

American Radiator and Standard Sanitary were comparatively quiet. Sanitary was ranging around 90 and Radiator around 205 to 206.

Heavy trading was taking place in Standard Oil of New York which was moving upward. One block of 10,500 shares appeared on the ticker tape at 44 after which the quotation moved above that level, up more than 2 points from the opening.

Penn Ohio Edison common reached a new maximum price of 71¾ on the New York Curb.

BANK KENTUCKY 410

National Bank of Kentucky sold at 410 in the local Stock Exchange at noon today, up ten points from the price at which stock changed hands at the local exchange session an hour earlier.

Trading was on a large scale today in the first half hour the turnover was 888,600 shares against 654,500 shares in that period yesterday. By noon the total reached 1,823,700 shares.

Standard Oil of Indiana opened at 100 on the New York Curb and fell back to 99¾, later on it became more evident that the contest for control between Mr. Rockefeller and Stewart would not be accompanied by a buying campaign in the open market.

Stocks ex-dividend today included Columbian Carbon, $1 and 25 cents extra payable February 1. Gold Dust, 62½ cents, payable February 1. Reading Company, $1, payable February 15. Vick Chemical, $1, payable February 1. Stocks to be on dividend tomorrow and the dates payable include the following. American Machine and Foundry, $1 February 1; Columbia Gas and Electric, $1.25, February 15; Liquid Carbonic, $1, and 50 cents extra, February 1; Liquid Carbonic, $2 per cent stock distribution.

BANK KENTUCKY SOARS 40 POINTS

Sells at 400 on Local Exchange; Louisville National Jumps 95 Points to 400 Bid.

National Bank of Kentucky jumped 40 points to 400 at today's session of the Louisville Stock Exchange and Louisville National Bank and Trust Company into the 400. The rise of the two issues was the result of the merger plans announced last night and which are believed to offer financial circles to provide for a share-for-share exchange in taking the Louisville National Bank and Trust Company to National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville Trust organization.

At the opening of the three sessions of the exchange today, 100 shares of National Bank of Kentucky was offered at 400. A few minutes later it sold and 400 was bid for ten more. The market position of United States Steel was illustrated on the exchange yesterday when a trading operation doubled a call on "options" on a block of the stock, good for thirty days, after points above the market price of the time. The operator found by would not locate such "options," whereas normally it would have been available almost immediately. Today's high of 179¾, was the highest for all time, exceeding the former top mark of 178¾ established Monday, which in turn broke the November-Monday mark of 177¾ set down to 1917.

Considerable unrequited is heard on Steel. Among other things, it is said the biggest speculative plum of the market has not materialized such as a massive leader of the Iron market. Early opinion has been precipitated on the expectation that this year will prove highly profitable for the entire industry and that Steel's net earnings per share may rise to the highest level since the war. Current optimism over Steel is in anticipation of official disclosures of its earnings at the forthcoming directors' meeting January 19, which also holds possibility of a special distribution to stockholders.

Arthur Lipper's wire to W. L. Lyons & Company today said: "The market, in rallying under the general load-raising of the last and most favored market leader United States Steel. The spectacular advance in steel is due to consolidated general absorption and in the late session yesterday large buying orders with difficulty. It would be very easy for directors of the steel corporation to declare a substantial stock dividend. Among the junior stocks, Republic Iron and Steel, Colorado Fuel and Iron and Otis Steel are favored. The rails are quite well, and I think intensive speculative demand for these securities may follow later."

F. J. Haynes, former president of Dodge Brothers, has been elected president of Hudson Motors.

Gulf States Steel called a special meeting of stockholders for February 26 to vote a change in the par value of the shares from $100 each to no par and increase authorized common to 500,000 shares from 350,000. Net income for 1926 was $954,743 against $784,000 in 1925.

A STATEMENT FROM THE PRESIDENTS

FOR almost a century the National Bank of Kentucky has met the changing conditions of business in this community and state, weathering all depressions and constantly forging ahead in a way that has attracted the attention of bankers and business men throughout the country. This oldest and largest bank in Kentucky has moved forward to a place of distinction in the business and financial circles of this section.

The history of The Louisville Trust Company is no less commendable. For 45 years this company has served the public in various fiduciary capacities and today occupies a very enviable reputation for trust service. As the successor of the Louisville National Bank & Trust Company, the (new) Louisville Trust Company acquires a commercial banking business of 62 years standing which gives the Trust Company a complete unit of financial service embracing all phases of banking and all trust company facilities.

By joining our interests in the common ownership of these old institutions, the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, we are able to offer an unquestioned stability of service to banks, business firms, and individuals, backed by our bulwark of resources and experience.

It is with the hope of increasing the scope of our usefulness generally and with the realization that present times, to say nothing of the future, require larger and stronger units in the financial world, that we are uniting. Combining our interests in one of the largest financial institutions of this section of the South, we pledge the same careful, courteous service to the public that each of these institutions has for so many years extended to its friends and customers.

Signed

JAMES B. BROWN, President
National Bank of Kentucky.

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COMPANY

THE LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY
LOUISVILLE, KY.

July 28, 1929.

To our Stockholders:

Quite a number of our friends are asking questions which doubtless have occurred to others, and we are glad to give this information generally.

(1) Will the stock of The BancoKentucky Company be taxable? No. While it is a Delaware corporation, practically all of its assets will be in Kentucky and that exempts it from taxation.

(2) Is there any income tax when we transfer our Trustees Certificates into the stock of the BancoKentucky Company? No. They are allied institutions and you are not "taking" any profits, simply changing the form of your securities.

(3) May we include in our own subscription some of the BancoKentucky stock for our friends? It is our intention to place this with the stockholders of the banks, but if, in your opinion, the person wanting some of the stock would make us a desirable stockholder who can be helpful to the banks in the years to come, then there is no objection to your including a reasonable number of shares for him in the subscription you make.

(4) When will we have to pay for this new stock? On the call of the company - not before September 20.

(5) Will the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company lend on the stock of the BancoKentucky Company?

Exhibit 27

Yes; just as we lend on any other listed securities.

Q (6) What dividends will be paid by the BancoKentucky Company? Apparently nearly all of our stockholders are going to exchange their bank stock, so the new company will certainly receive the dividends paid by the banks - 16%. On the balance of its capital, the new company is expected to earn even greater profits. We cannot say definitely what dividends will be paid, but we would not have started this company had we not thought it would make excellent profits, so we feel reasonably secure in assuring you that the dividends will not be decreased and they may be increased.

Q (7) Does the "double liability" apply to BancoKentucky stock as it does to stock in the banks? No; one of the advantages of transferring your bank stock for BancoKentucky Company stock is that you are relieved of the double liability clause which applies under the Kentucky law.

If you have not already sent in your stock for transfer, together with your subscription to the new stock, let us urge you to attend to it without delay because, naturally, we are anxious to get the company started at the earliest possible date.

The Officers of both banks will be glad to answer any other questions that occur to our stockholders.

Yours very truly,

EXH. PLAI. No. 28

Dear Mr. Brown:

Will you please check me up on these figures?

1. As I understand it, you have evolved a plan for the Kentucky Company to own all the stock of the two banks, 575,000 shares.

2. The Kentucky Company will be organized with an authorized capital of $20,000,000.00, represented by 2,000,000 shares.

3. You will suggest to the stockholders that they exchange their Trustee Certificates (one for two) for 1,150,000 shares of stock in the Kentucky Company. That will take up $11,500,000.00 capital.

4. You will then offer to sell them (one for one) or 575,000 shares in the Kentucky Company at $25.00. This will take up $5,750,000. in capital, and they will put up for that $14,375,000.00 in cash.

5. That will leave in the treasury of the Kentucky Company 275,000 shares, which ultimately you may sell at, say, $25.00 a share, bringing in $6,875,000.00.

6. In connection with the idea that our present stockholders put up $14,375,000.00 in cash, this occurs to me; while the present market value of our bank stocks at $40.00 is $23,000,000.00, this stock probably cost them $15,000,000.00, so we are asking them to double their investment in the bank.

7. The man who today owns five hundred shares of Trustee Certificates with a market value of $20,000.00 will have to raise $12,500.00 in cash to take his new stock.

8. I am just putting on paper the impression I received from last Friday's meeting, and if I am wrong in details, please set me right.

Yours very truly,

President.

At last Friday's meeting Mr. Chas. Bohmer protested at some of the loans your Bank and ours had made to people on First National Bank stock as collateral. He said

HOW GOOD HAS THE INVESTMENT BEEN?

An increase in the value of 176% in 10 years besides earning dividends, which have been paid regularly, without interruption, is the story of owning stock in the National Bank of Kentucky, The Louisville Trust Company and the Louisville National bank.

$1,000.00 invested 10 years ago in the stock of these 3 banks is worth today $2,760.00.

In other words, a share of stock in these institutions today worth $47.00 represents a cost of $17.00, or an increase of $30.00 on the investment of $17.00, which is 176% increase.

Without figuring it out accurately, your yield on the original investment has probably been 7½%, so that your investment made 10 years ago in the stock of these banks has been a 25% investment.

Is there anything to indicate that the next 10 years will be less profitable?n On the contrary, the banks themselves should do equally as well, and with the co-operation of the Banco-Kentucky Company and the assistance this new company can give the two banks, I believe you will grant that the next 10 years will, by far, surpass the 10-year period through which we have just passed.

I know you will keep these facts in mind in making your investment in the stock of the BancoKentucky Co.

We feel sure that it is your intention to convert your old bank stock or Trustees' Certificates into the stock of The BancoKentucky Company. As the time for this expires September 19, we are sending this letter as a reminder for we do not want you to miss the opportunity.

If there are any questions in your mind as to the proposed move, we wish very much you would write us or come to see us so that we can give you all the information desired. There has already been pledged enough stock to insure the operation of The BancoKentucky Company, so we do not actually need your stock but we do not like to see any of our old stockholders lose any advantages of their investment.

Remember, that the stock of The BancoKentucky Company will be held by probably twenty-five hundred stockholders, it will be listed on the Louisville Exchange, and, we suspect, traded in rather actively. In other words, it will enjoy a good "market". On the other hand, the Trustees' Participating Shares or the old bank stock will be held by comparatively few people and there will be practically no trading in it, so you will have all the disadvantages of a "narrow" market.

We are reminding you of these facts because we sincerely want you to take that action which will ultimately make you the most money.

Dear Sir:

Exhibit 32-2

So that it would be possible to raise considerable discussion in the Legislature as to whether the provision above quoted should be repealed or strictly enforced or enlarged upon.

I have already gone through the experience of scrapping with the State Banking Commissioner and Attorney General's office because of the ownership by the Louisville Title Company of all of the stock of the Title Guaranty Trust Company except qualifying shares, and rather than have litigation on the matter we put those stocks under trustees similar to our trustees to the satisfaction of the State officials.

The question suggested becomes doubly important when, as and if, the National Bank of Kentucky de-nationalizes into the Bank of Kentucky, a State corporation. For then some competitor or hostilly disposed person might endeavor to enforce a strict compliance with the above quoted statute, which would be, to say the least, embarrassing and might be successfully maintained under the present state of the law. Even our present reliance on the trustees' ownership of the stock and the mere ownership of trustees' certificates would be taken away if there were a merger of the Louisville Trust Company and the Bank of Kentucky, which would dispense with the trustees and permit the holding of the stock directly by The Banco-Kentucky Company instead of its holding trustees' certificates. Hence, really the question is presented whether the mere interbosing of trustees between the stock and the holders does avoid the application of the law.

You understand, of course, there is no limitation on the charter power of The BancoKentucky Company to own the stock, but only the limitation on State financial institutions of permitting more than 50% of their stock to be held by one person and the remedy for so doing is to compel a sale of the excess, which would be a very serious thing in the present instance.

Yours very truly,

TKH-ML.

EXHIBIT 33-1

Board of Directors,
The National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Gentlemen:

The report of an examination of your bank completed on May 18, has been received and your attention is directed to the criticisms of the Examiner on pages 11-1 and 11-2.

In addition to the estimated losses of $187,775, which it is understood will be charged off on June 30, the bank is carrying an excessive amount of slow and doubtful assets amounting to $3,480,277, and $988,488, respectively, which have been steadily increasing. In spite of the fact that a substantial amount of losses has been charged off following each examination in the past three years. Overdue paper is also excessive in amount, the aggregate being $1,487, and includes stockyard bad debts of $988,488. The examiner has commented on the sheets following Page 6, a long list of large items and other assets especially criticised, which in his opinion require collection, security, or supporting credit information. He has also listed several loans in excess of the legal limit, and a number of unsecured overdrafts and cash items.

It is evident that these matters have not been receiving sufficient attention and it is urged that you review the report at your next board meeting, and take the necessary remedial measures.

It is noted that the excessive loans to the Kentucky Jockey Club and the Consolidated Realty Company were to be reduced to the legal limit within a reasonable time; but that exception was taken to the classification of Wakefield & Company's loan as excessive. It is evident from the statement of the examiner on Page 6-1 that the loans of the individuals included in this line other than accommodation of Wakefield & Company, and should, therefore, be dealt with in the direct liability and the line reduced to the 10% limit.

Attention is directed to the examiner's comment in regard to the credit [illegible] and Loan Credit to country banks, which should receive your attention.

It is noted that $200,000 of the Kentucky Engine Company line was included in losses to be charged off, and it is believed that further substantial reserve should be made periodically until the line is reduced to a conservative figure.

Board of Directors,
The National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Gentlemen:

The report of an examination of your bank completed on October 28 [illegible] been received, and shows a most unsatisfactory condition which seems to [illegible] growing worse, and requires your close attention and more conservative [illegible] policy in making loans and investments, and more vigorous action in [illegible] ing or improving the condition of those which are subject to criticism.

Although losses in substantial amounts have been charged off in [illegible] years, the bank continues to be burdened with a large amount [illegible] of doubtful assets which are largely represented in the loans [illegible] classifications of credit and "Other Loans Especially Mentioned" in pages [illegible] body of the report, and in the Schedule of Bonds, Securities, etc. As a result of the recent affiliation with the Louisville Trust Co., and an increase in the capital stock and dividend requirements, the ability of the bank to absorb its losses out of current earnings has been decreased, and if it is necessary to continue charging off losses in a substantial amount [illegible] seems probable, the condition will be reflected in the bank's published statements. Overdrafts in excessive amounts have been repeatedly criticised in reports of examination and in published reports of conditions and accordingly [illegible] tions of this character should be restricted.

It is understood that an effort is being made to dispose of the [illegible] of the Kentucky Wagon Co., but until this is accomplished it seems reasonable and advisable that $100,000 of its indebtedness be charged off at each examination until the carrying value is reduced to at least $400,000.

The Campbell line is, for the most part, included in the slow and doubtful classifications, and aggregating, as it does, over $2,000,000, is a dangerous and unwarranted concentration of credit, with a probability of substantial loss being sustained in the item in the bonds, securities, etc. schedule representing stocks carried at $178,000, in the Industrial Investment Corporation notes carried in that schedule at $149,550, and in the bonds of the Liberty Rubber Co. It is urged that intensive efforts be made to [illegible] of the most objectionable items composing the Campbell line, which is [illegible]

Dear Sir:

Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of January 24, enclosing statement showing the reduction in overdue, slow and doubtful paper, estimated losses, other losses especially mentioned and overdue(?) blanket as the last report of examination of your bank and the progress made in collection thereof.

From your letter and an analysis of the statement it appears that all of the estimated loss on loans has been charged off, the $ [illegible] been paid on doubtful loans and a reduction of $[illegible],537.00 has been made in slow loans, assuming that payments on paper classed as part slow and part doubtful were made on the slow portion.

No mention is made in your letter of the Wakefield and Co. excessive loan. This loan was excessive at the previous examination and the reduction to the legal limit without further delay is insisted upon.

Record for a[illegible]ment of $[illegible],000 on the Kinney Rubber Co. indebtedness the Cumberland line shows no reduction. The retirement of this line is considered very important and should be given close attention.

Advice of the further progress made will be expected in sixty days, but twice as to the action taken to reduce the Wakefield & Co. loan to the legal limit if it is desired immediately.

Respectfully,

a minor matter that this is now brought within the legal limit during the examination and you will be requested to see that it is kept within that limit in future.

Other matters shown by the report requiring your particular attention are the st tutory and double aggregation $1,467,[illegible], also unlawful assets aggregating $3,[illegible] and $486,134 respectively, the other loans especially mentioned at pages 6-8 to 10 inclusive, the [illegible] real estate loan of E. H. Foote which is plainly slow and unlawful and the lease acquired for a branch office and not used which is only an [illegible] of the earliest possible opportunity, deficiency in Reserve, irregular cash items including the source of check of [illegible] cashed since January 4th for Fairfield & Co., and overdrafts. It is understood that President Brown's account was continuously overdrawn from January 8 to the date of the examination when his overdraft of $[illegible] was covered by a deposit consisting of a check of Fairfield & Co. on the Citizens Union National Bank and that to cover this check a [illegible] check of your bank was issued against sundry dividend checks of Mr. [illegible]

The condition of the bank warrants the attention of every member of the board and you are reminded of your oaths of office and your responsibility to the shareholders for the safe management and proper conduct of its affairs. It is your duty to see that the bank is properly and [illegible] fully conducted and no officers should be permitted to dominate the [illegible] to the extent of jeopardizing the best interests of the bank or violating the requirements of the law and good banking.

It is requested that this letter and the report be carefully considered at your next meeting and that you advise over your individual signatures as to the progress made and the further action to be taken toward adjusting these matters, stating in particular the corrections in each of the statutory and doubtful items and the cash of large lines and other loans especially mentioned at pages 6 to 10, and the total reductions made in the slow assets. Similar reports are desired at sixty day intervals and copies should be sent to Chief Nat[illegible] Bank Examiner John D. Mr. E. H. Gough,
Deputy Comptroller,
Treasury Department,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of May 12, 1928, referring to the report of the examination of this bank completed March 31, 1928 received.

Referring to loans mentioned in the first paragraph of your letter, wish to advise as follows -

Cadet Knitting Company has been reduced since the examination from $100,000.00 to $75,000.00 and we have a positive agreement with the company that the balance of this debt is to be paid as the notes mature.

Campbell, Heath & Company and White & Associates -

Campbell, Heath & Company has been reduced from $100,000 to $96,000.00. These obligations are slow but there has been improvement in the collateral and, in our opinion, there is ample security to protect these loans until paid.

William D. Campbell - Mr. Campbell is President of the W... Camp Packing Company and a very resourceful man. While there is no active market for this stock, we feel that the collateral is sufficient and is a safe loan.

Albert Latta - We regard this loan perfectly good even without collateral.

L. I. Harris - Paid in full.

Murray Rubber Company - Since the examination there has been $150,000.00 cash paid into the treasury of this company by the ... for which they do not receive any obligation of the company, and arrangements are now being made for the payment of an additional $100,000.00. We know the management personally and believe in their ability to make this business a success and, in our opinion, these obligations will be liquidated in full.

Industrial Ownership Corporation - This is regarded by us as a slow loan but our opinion is that in a reasonable time we be able to dispose of the collateral for more than the amount of the debt and receive payment in full.

Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company - We are now negotiating for the reorganization or sale of this company and believe we will in a short time effect a trade that will greatly reduce our loans and secure the balance entirely satisfactory to us.

Loans - Kentucky Jockey Club and Lincoln Fields Jockey Club - have been paid in full.

In paragraph five - referring to items listed by your Examiner as statutory bad debts, wish to advise that this amount has been reduced by payments in the amount of $32,100.48 as per itemized list attached. Also listed by your Examiner under caption "slow and doubtful assets" have been reduced in the amount of $208,886.15 as per itemized list attached. Also items listed as "other loans especially mentioned" on pages 6-6 to 10 inclusive, have been reduced in the amount of $283,065.00 as per itemized list attached.

In regard to the Real Estate Loan of E. H. Woods, which is now secured by bonds on the property, there is now fourteen producing wells on this property and there is being formed a corporation with a capital of $300,000.00 with E. H. Woods as its President. They will undertake to sell stock of this corporation to liquidate our debt. However, if this is not successful the property will be foreclosed and sold at auction and will, in our opinion, more than pay the debt.

The lease acquired for a branch office at Fourth & Guthrie Streets, and now used, is sub-leased on a basis that is now producing an annual net profit to the bank.

The items carried for Wakefield & Company, secured by (110) shares National Bank of Kentucky stock, was paid in full during the examination.

Respectfully yours,

Cashier and Secretary of
Board of Directors.

[illegible]ington, D. C.

[illegible]Sir:

Your office letter of August 25, 1928, relative to further progress made in the matters referred to in your letter of May [illegible] received.

Cadet Knitting Company has been reduced since the examination from $100,000.00 to $45,000.00.

Van Camp Packing Company - The proposed recapitalization of the Van Camp Packing Company and the prospective new interests will materially aid the marketing of their product and add a minimum of $1,000,000.00 to a possible $2,000,000.00 in cash. This will improve the statement of the company very much and add to the collateral value of other loans by the salability of the collateral.

Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company - Negotiations for the refinancing of this company should be consumated by October 1, 1928, which, if successful, will pay our debt.

Items listed by your Examiner as "statutory bad debts" have had a further reduction since June 8, 1928, of $33,562.66 as per itemized list attached.

Items listed by your Examiner under caption of "slow and doubtful assets" have had a further reduction since June 8, 1928, in the amount of $206,152.50 as per itemized list attached.

From all the information we have and wh... has been confirmed to us several times , this stock is actually underwritten and the money to be paid in as soon as the French Govern... ment approves a license for the sale of stock. ESTABLISHED 1834

IN LOUISVILLE

September 24, 1929.

Mr. John L. Proctor,
Deputy Comptroller,
Treasury Department,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Answering your Office Letter of September 17, 1929, we have recently formed a $50,000,000.00 Corporation, known as The [redacted] Company which became operative on September 19, 1929.

This company has already acquired through the exchange of stock about 98% of the entire capital stock of both the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company.

We will within the next ten days make application to you to denationalize the National Bank of Kentucky and consolidate our interest with the Louisville Trust Company under a State Charter.

Respectfully yours,

[redacted]
, Cashier.

P. S. We are enclosing herewith copy of letter sent to our stockholders under date of July 19, 1929.

Enc.

Louisville, Ky., July 19, 1928.

To the Holders of Trustees' Participation Shares,
National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company:

1. Your Officers and Directors have studied the present banking conditions in the banking business in Kentucky, with a view to preparing the two banking institutions under their management, to meet these changed conditions, and to take early advantage of new opportunities presented thereby.

2. The conclusion unanimously reached, as a result of their deliberations, is that the two banks, and the business conducted by them, should be reorganized by uniting in this group a third institution, which will enable the consolidated group to render more profitable service, expand their facilities, and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections.

3. Such a reorganization is in line with the trend of business and finance in this country; and the strength and influence of the new corporation will not only greatly benefit the two banks and the territory they now serve, but will also be a stabilizing influence in banking circles throughout this section of the country. The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank nor a trust company has authority to exercise, and can take advantage of many sound and profitable financial opportunities, frequently presented in the course of business of the two banks, but not available to them, because of the restrictions upon their powers and activities.

4. The following is the Plan of Reorganization agreed upon by the Officers and Directors of the two banks, and approved by formal Resolutions of the Trustees, under the Trustees' Agreement for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company.

5. There has been organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, a corporation known as The BancoKentucky Company, with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares, having a par value of Ten ($10.00) Dollars each. The stock will be exchanged or sold, in accordance with this Plan, on the basis of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share, which will give the Company a capital of Twenty Million ($20,000,000.00) Dollars, and a surplus of Thirty Million ($30,000,000.00) Dollars, or a total capital and surplus of Fifty Million ($50,000,000.00) Dollars. No stock will be sold by the Company at less than Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share.

6. The corporation is given broad charter powers, including the right to acquire stock bonds and other securities of other corporations, and evidences of indebtedness created or issued other corporations; the power to underwrite securities and take part in syndicate management, and charge fees and commissions for its services in connection with the reorganization or refinancing other corporations; the power to issue bonds and to guarantee the obligations of others and to become surety, guarantor and endorser thereof. The foregoing is merely a brief summary of the broad powers given the corporation; complete details of these powers appear in the Certificate of Incorporation the Company, copies of which may be examined at the offices of the two banks by any one interested

7. It is an essential part of this reorganization that the shares of this corporation (or least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks. The Banco Kentucky Company, therefore, offers to the Trustees' Participation Shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, through the Trustees as agents in the transaction, its entire capital stock, on the bases and subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set out:

8. It is an essential part of this Plan that:

(a) On or before September 19, 1929, the holders of the Trustees' Participation Shares must deposit their Certificates with the Trustees for exchange into the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and for each Participation Share thus deposited, the Trustees will cause to be issued to the holder thereof, Two (2) shares of the stock of the new corporation. In addition thereto the depositing shareholder will have the right to subscribe for as many additional shares of the stock of The Banco Kentucky Company as he may desire at the price of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share subject to allotment suitably if over-subscribed. Trustees' Participation Shareholders who fail to deposit their shares on or before September 19, 1929, will be deemed to have waived their rights to thus exchange their shares and subscribe for stock in the new Company, unless the Trustees shall extend the time for deposit and subscription (as they may do in their discretion), in which event the Trustees' Participation Shareholders will be deemed to have waived their rights, unless their shares are deposited within the extended time.

(b) The entire Plan of Reorganization, and the deposit and subscription privileges and rights hereinabove set out, are all, and each of them is, conditioned expressly upon the acquisition by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, either by deposit for exchange, or by direct subscription as above, of at least a majority of the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and further conditioned upon the acquisition by The BancoKentucky Company of at least a majority of the Trustees' Participation Shares issued and outstanding as of September 19, 1929.

9. It is the unanimous recommendation of your Officers, Directors and Trustees of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, that the Trustees' Participation Shareholders immediately deposit their shares under this Reorganization Plan, and that they exercise their right to subscribe to the additional shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

10. There is enclosed herewith a subscription form covering this transaction, which you are asked to sign at your earliest opportunity and deposit with the Trustees, at their office, 421 West Market Street, together with your Certificate or Certificates for Trustees' Participation Shares, endorsed in blank and witnessed. There will be issued to you an Interim Receipt for the shares deposited which, when the Plan has become effective as above set forth, may be presented for exchange for the permanent certificates of the BancoKentucky Company, in accordance with the Plan of Reorganization.

Mr. E. H. Gough, Deputy Comptroller,
Treasury Department,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of August 9th., relative to examination of this bank under date of May 9th. wish to advise that the management has been working continuously on the criticized items and have made considerable progress.

We are now working on a report which will be read to the Board of Directors and forwarded to you on or before September 1st.

Relative to Van Camp Packing Company stock wish to advise this stock has been sold and the entire amount eliminated from the assets of the bank.

Yours very truly,

W. P. Burkhardt
Cashier.

October 24, 1930.

Hon. Comptroller of the Currency,
Washington, D. C.

Sir:

In reply to the letter of Chief National Bank Examiner, Robert Neill, addressed to this board on October 11, 1930, the undersigned directors of The National Bank of Kentucky make the following report:

#1. The item of $242,500 representing loss in the Van Camp Packing Company stock, which had been added to the carrying value of the BancoKentucky Company stock owned by the National Bank of Kentucky has been charged to the Undivided Profit Account, thereby creating a deficit in that account, which deficit we are confident will be covered by current earnings within the next sixty days.

#2. The $580,000 represented by debentures of the Murray Rubber Company and a participation of $20,000 in the note of Lewis C. Humphreys for $27,754.74 have been this day sold to the BancoKentucky Company, this bank having received in payment therefor check of the BancoKentucky Company for $600,000 against its adequate balance on the books of this bank. The remainder of $7,754.74 of the Humphreys' item has been charged to Undivided Profits.

#3. This board is assured by Messrs. James B. Brown, Charles F. Jones and W. T. Zur Schmiede, officers of the BancoKentucky Company, the two first named being members of this board and the last named its secretary, that active and bonafide efforts are being made by them as officers of the BancoKentucky Company to borrow $400,000, which is to be used by the BancoKentucky Company for the purpose of purchasing, under the terms set forth in letter of October 11, 1930, the remaining items described therein.

#4. The entire 100,000 shares of the BancoKentucky Company stock acquired by this bank in exchange for the Kentucky Wagon Company indebtedness is now being carried on the books of the bank at $1,627,650, the amount of the Kentucky Wagon

...indebtedness as of the date of the transfer. We agree that this carrying value will not be increased unless and until the market value of the BancoKentucky Company stock shall exceed the present carrying value.

This Board of Directors in its entirety and through its recently created Executive Committee is undertaking to pass on all loans made by this bank, and to consider and pass on all lines of credit, commitments, contracts and majpr expense items incident to the operation of this bank. The heavy line of credit to Caldwell and Company and affiliated interests, which the examiner advises this board is in his opinion an excessive loan in violation of law, will not be increased- in fact our President has been directed to call for additional collateral on existing loans. $600,000 of this indebtedness which has come into the bank since the commencement of the current examination has not been approved by this board. Of this amount $500,000 was loaned after the creation by this board of the Executive Committee for the purpose, as one of its functions, of passing on loan applications. President Brown and Vice President Jones assume the entire responsibility for this loan from the bank's funds.

We believe and represent that active and bona fide efforts are being made to consummate a merger of this bank with the Louisville Trust Company and on the completion of such merger, it is anticipated that other slow and doubtful paper criticised by the examiner will be eliminated from the assets of this bank.

This letter is copied in full in the minutes of this meeting.

Respectfully,

...Caldwell

Your letter of July 22nd,1929, addressed to the Trustees, National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company has been handed to the writer for reply.

We note that Mrs. Letitia C.Rogers, who is the holder of one hundred (100) shares of the unified stock, is in Europe and in all likelihood will not return by September 19th, or in time to take advantage of the proposal as outlined in letter of July 19th.

While it is not compulsory that Mrs. Rogers exchange her stock, it is the unanimous opinion of the officers and directors of the two banks that it would be advantageous to do so, as it is their wish that the ownership of the new Company be identical, as near as possible, to the ownership of the Bank and Trust Company.

Regarding your request for statement and market value of the present stock (we have no record of having received such a request, and we are enclosing you herein statement of the Bank, the Trust Company and a consolidated statement) wish to advise that three hundred and thirty (330) shares of the stock were sold Saturday at 47 a share - bid 46½ and 47½ asked.

Your subscription paper as well as the proposition of the consolidation of the three banks received. Mrs. Leticia Rogers is in Europe and will not likely return in time to deposit her stock or to sign the subscription list. Dear Mr. Thomas:-

I am in receipt of your letter of July 30th and glad to note that you have sent in your unified stock National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company for exchange for Banco Kentucky stock.

In writing we solicit your assistance to have Mrs. Emily T.Clay do likewise.

It is the desire and wish of the officers and directors of the Bank and Trust Company to have the ownership of the new stock, as nearly as possible, identical with that of the Bank and Trust Company, and that in view additional stock is being offered to the present stockholders for subscription. If you and the members of your family could, we would like to see them subscribe to additional stock to the extent of the same number of shares of Banco Kentucky that they will receive in exchange for their present unified stock.

It is the wish and desire that the ownership of the new Company be identical with that of the Bank and Trust Company, and the Officers and Directors are recommending that the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates exchange their stock for stock of the new company, as outlined by letter of July 19th, and in addition to subscribe to additional stock to the extent of at least an equal number of shares that they will receive in exchange for their present unified stock, and are extending that privilege to the stockholders. Dear Mrs. Holt:-

We have your letter of September 1st and note that you have misplaced the letter of July 19th sent you in regard to the reorganization plan National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company and the Banco Kentucky Company, and I am sending you herein another copy of same.

According to our records, you are the present holder of four hundred and twenty (420) shares of Trustees' Participation Certificates of the National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company which, under the plan of reorganization, you have the right to exchange for shares in the Banco Kentucky Company on the basis of two shares of Banco Kentucky for each share of National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company, and in addition you are entitled to subscribe to as many additional shares of Banco Kentucky as you desire at the rate of $25.00 per share, to be paid for as called by the Company, which will probably be sometime around October 1,1929.

The plan has been unanimously approved by the Directors of both the Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky and is heartily recommended to the stockholders.

The suggestion we have to make is that you endorse your present certificates and forward them to

I shall be very grateful if you will let me know whether there is any way I can reserve my rights, or part of them, so I can take them up in a year or so. Unfortunately before your announcement, other companies and banks in which I had stock, announced rights which I took up even to the extent of borrowing rather heavily for me. The Guarantee Trust Company of New York, the Pacific Mutual Insurance Company of California, and the Union Oil Company of California. In about two years I expect to get these paid off. Dear Mr.Chamberlain:-

I have yours of September 4th and in answer to questions asked, wish to state as follows:-

Stock not exchanged will receive such dividends as are declared by the Bank and Trust Company to the Trustees' and will be paid out by them to such stockholders who do not exchange their stock, and in all likelihood will be the same as heretofore. Under the plan your 670 shares will entitle you to two shares of new stock for each share of old, namely, 1340 shares of the par value of $10.00 each, and which automatically gives your old stock value of $50.00 a share, as no stock of the new Company is being sold at less than $25.00 per share.

With reference to the dividend the new stock will probably pay, it would be safe to say, that you will receive the same aggregate return on the new stock that you are now receiving on your present stock. At a reasonable time, it is expected that you will probably receive more, as the new Company will be operated with very little expense as the management and clerical work will be done by the same Officers and employees as the Bank.

Such shares of the old stock as have been offered for sale have found a ready market.

If you want to exchange the $4,000.00 Louisville Title Co. bonds into the stock, it can be arranged, - the writer can buy them for some words.

As you will see from the letter, you do not have to pay for the new stock right away.

As a suggestion, you can save a little by buying National Bank of Kentucky stock at present prices (around 46) and obtain in exchange 2 shares of the new company, which would cost $50.00.

Will be glad to attend to it for you either way you prefer, - should you buy the stock to convert, suggest that it be done pretty soon as it will likely advance to the price of the new stock.

Dear Mr. McDaniel:-

In keeping with your request over the telephone, we enclose copy of letter to holders of trustees participation shares National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. and a copy of the certificate of incorporation and by-laws of the BancoKentucky Co., which are self-explanatory.

As stated over the phone, it is not an investment trust, nor is it organized for speculative purposes, but to meet the trend of the times and be in position to handle safe and profitable matters which a National Bank cannot do.

You will see from the letter that it received the unqualified and unanimous endorsement of the directors and officers of the National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. and it is the purpose that the present holders control and the same board of directors manage.

Had this company been in operation since last January, a great deal of money could have been made and legitimate demands could have been met and a great deal of money which has gone to New York and elsewhere could have been kept in the state.

The field is broad and the opportunities almost unlimited and it should prove a big thing for the State of Kentucky.

Should you be consulted by any share holders, believe you should have no hesitation in recommending that they deposit the stock and subscribe for as much stock as they feel disposed.

Dear Mr. Abrams:-

You have doubtless received letter to stockholders regarding the RussellKentucky Company, - at any rate, another copy and certificate of incorporation and by-laws and a subscription blank are enclosed.

It is not an investment trust or for speculative purposes, but to affiliate and cooperate with the National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Co.

Most of the large banks in New York, Chicago, and elsewhere have similar companies which are of mutual benefit and show large profits.

As you will see from enclosed letter, the directors and officers were unanimous in approving and recommending and are very optimistic about the outlook as the field is broad and possibilities almost unlimited.

Had this company been in operation when the Kentucky Heating, Louisville Gas, etc. were re-financed, it would no doubt have been handled here instead of large fees going to Chicago.

Had it been in operation since last January, it could have "coined money" and prevented a great volume of funds going from this state to New York and elsewhere in order to obtain the high rates as the legal rate for banks in this state is 6%.

The directors and officers are anxious to expedite the deposit of stock (receiving two of new for one of old) as well as get subscriptions for the new stock to be settled for around Sept. 19.

The dividend on present stock has been declared payable Oct. 1 to stock holders of record Sept. 15.

This will acknowledge yours of the 6th and a letter to holders of trustees participation shares, subscription blank, and articles of incorporation are enclosed, which are self-explanatory.

As you state, the Banco-Kentucky Co. will have broad powers but the present stockholders and directors will control, - it received the unanimous endorsement and recommendation of the directors and officers.

The trend of the times, such as chain department, drug, and grocery stores and other things makes it increasingly hard for a strictly commercial bank, especially in Kentucky where the interest rate is limited to 6% and the vast majority of banks pay 4% for time money (we pay 3%) that the large banks throughout the nation have and are organizing affiliated institutions which can finance, underwrite, etc. to greater advantage and larger profits.

As the letter to stockholders states, the exchange is optional but the directors and officers feel that it would be advantageous to make the exchange and also subscribe for stock in the new company (capital $20,000,000.00, surplus $30,000,000.00).

The earnings of the National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. are paid to trustees, - the same will apply to the earnings of the new company, - stock that is exchanged will participate in the earnings of the new company as well as the present banks.

The new company will cooperate with and supplement the present banks, - had it been in operation no longer than last January, we could have taken on a large amount of splendid business and any money not needed locally could have been loaned safely in the east at excellent rates.

Answering your question, - if the stock is not exchanged, they will continue to hold the present participation certificates and receive such dividends as the earnings warrant and the directors declare.

If there is any specific point or points that are not covered that you would like to know about, do not hesitate to let us know.

Dear Mr. Hoagland:-

If agreeable, we would be glad for you to send in for exchange your present trustees certificates for National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Co. stock, as well as subscribe for as much of the new stock to be paid for about Sept. 19 at $25.00 per share, as you feel disposed.

Had the company been in operation last January, the opportunities would have enabled it to make large profits.

A dividend on the stock you now hold has been declared payable Oct. 1 to stock holders of record Sept. 16.

We would appreciate your prompt attention and any suggestions or inquiries will be given i mediate attention.

Dear Mr. Coakley:-

Some days ago we wrote Mrs. L. K. Bloorn requesting that she deposit her National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Co. stock to be exchanged for stock in the Bancokentucky Company.

The capital is to be $20,000,000.00, surplus $30,000,000.00, stockholders to receive two shares of the new company for one of the old stock.

You will see from the enclosed letters that the plan received the unanimous endorsement and recommendation of the directors (list enclosed) and officers.

It is to supplement and cooperate with the National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Co. and the officers and directors believe it to be perfectly safe and should show a large earning power as the field is broad and the possibilities almost unlimited.

Had the company been in operation last January and since, it could have cared for a great deal of splendid business offered us and any excess funds not needed locally could have been safely invested in New York and elsewhere at high rates of interest.

We trust you will look over the enclosed literature and if agreeable, explain to Mrs. Bloorn, Mrs. Owena Hobson, as well as any other stockholders that you may know of in your vicinity.

The first time you are in Louisville, we would be glad to go over the matter with you.

Thanking you for any assistance you may be able to render in the matter and with all good wishes,-

Dear Mr. Mobley:

In response to yours of the 26th. we enclose copy of letter sent to the holders of Participation Certificates National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company.

The BancoKentucky is in process of formation, capital $20,000,000, surplus $30,000,000. It is incorporated under the laws of Delaware and will have power to accomplish things which a national bank cannot do and which should show large earning power. It is not, however, an investment trust or organized for speculative purposes but, as you are aware, conditions have changed greatly in the last few years - chain drug stores, chain grocery stores, chain department stores, etc.

The Directors of the combined National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville National Bank and Trust Company and Louisville Trust Company, were unanimous in endorsing and recommending the new Company, which is to cooperate with and supplement the combined Banks. Had it been in operation last January we could have taken care of business and secured a large amount of new business and any excess or additional funds could have been loaned on high class collateral at splendid rates. As you will see from the letter, present holders of Participation Certificates will receive two shares BancoKentucky Stock for one of the old stock.

Subscriptions are being taken for new stock at $25.00 per share - there is no commission fees or organiso expenses in connection with the new Company, consequently it will be able to operate very economically.

If we have not made the matter clear or if there is additional information desired, please let us know.

The Directors (list in letter enclosed) and Officers were unanimous in endorsing and recommending the plan. There is no cost in the way of fees, commission or organization expense - everyone pays the same price for the new stock and the same Directors will manage the new Company.

Miss Julia C. Tandy,

August 31, 1929

My dear Miss Tandy:

Answering yours of the 29th.

The BancoKentucky Company is not a holding company but a financial corporation with power to lend money, purchase bonds or other companies, etc. as outlined in the Articles of Incorporation, copy enclosed.

The control will be with the present holders of trustees participation certificates National Bank of Kentucky - Louisville Trust Company and will have the same directors and management as the present banks.

The majority of its assets will be in Kentucky, consequently it will not be taxable to the residents of Kentucky - not subject to normal income tax. As to dividends, the rate (naturally) has not been fixed - it will, of course, depend upon the earnings, which the directors and management expect to be larger as the BancoKentucky Company will have a broader field and much greater opportunities than has a national bank - such as fees for financing, underwriting, etc.

The present stock pays 10% on par value of the shares - the new Company (giving two shares for one) at the same rate would be 5% on par new stock.

Should the present holders of trustees participation certificates not convert, they would receive such dividends as earnings of the present banks would justify but would not share in the earnings of the new Company; consequently, the management believes that it would be very much to the interest of holders to exchange the certificates.

We appreciate your telling us that Miss Elizabeth C. Tandy has not had notice of the proposed reorganization. Our records give her address as Vevay, Indiana. We would thank you to give us her Washington, D. C. address, using the enclosed envelope.

If there is anything we have not made clear or you would like additional information we would be pleased indeed to endeavor to furnish it.

Dear Sir:- your letters of Aug. 28th have been received by Mrs. Jeanette D. Tandy and myself. We would like to ask several questions in regard to The Banco-Kentucky Co.

Just what type of organization do you term the Banco-Kentucky Co.? Is it a holding company? Is the stock taxable on personal income tax or state taxes, or are taxes paid at source as is the case with national Banks and Trust companies?

What dividends do you plan to pay on the new stock?

What becomes of the stock holders who choose to retain their stock in the National Bank of Ky. and The Louisville Trust Co.? Will they have to come in if a substantial majority sign up for the new STOCK?

I would like to hear from you by return mail in regard to this so we will know what to do.

Mr. Frank L. Smith,- c/o Jellico Hardware Co.,
Jellico, Tenn.

Dear Mr. Smith:-

We were pleased to receive yours of the 3rd asking about BancoKentucky stock which Mr. Harry Bridges was kind enough to mention to you.

A letter sent holders of trustees participation certificates National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. and subscription blank are enclosed.

It is being organized to cooperate with and supplement the National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. The proposed capital is $20,000,000.00, surplus $30,000,000.00.

As a business man, you are aware of the changing conditions and trend of the times in this country, among other things, chain department stores, drug stores, grocery stores, etc.

It is incorporated under the laws of Delaware and can do things which are profitable which a National Bank cannot do, such as underwriting, buying, selling, etc.

The directors (list enclosed) and officers were unanimous in endorsing and recommending the plan and are confident that it should be a splendid money maker.

The stock is $25.00 per share, not less to anyone and there is no expense for commission, fees, underwriting or organization, - in other words, everyone is on the same footing.

It is true that holders of National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. will receive two shares for one around Sept. 19. A little money could be made that way but it would be simply an exchange of stockholders and would not furnish new money to the company.

The officers feel that the present price of Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Co. is about right as many people purchased Bank of Kentucky when the stock was split ten for one around 30 or 40 for speculative purposes and would most likely sell the stock should it reach 50, which would not help the present holders or the new company either.

We are willing to lend on BancoKentucky stock, so if you care to subscribe this might be an inducement to subscribe for more than you would otherwise do. Would be pleased to receive your subscription, as well as that of any of your friends(subject to allotment if oversubscribed by stockholders) and be of any service in this or other matters you may wish.

In keeping with our conversation over the phone, find enclosed subscription blank to be executed for the 40 shares BancoKentucky stock at $25.00 per share, - as you will observe, the lower form is to be used for the additional shares.

As stated, the directors and officers unanimously endorsed and recommended the plan and are sanguine that the new company has a broad field and great possibilities.

Naturally we would like to get all of the old stock converted and feel that it would be to the advantage of the stockholders to make the exchange as the present stockholders would get the benefit of the earnings of the two banks and share in the new company as well.

I regret exceedingly that the telephone service was not good, which added to the noise here on the corner, made it difficult for the writer to understand you over the phone as well as he would have liked.

Thanking you and awaiting your instructions.

Dear Mr. Hodgen:-

I have your letter of the 14th and note you do not understand the new stock selling at $25.00 to be on the proper basis with the old.

We think our old stock is worth about $30.00.

Two or three parties became too enthusiastic when the stock was split up and overbought themselves and run the stock up too high and the gradual selling that they have done is keeping our stock down below $30.00. I am quite sure it will sell for at least $30.00 when this is over.

We decided to offer the new stock at $25.00. If we had decided to offer it at $10.00 we would have given the old stockholders five for one instead of two for one. This would have been equitable just as the exchange is equitable now.

Want to say further that I believe in this new scheme as our new money is to be used chiefly for buying controlling interest in banks that are strategic territories. So much money worried me at first.

I think you should not only advise your wife and friends to exchange their stock but buy more. The new stock will be in just as safe a position, as I see it, as the old, and without double liability if that amounts to anything.

As you know, bank stock does not pay very much on the amount invested. Trustees and others looking for safe investment, name bank stock to sell high. The Russellville Stock is in this position. It will not pay much at first on the amount invested but the public is buying it. I do not mean going to buy it but are buying it now and exchanging their stock. It is going over and I think strong. The stock will sell higher and it won't be very long - that is why I wish you to buy new stock in addition to transferring the old.

Ask me some more questions if you are not convinced.

The circular letter sent out by the Nat.Bnk. of Ky.and the Lou.Trust Co.of date July 19-29 states the exchange of the Participation shares of the Bnk.of Ky.& Lou Trust Co.for the BancoKentucky shares in the ratio of two for one and the sale of the remaining 2,000,000 shares at $25.00 per share will give the BancoKentucky Company a capital of $20,000,000.00 and surplus of $30,000,000.00. Will you please explain to me how the Bank and Trust Co.stock ~~purchases~~ procures its $40.00 per share in the combine,so that it shall stand,in the combination,on an equal footing with the shares,about to be sold at $25.00 ? The Bnk.& Trust Co. stock is now ten dollars par and the proposition is to give two for one and then it is to equal with the shares now being sold for $25.00 ? It carries me back to the great scheme,years ago, of Fiat Money, the fallacy of which proved its undoing.

Please dont think me a misanthrope,for I am not;but desire to understand the scheme and know what we are doing so I can understandingly advise my wife.

Our authority on bonds and stocks in this bank does not think much of American Investment Trust of Kentucky. He says their circular said they would invest in Standard Oils and Electric Securities and did not say that they had but, even if they did, they might invest in other things not quite so good.

The BancoKentucky probably will make other purchases. It will make an are if it does not make a ring around the world. It was because of such purchases as these that Mr. Brown intended to make, that I felt safe in recommending it.

The investment business has been very profitable to all of the investment trusts but they might meet with some reverses later.

This is merely a suggestion and if you don't want to sign it now as soon as it is sold I can send this up to you and have it endorsed. I assume they can wait a little while.

This stock is transferred to the Louisville Trust Company and they want the stock endorsed or regular Power of Attorney signed. Sorry I could not endorse same for you.

I dislike to see you sell the stock at this time, as I am completely sold on this new scheme of Mr. Brown's. Our stockholders are combined very widely but they are depositing their stock and a great many new shares are being sold, sufficient already, I think, to guarantee the scheme going over.

Mr. Brown's plan is to use the new money principally to buy controlling interest in banks located in growing territories. This, I feel, makes the money safe and the new money that comes in can be deposited at 2@ and the proceeds can pay the dividend as we are now paying it covering all expenses and I am sure we can make more than 2@. The fact that [redacted] can make this profit and with all this new money coming in, insures that the stock will be selling considerably higher than $20.00 before very long.

Dear Mr. Hayes:

I have fimally decided to let my mother, Mrs. Mary G. Street, subscribe for 400 additional shares BanecKentucky Co., rather than purchase the old stopkfor exchange. It does appear that if she will make anything out of the purchase it will necessary for sufficient new money to come in to make the plan effective

In this connection she will not be able to make full payment before Nov. 1st, and it will be necessary to ask you to carry her on such calls as may be made prior to that date, if she should make the subscription.

May I hear from you as to whether that will be agreeable with you, so that I may act in the matter.

Rev. J. S. Lyons, D. D.,
Marlborough-Blenheim,
Atlantic City, N. J.

Dear doctor Lyons:-

I have yours of the 27th and am enclosing Articles of Incorporation of the BancoKentucky Company.

I think one reason and possibly the main reason that Mr. Brown has organized this company is because of chain banking. Mr. Brown is not constituted so that he may just "jog" along and let other banks overpower him. The principal use of the money will be put to purchasing banks in this state and other states that are situated in promising fields. We do not intend to buy small country banks, as we have no special need for them.

BancoKentucky is not an investment trust and it is not the intention of Mr. Brown to deal in securities; the fact is, it will cooperate with the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, and be of considerable benefit to both.

If one does not exchange the stock for BancoKentucky stock, he will remain a stockholder just as he is now, and I assume his dividends will come in just as they have been. However, as Mr. Brown has stated, and it appears to me, that a stockholder in the new company will have the same safe-guard that the stockholders in the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co., have with the added opportunities of the new company.

This new Company can take on certain matters that the Bank cannot take on and matters not necessarily hazardous. Ordinarily banks are afraid of "frozen assets," but this Company need not be afraid of acquiring them if they are good.

Very truly yours,

Vice-President.

I have invested in it myself, but am not counting on quite that much. Still the new stock pays 8% on the par value, - this means only 3.2% on the amount invested, which is quite small if you have to carry it any length of time. Am talking frankly and do not wish you to be disappointed after you get into it.

The bank stock in any of the banks in New York pay about 3.2% on the amount invested or less, so that the money made in bank stock as a rule comes from the rise of the principal the stock.

The future of this new concern depends altogether upon the management, and as I have said, the opportunities are very great indeed.

Received your kind favor of the 5th instant asking about The Remo-Kentucky Company and have sent you under separate cover, copy of the Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws.

Your experience in the bank has doubtless shown you many avenues of profit for the bank in lines of business granted to this Company under its charter and prohibited by banking laws.

The Remo-Kentucky Company will act as the Federal Reserve Bank now acts for its members, using its influence for the bank and trust company connections. There is no definite plan of operation, each business transaction to be taken care of on its merit as it arises. My observations are we do not plan to buy banking institutions in the smaller cities in line with the newspaper article which you sent me, preferring to leave the local banking to the local community, we acting as their reserve agent, keeping their good will and influence.

If there is any definite information you desire and I can give, kindly advise.

Dear Mr. Quarrier:-

I am enclosing literature in regard to the Bancokentucky Company.

This means that the Bancokentucky Company owns all the National Bank of Kentucky Stock. The National Bank of Kentucky does not go out of existence at once but it will consolidate later but even then you can use your old checks. After that they will be Bank of Kentucky checks.

Bancokentucky Company came into existence September 19th. Nearly all of the old National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company Stock was deposited and I believe it all will be as there is so little outstanding they have agreed to let them come in if they so desire, although it is past time.

About $18,000,000.00 new cash was paid into the Bancokentucky. The principal business will be to buy controlling interest or buy other banks outright. It has already bought two in Cincinnati.

While the par value of the Bancokentucky Stock is $10.00, it was put out at $25.00 , as the circular shows and there was enough paid in cash to give us $18,000,000.00. These figures are all rather large for us to comprehend as well as yourself.

THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY capitalized at $20,000,000, with a surplus of $30,000,000, was recently organized in Louisville for the purpose of buying, holding and controlling banks in Louisville and surrounding cities. Stockholders of National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Company Unified stock exchanged their stock for stock in the new company at the ratio of one for two shares. The remaining stock was privately subscribed for by individuals and several large banking houses.

The BancoKentucky Company is the largest company of its kind operating in the South and it is expected that the acquisition of large banks in this section will be announced shortly. The company recently acquired control of the Brighton Bank & Trust Company and the Pearl-Market Bank & Trust Company of Cincinnati. These banks will be merged and operated as the Brighton-Pearl-Market Bank & Trust Company. Gustave M. Moaler, President of the Brighton Bank, will head the combined Brighton-Pearl Market institutions. The $10 par value shares have been listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange and on the Louisville Stock Exchange. The present resources of the new institution are around $215,000,000. Mr. James B. Brown, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, is president of the new company.

The dividend policy of the BancoKentucky Company has not yet been announced.

BancoKentucky stock has advanced rapidly in the Louisville and Chicago markets and has been traded in large volume since BancoKentucky certificates were issued October 1st. The stock should be bought as an investment to be held over a period of time rather than as a speculation, for several points' profit. For the patient holder the stock has tremendous potential value.

Mrs. Pridday's note will be due August 27th and it will be our pleasure to renew this note for you. In my opinion it will be a mistake for you to sell the stock at the present price, in fact the market is absolutely dead now and I don't think you could sell it.

Don't think I am getting rough as I am just trying to get it over to you that we meant what we said when we made these loans, and that was it would be our pleasure to carry them as long as you wanted them carried, and you are not imposing on anybody.

I am glad you wrote Mr. Brown about the BancoKentucky Company as he is very much entranced over it, and in this connection if you want something good to put away in your old box you ought to subscribe for some of this stock. Mr. Brown said to me the other night " Nearly every man has one chance in a life time, and listen sporty here's your chance, wade in up to your neck and then take on a little more", and believe me I stepped in.

Dear Mr. Pridday:

Enclosed please find broker's statement, covering sale of 50 shares Continental Can which we sold for you in accordance with your instructions of August 15th. We have credited your account with the proceeds in amount $4088.00, and will wait until we hear from you before applying this on your loan.

Mr. Pridday I have given a good deal of thought to your financial program as outlined by you, and think well of it, with the exception of American Turf and Standard Oil of Kentucky, which in my opinion would be a crime for you to sell at these prices, unless as you suggested you might get in on some good ones and make more money in less time, by selling 200 of Turf and 100 of Kentucky, but I still think they would have to be mighty good ones to make me sell these stocks at your figures.

The BancoKentucky stock will be sold to everyone at the same price, and that will be $25.00 per share, payable on September 10th. I believe I told you in a previous letter that I intended to sell my American Turf and Standard Oil of Kentucky, and in fact all of the stock that I am interested in, and put it in BancoKentucky stock; however I am selling none of them at these prices, as I think Turf will easily sell back to $60.00 and Standard Oil of Kentucky, in my opinion will sell close to $80.00 by the end of this year.

It is hard to put in writing how we feel about the BancoKentucky Company and its future, but believe me we are all very enthusiastic and optimistic about the Company, and I will say to you as coming from Mr. Brown that we all expect to make a lot of money out of this stock in the next few years. Of course it will not be a spectacular mover. Mr. Brown thinks it is good for 10 points a year for the next five years, and when you get one as good as we know this is that will make 10 points a year for you for the next five years, it certainly seems to me that it is well worth while, and Mr. Brown and myself think that you should have 1000 shares.

The stock in my opinion will pay from the beginning at the same rate the bank stock is now paying, which would be $3 cents per share per annum, and I think within a reasonable length of time it can easily pay more. One thousand shares would cost you

Dear Mr. Hall:

Receipt is acknowledged your letters August 18th and 19th, in which you enclosed two checks aggregating $88.00 which we have credited to the checking account of Mrs. Hall. Also check for $36.00 which we have credited to Miss Noel Hall's savings account, balance to her credit as shown by our books, including this deposit, is $222.21. Also $12.00 check which we have credited to Miss Edith Hall's savings account, balance to her credit as shown by our books, including this deposit, is $234.51.

Mr. Hall, as you and Mrs. Hall may not return to Louisville before the middle of September, we are enclosing some literature on the Bancokentucky Company, which we are organizing, and which we think will be of interest to you. As explained in the enclosed letter that was mailed to the present stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company under date of July 19th, this stock will be sold at $25.00 per share, payment to be made on September 19th. Knowing that this is a gilt edge investment, and believing it will greatly enhance in value within a reasonable length of time, earnestly recommend that you and Mrs. Hall subscribe for a substantial amount of this stock.

Trusting that this finds you and yours enjoying the best of health, and with kindest regards, beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Hall:

Receipt is acknowledged your letter August 26th with reference to dividend rate of the BancoKentucky Company.

In reply beg to advise that while no rate has yet been definitely decided upon it is the writer's understanding that the BancoKentucky Company stock will at least pay a rate equivalent to that now being paid by the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, which would be $0 cents per share annually on the BancoKentucky Company stock, this being about 8 1/2% yield on your investment.

In the event you desire to subscribe we will be pleased to finance it for you until you return to the city, and longer if you so desire.

Mr. Hall I earnestly believe this is an opportunity that you and Mrs. Hall should not overlook, and I sincerely trust that you will subscribe liberally.

Upon receipt of advice from you we shall be pleased to enter your subscription.

Trusting that this finds you and yours enjoying the best of health, and with kindest regards, beg to remain,

Dear Mr. Fontaine:

I have your letter and booklet regarding the Banco Kentucky Company. This sounds very interesting. Mrs. Hall and I, I think would like to make a subscription, but would like to know just a little more about the corporation in regard to dividends. Has the initial dividend rate been decided upon? I also note that stock must be paid for by September 19th. If we decide to subscribe to this stock, we could not pay for it until we got back to Louisville and sold some other securities, but I suppose you could arrange to make us a temporary loan until we got back sometime in October, as you have, I think, some surplus collateral.

Receipt is acknowledged your letter August 21st.

In reply beg to advise that $5,000.00 Louisville Title Company bond if paid for on Monday August 26th will cost $5,022.50. The reason I say on August 26th is interest is accruing every day, and of course if paid Tuesday day the accrued interest would be more; in other words the interest is accruing every day.

Sorry I did not get to talk to you about the investment as I would like to have seen you invested at least part of this in our new company, as I know this is a gilt edge investment, and in my opinion will make a lot of money for you in the next few years. It is BancoKentucky Company, a fifty million corporation which we are organizing that will own the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company. Enclosed you will find literature on this Company, and if interested you can advise me.

It will be our pleasure to buy the Louisville Title Company Bonds for you, and we will do so upon receipt of your reply.

Dear Mr. Pridday:

Your letter of the 16th received and greatly appreciated. I have delayed answering in the hope that something might turn up that would enable me to be of assistance to you in behalf of our mutual friend about whom you wrote. I was greatly surprised to hear of his misfortune, as I was under the impression he was getting along fine. Positions here are awfully scarce and hard to get. I know of absolutely nothing at the present time, but will keep you in mind, and if I hear of anything at all will certainly do my part in trying to get him located.

I had the pleasure of sitting in the meeting with Mr. Brown together with two of your New York men, and Mr.Weiser, Mr. McKim, Mr. Pirtle and Mr. Wilhoyte from your local store. As you say, unfortunately they united too late before talking the matter up with Mr. Brown as the bill had passed both house and the senate by a large majority. The boys went into action immediately in their presence and did all he could to get the bill vetoed, but matters were in such a mess at Frankfort he was too late in getting into action.

We are very much impressed with Mr. McKim and it will certainly be our pleasure to be of every assistance to him that we can. I have impressed upon him a couple of times that if we can ever be of any service to him in any way not to hesitate to call upon us. As pleased to advise he opened his account with us in our Fifth and Main Street office. He apparently has had some unpleasant dealings with some branch banks in California, and did not understand our situation here at the time he opened his account, which was before I had a chance to meet him. Since explaining the situation to him he has intimated that he is going to transfer his account out here, of course it doesn't make any difference to us.

American Turf is a little quite at present, the stock sold yesterday at 29; not much stock on the market at 30. We got a flash yesterday that the supreme court would hand down their decision today; of course there is nothing authentic about that, in fact I hardly look for it today, however or would like to see it handed down before their annual meeting the 7th of next month. Talk on the street is a stock dividend will be paid at that time; one share for every six held, but this is just street talk as I have heard nothing from any authentic source. Personally I do not look for a stock dividend at this time. I do think the court decision is good for a 3 point advance; the stock may sell as high as 40 by Derby day.

Mr. J. E. Priddy,

Ramco is selling today at 24 3/4; the market is quite active. It certainly looks better to me than at any time. We bought ten [illegible] yesterday/ the Security Bank of this city and the Ashland National Bank of Ashland, Kentucky; this brings our total up to nine. This just for you - one big deal in the making which if consummated will be an eye opener example you. As I see the picture a price of 35 a share for Ramco is just around the corner, and possibilities unlimited. It sure looks good to me.

Can't you find some excuse to run down for a few days as we would all like to see you.

If I don't stop writing you will have to take a vacation to read this letter.

Will close for this time with the hope that this finds you and yours enjoying the very best of health.

ATTENTION: MR. QUIN

Gentlemen: -

Confirming some recent correspondence between our Mr. Jones with your Mr. Proctor, I transmit herewith a resolution adopted by the holders of thirty-eight thousand seven hundred twenty-six (38,726) shares of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky out of a total of forty thousand (40,000) shares issued and outstanding as of this date.

This resolution was prepared under the direction of counsel who recently appeared before you in connection with the consolidation of the Louisville National Bank & Trust Company with The Louisville Trust Company and it is, therefore, hoped that you will find it in proper form.

As soon as your department has approved and lodged for record this resolution, the Directors of this Bank will incorporate a State Bank under the Laws of Kentucky, to be known as the Bank of Kentucky; and this Bank will acquire and succeed to all of the assets, rights and franchises of the National Bank.

In accordance with your regulations, a certified copy of the contract between the State Bank and the National Bank, in liquidation, will be sent to you for record. The remaining details, such as a resolution authorizing the Comptroller to withdraw from the Treasury the bonds securing circulation, the formal notices in New York, and all matters relating to our status with the Reserve Bank will be attended to later under the guidance of your department. Copies of all notices, resolutions, etc., will be sent to your office as required.

Kindly acknowledge receipt of the enclosed application for liquidation and advise us if everything is in proper form at your earliest convenience.

With kindest regards, I remain,

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Jones:

I am glad to report that on yesterday I talked to the Comptroller of the Currency by long distance telephone and received his assurance that the papers had been filed and were in proper form, and that we were authorized to proceed with the other details in connection with the conversion of the National Bank of Kentucky into a State Bank. I have prepared all the necessary papers and after the Directors and Trustees have approved same at tomorrow's meeting, we will be able to close this transaction on Saturday by filing Articles of Incorporation at Frankfort.

I am submitting herewith a number of things that must be done tomorrow, so that you can advise Mr. Brown in advance of the meeting and get the details over with before the Directors begin to leave the meeting.

1. The Articles of Incorporation of The Bank of Kentucky must be signed in duplicate by all the Directors present and acknowledged before a Notary Public. I suggest that this be done during the interval between the meeting of the Boards, as I desire to record the original in the Office of the Jefferson County Court Clerk tomorrow afternoon; the duplicate will be sent forward to Frankfort Saturday morning for filing, and I have arranged with Miss Elle Lewis to meet me there around 10:00 o'clock by special appointment since the State Capitol will be closed on account of the legal holiday. Will you please have a Notary Public - not an employee of the Bank, present to take the acknowledgments of the Directors?

2. I have prepared a contract between the old bank and the new bank, in which the Trustees join, the effect of which is to transfer the assets of the latter to the former, and direct the issue of stock of the new bank to the Trustees and other persons entitled thereto, in the same proportion as they now hold the old stock. The present Board can authorize the execution of this contract for the National Bank of Kentucky; when we meet next week as the Board of the New bank, similar action can be taken on its behalf.

3. I will desire a short meeting of the Trustees for the purpose of authorizing Henry Vogt as Chairman and John Akers as Secretary to sign and authenticate this contract.

4. I have prepared a resolution for the Directors, authorizing Mr. Brown as President and yourself as Cashier to execute this contract on behalf of the Bank.

5. I have also prepared a resolution authorizing the Comptroller of the Currency to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, bonds deposited against the circulation of the Bank, and authorizing your Eastern correspondent to endorse these securities whenever they are sold for the purpose of redeeming the circulation.

You will remember that the old Louisville National Bank arranged to sell its bonds to Childs, and I believe the authority was given to him to act for the Bank in these matters. You and Mr. Brown might be thinking of the proper agencies to handle this for the National Bank of Kentucky.

Yours sincerely,

Robert Vaughan

OFFICIAL REPORTER

October 22, 1929.

Mr. Chas. F. Jones, Cashier,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mr. Jones:

Your attorney, Mr. Robert F. Vaughan, advises us that another stockholders' meeting was held on October 15, at which it was voted to make the liquidation of the National Bank of Kentucky effective close of business November 15 instead of October 15. He suggested that we make an examination of the bank within the extended period so that when the transfers are made to the new State bank it will be immediately admitted to membership without interruption of the rediscounting privilege.

We prefer to defer the examination until the new State bank has received its charter and has taken over such assets and liabilities of the national bank as it is going to have. This will give the management ample opportunity to correct the criticisms contained in the last examination of the national bank as of May 25, 1929. In this connection, I attach a list of the sub-standard assets which we feel should not be taken over by the new State bank.

In the meantime, I suggest that the National Bank of Kentucky make application in behalf of the Bank of Kentucky for membership in the Federal Reserve System if and when the conversion takes place. This could be passed upon by the Federal Reserve Board before November 15, so that if approved there would be no interruption in the membership of the institution.

I enclose a copy of Form 83a, changed so that application could be made by the National Bank of Kentucky in behalf of the proposed State bank. The resolution embodied therein could be adopted by the Executive Committee provided it has full powers between board meetings. The application should be accompanied by a copy of the articles of incorporation of the State bank. When it receives its charter a copy of it should also be furnished us.

Of course, if the application is approved it would be done subject to the conditions contained in Regulation H issued by the Federal Reserve Board, Series of 1928, and also upon condition that certain objectionable assets are not taken over by the new institution and other criticisms corrected. Shortly after the new bank opens for business our examiners would make an examination to see that the conditions have been complied with.

In case you would like to call to discuss the situation in person, we shall be glad to see you at any time.

Yours very truly,

C. N. Stewart
Asst. Federal Reserve Agent.

Exhibit 54

P. S. The foregoing suggestions are made in order to comply with that part of Section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act which specifies that in acting upon applications of State banks for membership in the Federal Reserve System, "the Federal Reserve Board shall consider the financial condition of the applying bank, the general character of its management, and whether or not the corporate powers exercised are consistent with the purposes of this Act."

Dear Mr. Brown:

When I was in Louisville on February 28th I was disappointed in not getting to see you, but did have a conference with Messrs. Ormsby, Angermeier and Akers. At that time I called attention to the fact that your bank had been a continuous borrower and expressed the hope that there would be some liquidation.

On August 20th I again visited Louisville but did not get to see you this time, my conference being with Messrs. Angermeier, Akers and Fontaine. The continuous borrowing of your bank was again called to the attention of these gentlemen and I tried to make it plain that liquidation was highly desirable. I was hoping that I would get the cooperation of your bank, but instead both the loans and investments of your bank have increased and also your borrowings from us. Yours is the only exception to the splendid cooperation we have received from all of the other banks in this district. Our Executive Committee feels that some definite action should be taken in this matter immediately.

I believe it will be helpful if you personally would come to St. Louis so we can talk this matter over, bringing with you, of course, any of your officers that you would like to have with you. I would be glad to see you any time Thursday or Friday of this week that suits your convenience or some day early next week. Please wire when you expect to be here.

Mr. Chas. F. Jones, Cashier,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mr. Jones:

On November 15, 1929, we received a telegram from the Manager of our Louisville Branch stating that the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky had voted to make the liquidation effective close of business December 28, 1929.

On October 24, 1929, in an effort to avoid interruption in membership, I sent you a copy of Form 83a, changed so that application could be made by the National Bank of Kentucky in behalf of the proposed State bank for membership in the Federal Reserve System. Herewith I send you three copies of Form 86 for use by the Liquidating Agent of the National Bank of Kentucky in applying for surrender of the stock which it holds in the Federal Reserve Bank.

If the National Bank of Kentucky expects to be succeeded by a new State bank at close of business December 28, I suggest that both of the above mentioned applications be forwarded to me as soon as possible.

Yours very truly,

C. M. Stewart

Asst. Federal Reserve Agent.

ACTION

A.J.Carroll,
Henry Vogt,
R. Lee Callahan,
George M.Clarke,
Robert P. Vaughan,
Allen P. Dodd, individually and as the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of The Ennis Kentucky Company, Plaintiffs,

-vs- PETITION IN EQUITY

Chemical Bank and Trust Company,
The Ennis Kentucky Company, Defendants.

* * *

The plaintiffs, A.J. Carroll, Henry Vogt, R. Lee Callahan, George M. Clarke, Robert P. Vaughan and Allen P. Dodd, for petition herein state that they are and were at all times herein the owners and holders, in their own right, of more than 800 shares of the capital stock of the defendant, The Ennis Kentucky Company, and that they were likewise the duly elected, qualified and acting members of the Board of Directors of said defendant and were with James Garnett likewise duly elected, qualified and acting members of the Executive Committee of said defendant, with full power and authority as such to carry on the affairs of said corporation in the manner described in the by-laws and a resolution of the Board of Directors of said corporation hereinafter set out.

At all of said times the defendant, The Bankers Kentucky Company, was a corporation duly created, organized and existing under the laws of the state of Delaware with power to sue and be sued, contract and be contracted with, and to own, hold, sell and deal in the stocks and bonds of other corporations. The powers of said defendant corporation are more than specifically described in its Articles of Incorporation, a copy of which is hereto attached marked "Exhibit A".

Said corporation during all of said times and since its organization about July 16,1929, has carried on and operated its business in the State of Kentucky and City of Louisville and all of its property and estate of every kind is now located and held in said state and city.

Likewise at all times herein mentioned the defendant, Chemical Bank and Trust Company, was a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the state of New York, with power to sue and be sued, contract and be contracted with, and to carry on a general banking business under the laws of said state of New York.

One, Paul C. Keyes, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, is and has been, continuously, at all times since November 18,1930, the officer designated by the Controller of Currency of the United States under the National Banking Act to have charge and control of all of the assets and property and affairs of the National Bank of Kentucky, a corporation theretofore operating in the City of Louisville a national banking institution under and by virtue of the laws of the United States.

Exhibit 66

The plaintiffs say that prior to November 17, 1930, the defendant, The Bunco Kentucky Company, was in the pursuance of its business the owner and holder of large amounts of the capital stock in the following banks:

National Bank of Kentucky,

The Louisville Trust Company,

Brighton Bank and Trust Company of Cincinnati, Ohio,

Pearl-Christ Bank and Trust Company,

Central Savings Bank and Trust Company of Covington, Kentucky,

First National Bank of Paducah, Kentucky,

Ashland National Bank,

which holdings represented substantially all of the property and assets belonging to said defendant.

On said November 17, 1930, for causes over which these plaintiffs had no control, the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, both large banking institutions in the city of Louisville, were compelled to suspend business and be placed under the control and in charge of public authority, with the result that grave complications arose which made it impossible to conduct the affairs of The Bunco Kentucky Company in the manner and for the purposes for which it was organized, and with the further result that the creditors of and stockholders' interest in said Bunco Kentucky Company were gravely jeopardized and the orderly conduct of its business in normal fashion became impossible.

In pursuance of their powers as Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of said Bunco Kentucky Company these plaintiffs disposed immediately of all of its holdings of stock in the aforesaid two banks in Cincinnati, two banks in Covington and the Bank in Ashland for the purpose of enabling those banks to proceed in the operation of their respective businesses and to protect their depositors from the results of public excitement.

As to the holdings of said defendant in the bank at Paducah, said holdings were rendered of doubtful value by the fact that the officers and directors of said bank at Paducah, of their own motion, and without the consent or approval of The Banco Kentucky Company disposed of all the assets of said Paducah Bank as a going concern to another bank in that locality.

In the performance of their duties as Executive Committee these plaintiffs caused the proceeds of the sale of its holdings of stock in the aforesaid banks at Cincinnati, Covington and Ashland to be placed in the custody of Paul C. Keyes, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, and same are now by him so held.

In addition to said proceeds said defendant, The Banco Kentucky Company, owns shares of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, which stock constitute the only assets of said defendant, except the deposit aforesaid held by Paul C. Keyes.

The defendant, The Banco Kentucky Company, is now and has been for sometime past indebted to the defendant Chemical Bank and Trust Company in the sum of $1,600,000, subject to a credit of $300,000, and said defendant is the only creditor of the defendant, The Banco Kentucky Company, except the National Bank of Kentucky, to which is owed approximately $131,000.

Plaintiffs say that the stockholders in the Ranco Kentucky Company all have a common and general interest in the questions involved in the further prosecution of the business of said defendant and in the liquidation of its affairs and that said stockholders are numerous, aggregating many thousands of people, so that it is impracticable to bring them all before the court within a reasonable time, and these plaintiffs, as the representatives of said stockholders, and by virtue of their authority as the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of said defendant, prosecute this action for the protection and benefit of all of the stockholders and the said creditors of said defendant, in order to bring the management of its affairs hereafter under the supervision of this court of equity through its receiver to the end that no questions may arise as to the authority and propriety involved in any of the important acts that will be necessary to accomplish a liquidation and distribution of the assets of said defendant to its creditors and stockholders.

Plaintiffs say that the defendant, The Ranco Kentucky Compan., is threatened with a multiplicity of suits to determine the rights to dispose of its assets and in the liquidation of its affairs and in the distribution of the proceeds thereof, all of which will cause unnecessary expense and delay and irreparably injured the value of the interests of said defendants' creditors and stockholders in said liquidation.

Exhibit 66

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs pray the orders and judgment of this court appointing a Receiver for the defendant, The Kanco Kentucky Company, to take charge of all of its assets, books, papers and effects and to hold, manage and dispose of same under the supervision of this court, and that said defendant and all of its officers and all other persons be ordered and directed to deliver to said receiver all of the aforesaid property in their hands and over which they have control belonging to said defendant; and that all persons be enjoined and restrained from instituting any suit against said defendant or prosecuting any claim against it, except in this action; and they pray for all other and proper relief.

David R. Castleman
Attorney for plaintiffs.

(b) certificates theretofore registered and delivered upon transfers by any of said Registrars, or any successor or additional Registrar appointed by this Corporation, and countersigned by any of said Transfer Agents, or any successor or additional Transfer Agent appointed by this Corporation; and to register and to countersign new certificates accordingly when they shall have been signed by said officers of this Corporation and countersigned and delivered to them for such purpose by the Transfer Agent in the same city, provided, however, that no Registrar shall be under any duty whatever in connection with the names in which certificates are issued or the correctness of any transfer from one name to another;

making the total authorization, to date, of said Registrars, including the additional issue mentioned in paragraph "THIRD" hereof and all previous authorizations, cover:

Class	Shares
Common	Two Million (2,000,000)

* Paragraph (b) to be voided if no stock has been previously issued.

(3) That each Transfer Agent and Registrar shall be fully protected in conclusively relying upon any certificate as to the number of shares, if any, now outstanding, or other information or data concerning the certificates of stock representing such shares furnished to it by any prior Transfer Agent and Registrar respectively or by an officer of this Corporation.

(4) The certificates of stock may be delivered at the option of the Transfer Agents and Registrars, either by the Registrar to the transferee or his agent, or returned to the Transfer Agent for delivery to the transferee or his agent.

FIFTH: That said Transfer Agents may establish such rules and regulations governing the issuance and transfer of the certificates of stock as may seem advisable to them, and as may not be inconsistent with the provisions of these resolutions and may open and keep such stock or transfer book or books as may be required by law or for their own convenience in the performance of said agency. It is the intention and purpose of these resolutions that said The National Bank of Kentucky shall act as the principal Transfer Agent of this Corporation, and maintain consolidated stockholders ledgers, which will be a record of all of the certificates issued and cancelled by itself and the Co-Transfer Agent respectively; and it will be expected to furnish the stockholders lists for annual meetings, dividend or other purposes upon a written request of the President or Vice President, Secretary or Assistant Secretary of the Company.

PPG-1-R

SIXTH: It is the intention and purpose of these resolutions that certificates of the stock of this Corporation shall be interchangeably transferable in the cities of Chicago, Illinois, and Louisville, Kentucky. The fact of the recording, registration and countersignature of new certificates, whether by way of an original issue or upon a transfer, shall be advised daily by mail by the Transfer Agent countersigning them to the other Transfer Agents and by the Registrar registering and countersigning them to the other Registrars, and each Transfer Agent and Registrar shall be fully protected and held harmless by this Corporation in relying on any such advice, and in its failure or refusal to transfer or register respectively any certificates countersigned by another Transfer Agent or Registrar when it shall not have received such notice of the issue or registry and countersignature of such certificates.

SEVENTH: That specimens or facsimiles of the signatures of the officers of this Corporation now authorized to sign stock certificates as aforesaid, or heretofore authorized to sign stock certificates which are outstanding, be lodged forthwith with each of the Transfer Agents and Registrars to be used by them for the purpose of comparison with signatures appearing on the certificates of stock of this Corporation presented to them or any of them for issue, transfer or registration respectively. When any officer of this Corporation shall no longer be vested with authority to sign for the Corporation, written notice thereof shall immediately be given to each of the Transfer Agents and Registrars and until receipt of such notice the Transfer Agents and Registrars shall be fully protected and held harmless in recognizing and acting upon certificates bearing the signature of such officer or signatures believed by them or any of them in good faith to be such genuine signature.

EIGHTH: That from time to time additional officers may be appointed by resolutions of the Board of Directors of this Corporation not inconsistent with its By-Laws to sign certificates of stock on behalf of this Corporation, and in every such case certified copies of the resolutions of this Board effecting such appointment, and specimen signatures of such officers, shall forthwith be lodged with each of the Transfer Agents and Registrars.

NINTH: That the authority of the said Transfer Agents and the Registrars respectively shall also extend to the authentication by such Transfer Agents and Registrars of any certificate or certificates of stock which may be issued by the authority of this Corporation, evidenced by a certified copy of a resolution of the Board of Directors of this Corporation, in lieu of a lost or destroyed certificate or certificates of stock. A satisfactory indemnity bond shall be required in such amount as the Directors may designate or as may be provided by the By-Laws of this Corporation, and in any event for not less than the value of such certificate, wherein this Corporation, the Transfer Agents and the Registrars shall be named as the obligees. The bond shall be in a form and amount and with surety or sureties satisfactory to this Corporation, the Transfer Agents and the Registrars.

TENTH: That when any Transfer Agent or Registrar deems it expedient, it may apply to any officer of this Corporation or to counsel for this Corporation, or to its own counsel, for instructions and advice and for any action taken in accordance with such instructions or advice this Corporation will fully indemnify, protect and hold harmless such Transfer Agent and such Registrar from any and all liability. None of the Transfer Agents and Registrars shall be in any manner liable for any act or omission of any other Transfer Agent and Registrar.

ELEVENTH: That each of the Transfer Agents and Registrars shall be entitled to the usual and customary compensation for all services rendered in the execution of its duties, and to reimbursement for all reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of such duties, including fees of its counsel for advice rendered in connection with such agency, and the proper officers of this Corporation are hereby authorized to pay all bills therefor when rendered.

TWELFTH: That the Transfer Agents and Registrars may employ agents or attorneys in fact, and shall not be answerable for the default or misconduct of any agent or attorney appointed by them in pursuance hereof, if such agent or attorney shall have been selected with reasonable care; nor shall any Transfer Agent or Registrar be liable for anything whatever in connection with this agency, except its willful misconduct. This Corporation shall indemnify and hold harmless each Transfer Agent and Registrar for any act done by it in good faith in reliance upon any instrument, order or stock certificate believed by it to be genuine and to be signed, countersigned or executed by any person or persons authorized to sign, countersign or execute the same.

THIRTEENTH: That the authority of the Transfer Agents and Registrars, and each of them as such Transfer Agent and Registrar, shall also extend to the issue and registration of such additional shares of stock as may be authorized by this Corporation within the limits of its charter or certificates of incorporation or any amendments thereto.

FOURTEENTH: That the President or Vice President and the Secretary or an Assistant Secretary of this Corporation be, and they hereby are, directed to certify copies of these resolutions under the seal of this Corporation and to lodge a certified copy with each Transfer Agent and Registrar, together with:

(1) specimens of certificates of each class of stock covered by these resolutions in the form adopted by this Corporation; (2) specimen signatures of all of the officers of this Corporation duly authorized to sign or countersign any stock certificates hereafter issued; (3) specimens of facsimiles of the signatures of all of the officers of this Corporation, heretofore authorized to sign or whose signatures appear upon stock certificates now outstanding, if any; (4) a certified copy of the Charter or Certificate of Incorporation of this Corporation, including all of the amendments thereto; (5) a certified copy of the By-Laws of this Corporation, as at present in force, and to furnish each Transfer Agent and Registrar certified copies of any amendments that may, from time to time be made to the Charter or Certificate of Incorporation or By-Laws, and (6) an opinion of Counsel for this Corporation as to (a) the validity of its organization and (b) its authority to issue the shares of stock herein authorized to be transferred and registered.

National Bank of Kentucky,
The Louisville Trust Company,
of Louisville, Ky.

The Brighton Bank and Trust Company,
The Pearl-Market Bank and Trust Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio

The Peoples Liberty Bank and Trust Company,
The Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Covington, Ky.

On completion of the exchange of its shares for shares of the above banks and trust companies there will be outstanding 1,750,000 shares ($10.00 par value) of an authorized issue of 5,000,000 shares.

The Company was originally capitalized for 2,000,000 shares $10.00 par common stock. On January 14, 1930, the stockholders ratified and approved an increase to 5,000,000 shares to provide for expansion.

The earnings for the quarter ending December 31, 1929, were at the rate of 13.1% per annum, out of which the initial quarterly dividend of 2% or 20c per share was paid January 1, 1930.

Your corporation and its banks, since December 31, 1929, have liquidated all bills payable and now have no indebtedness.

The BancoKentucky Company has propositions pending at this time, which, when consummated will more than double the total resources of the Company and materially increase its earnings.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF

July 22, 1930

Mr. J. T. Burchmiede, Cashier
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mr. Burchmiede:-

The Committee on Branch, Group and Chain Banking of the Federal Reserve Board has prepared a schedule for collecting information regarding the operation of group banking which it is anxious to have submitted to the more important groups in the several Federal Reserve districts.

The Committee wishes to secure as much information as possible bearing on the actual operations of group banking systems and such information as is available regarding their merits as contrasted with other forms of banking organizations. To this end cooperation of the controlling agencies of the groups is solicited. However, this is purely a request and in no sense a requirement, and we will be greatly obliged for any help you may feel disposed to give in the undertaking.

In view of the universal interest in this general subject and the importance given to the development of group banking systems, it occurred to the Committee that those responsible for their operations will doubtless welcome the opportunity to state their views and to give the benefit of their experience.

I enclose a copy of the schedule for your consideration and can assure you of my personal appreciation, as well as that of the Committee, for any information you may give.

Very truly yours,

Federal Reserve Agent.

1. Name of

2. Location of Incorporation

3. Describe fully the structure of your group, indicating where the ultimate controlling authority lies and through what channels this authority is exercised.

4. General powers of the holding company or controlling agency. (Submit as exhibit copy of charter, articles of incorporation, by-laws.)

5. Capital structure:
Classes of stock, par value and book value of each class, number of shares of each class authorised and issued, voting power of each class and the number of stockholders of each class.

6. Stock distribution:
What proportion of the stock is held in the city where the holding company or controlling agency is located? In the cities and towns where the banks of the group are located? In the state of the holding company or controlling company? What proportion held by stock exchange houses and houses of issue and distribution?

7. Has any stock of the corporation been issued for cash, either by public offer or otherwise? If so, state amount of cash so realised and furnish prospectus of offering.

8. What liability, if any, have the stockholders of the holding company for the debts of the company in excess of their share ownership? If none, is there any other provision safeguarding the double liability attaching to the shares of banks owned. Has the protection offered bank creditors by double liability been impaired by transferring ownership to the holding company?

9. List the officers and directors of the holding company and their principal business affiliations.

10. Furnish statement of the resources and liabilities of the holding company.

13. What methods have you used to determine the values upon which exchange of stock or purchase has been made?

14. Describe the method of handling slow and doubtful assets of banks acquired by you, and indicate what success you have had in liquidating such assets.

II. Economic background

1. Outline briefly the development of your group, indicating what considerations and conditions were most influential. Has the development been largely a matter of choice with you, or has it been impelled by social and economic changes? If the latter, please describe them as specifically as possible.

2. Presumably many formerly independent enterprises (stores, factories, etc.) operating in your region have been absorbed in recent years by larger companies, with the result that the local banking connections have been disturbed. If so, can you give a representative list of such cases? Are your banks seriously affected by the tendency?

3. Have you taken over any weak or unprofitable banks that are now being operated successfully? If so, to what do you attribute the fact that they are now successful?

4. Have you established any banks in communities which would probably not support independent unit banks? Have such banks been profitable? What advantage have such banks that enables them to succeed where the independent banks would not?

5. Have you been operating any banks at a loss in the expectation that community growth would make them profitable? If so, describe the conditions.

6. Describe the economic character of the territory covered by your organization, indicating what diversification of business is secured by your system.

7. According to your experience what is the minimum condition compare with those of the independent banks in the same communities?

13. In case the credit demands on a particular bank are in excess of the funds available, what assistance is rendered by the controlling interest or by other banks of the group? Describe in some detail the mechanism and process by which this assistance is rendered.

14. Through the process of shifting funds from one bank to another as the needs determine are you able to meet all the credit demands on the various banks without going outside your group, or do you sometimes borrow from the Federal reserve bank or your metropolitan correspondents?

15. What is the maximum ratio of capital to deposits among your banks? The minimum? The average?

16. Do you make up a daily or weekly summary of the condition of all banks in your group? If so, please attach a copy of the form used for such summary.

17. Have you a fixed rule as to the proportion of deposits that must be carried as cash in vault by your banks? If it varies for different banks, give the reason therefor. For your entire group how much cash in vault is carried in proportion to deposits?

18. What, if any, economies have been effected in the operation of your banks since they were acquired? If possible, give specific evidences of such economies in Salaries and payroll,

Forms, supplies and equipment,
Other costs - specify

19. How do the costs of operating the banks in your group compare with the costs of the same institutions when operating as independent unit banks?

20. Have you prepared a combined profit and loss statement for all your banks? If so, please attach a copy.

21. How many of your banks do a personal trust business? Taking the banks as a whole, how important are the trust operations in your system? Give figures to illustrate. What supervision of trust operations do you exercise?

22. How many of your banks sell securities? Are your banks important outlets for the sale of securities? Do you originate issues, either directly or through an affiliate?

23. Do your banks lend on the stock of the other members of the group as collateral or on the stock of the holding company? Do you think such loans should be prohibited?

24. When an independent bank enters your group, how are correspondent relations affected? Do members as a rule close all correspondent accounts except with other members of the group? Taking the group as a whole are balances carried by the system with outside correspondents greater or less than they would be if there were no group?

25. What effect, in your opinion, would the general development of group banking have upon correspondent relationships as they have developed under the independent unit banking system?

26. When a member of the Federal Reserve System joins your group, are its relations with its Federal reserve bank modified in any way? What effect does membership in the group have upon borrowing or rediscounting with the Federal reserve bank?

27. What effect would the general development of group banking have upon the Federal Reserve System?

28. Describe your method of clearing checks, indicating particularly whether your units clear with one another, or whether checks on other banks of your group are collected through the Federal reserve banks and/or correspondents.

V. Public relations

1. Is there any general prejudice in your territory against chain, group, or branch banking?

2. Do your banks offer any services to the public in addition to those offered by them before they were taken over? What are they?

3. Have there been any changes in the credit policies of any of your banks since they were acquired, with the result that certain types of borrowers find it more difficult to get credit? If so, have you had an undue amount of protest from these quarters with perhaps some propaganda against your group system?

4. What in general is the size and type of community served by your banks? In what size communities do the branches, if any, of your banks operate?

5. If the law permitted, would the management prefer to organize this group into a branch banking system? If not, would your banks organize branches in the smaller communities?

6. What in your opinion is the major cause of failure of so many banks in small rural communities? Will independent unit banks be able to operate successfully in most of these communities in the future? If not, do you think group banks can safely furnish deposit and credit facilities to such communities or can they be more satisfactorily taken care of by branch banking systems?

7. Has the Comptroller of the Currency or the State banking department been consulted at any time with respect to the formation of your group or its policies and activities?

8. Do you think that bank holding companies such as yours should be under the supervision of either the Comptroller of the Currency or the State banking department?

Assistant Secretary,
Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System

July 18, 1930.

Mr. Rolla Wells,
Federal Reserve Agent,
Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis,
St. Louis, Missouri.

Dear Mr. Wells:

The Committee on Branch, Group and Chain Banking has prepared a schedule for collecting information regarding the operation of group banking systems and would like to have it submitted to the more important groups of the country.

It is the desire of the Committee to secure as much information as possible as to the actual operations of group banking systems and such information as is available regarding their merits as compared with other forms of banking organizations. In the collection of this information the cooperation of the controlling executive of the groups is solicited. This is purely a request, however, and in no sense a requirement. The purpose of the schedule is to insure the specific information which is desired and to insure the collection of comparable data in some systematic form from the various institutions.

In view of the universal interest in this subject and the importance given to the development of group banking systems, those responsible for their operations will doubtless welcome the opportunity to state their views and to give the Committee the benefit of their experience.

Following its usual procedure the Committee would like you to present the schedule to the group systems in your district. The method of submission is a matter of your own discretion. In most cases it may be sufficient to send the schedule by mail, but in some cases better results might be secured by a personal visit from some representative of the Federal Reserve Bank to the head of the group system. When these schedules are completed and returned to you, perhaps you may wish to look them over and supplement them with any special information or views which you may have.

Mr. Rolla Wells #2 July 18, 1930.

A number of copies of the schedule are enclosed, and if additional copies are desired they can be readily supplied. I suggest it be submitted to the institutions in your district listed below or to any others which you think would be productive of results. As a rule the names on the list are holding companies, but in a few cases the names of banks which control other banks directly were included.

First National Corp., Louisville, Ky.
Rogers Caldwell, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.
Hooe Kentucky Corp., Louisville, Tenn.

Very truly yours,

J. W. Riddle,
Secretary, Committee on Branch,
Group and Chain Banking.

23. Do your banks lend on the stock of the other members of the group as collateral or on the stock of the holding company? Do you think such loans should be prohibited?

24. When an independent bank enters your group, how are correspondent relations affected? Do members as a rule close all correspondent accounts except with other members of the group? Taking the group as a whole are balances carried by the system with outside correspondents greater or less than they would be if there were no group?

25. What effect, in your opinion, would the general development of group banking have upon correspondent relationships as they have developed under the independent unit banking system?

26. When a member of the Federal Reserve System joins your group, are its relations with its Federal reserve bank modified in any way? What effect does membership in the group have upon borrowing or rediscounting with the Federal reserve bank?

27. What effect would the general development of group banking have upon the Federal Reserve System?

28. Describe your method of clearing checks, indicating particularly whether your units clear with one another, or whether checks on other banks of your group are collected through the Federal reserve banks and/or correspondents.

V. Public relations

1. Is there any general prejudice in your territory against chain, group, or branch banking?

2. Do your banks offer any services to the public in addition to those offered by them before they were taken over? What are they?

3. Have there been any changes in the credit policies of any of your banks since they were acquired, with the result that certain types of borrowers find it more difficult to get credit? If so, have you had an undue amount of protest from these quarters with perhaps some propaganda against your group system?

4. What in general is the size and type of community served by your banks? In what size communities do the branches, if any, of your banks operate?

5. If the law permitted, would the management prefer to organize this group into a branch banking system? If not, would your banks organize branches in the smaller communities?

6. What in your opinion is the major cause of failure of so many banks in small rural communities? Will independent unit banks be able to operate successfully in most of these communities in the future? If not, do you think group banks can safely furnish deposit and credit facilities to such communities or can they be more satisfactorily taken care of by branch banking systems?

7. Has the Comptroller of the Currency or the State banking department been consulted at any time with respect to the formation of your group or its policies and activities?

8. Do you think that bank holding companies such as yours should be under the supervision of either the Comptroller of the Currency or the State banking department?

INVESTMENT BONDS

NASHVILLE TENNESSEE

October 21, 1930.

Mr. Charles P. Jones, Vice-President,
Banco Kentucky Company,
Louisville, Kentucky.

My dear Mr. Jones:

As you probably know, the Federal Reserve Board is conducting investigations in regard to branch banking, group banking and bank holding companies and several days ago the Atlanta Reserve Bank's Agent, Mr. J. R. McCravey, Jr., called on us at Nashville to secure detailed information on the Banco Kentucky Company setup and also the banks in Arkansas in which we are interested through the ownership of the Home Insurance Companies of Little Rock. I asked Mr. McCravey if the Banco Kentucky Company would not be approached for this information by the St. Louis Reserve Bank as the major part of your interests are in this bank's district, and he advised me that the Atlanta Bank had been assigned the Banco Kentucky Company and also the Arkansas Banks. Mr. McCravey requested us to forward to you schedule which the Atlanta Bank would like to have filled out for the Federal Reserve Board and I am enclosing same herewith. If the information requested has already been prepared for the St. Louis Reserve Bank, of course it will not be necessary to duplicate same in this instance.

With kind regards, I am

Very truly yours,

Thos. W. Goodloe.

Dear Mr. Weil:-

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY, held March 7th, 1930, the plan for exchange of stock of THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY for the stock of the First National Bank of Paducah, Kentucky, was unanimously approved by the Board on the following basis:

Twenty-seven thousand (27,000) shares of THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY at twenty-five ($25.00) dollars per share, making a total of six hundred seventy-five thousand ($675,000.00) dollars for the entire capital stock of the First National Bank of Paducah, Kentucky - par value one hundred fifty thousand ($150,000.00) dollars; or, ninety ($90.00) dollars per share for each share of twenty ($20.00) dollars par value; or, four hundred fifty ($450.00) dollars per share for each share of one hundred ($100.00) dollars par value.

It is understood that while this proposition is made for all the stock of the First National Bank of Paducah, Kentucky, the trade will be effective whenever fifty-one (51%) per cent par value of the outstanding stock has accepted and made the exchange.

This offer is binding on us for a period of thirty days from March 10th, 1930.

ASHLAND NATIONAL BANK

ASHLAND, KENTUCKY

April 1, 1930.

To the Stockholders of the Ashland National Bank:

An invitation has been extended to the Ashland National Bank by the Banco-Kentucky Company to become a member of a group of banks being formed by it in Kentucky and nearby states.

The Banco-Kentucky was organized for the purpose of forming such a group.

It is proposed to effect this association between the Ashland National Bank and Banco-Kentucky by an exchange of stock on the basis of eight shares of Banco-Kentucky stock for one share of Ashland National Bank stock.

This proposed association and exchange of stock has received the careful consideration of your executive officers and directors and is unhesitatingly approved by them and they recommend that you exchange your stock on the basis proposed. A resolution to that effect was adopted at the regular meeting of the Board of Directors held today.

Banco-Kentucky stock is listed on the Chicago and Louisville stock exchanges and is traded in daily, thereby affording for it a ready market. Its par value is $25.00 per share. Recent sales have been around $25.00 per share. Its present established dividend rate is $1.00 per share annually, payable quarterly.

An exchange on the basis proposed will afford you the same return that you are now receiving.

All of the stock of the Ashland National Bank can be exchanged on the basis stated above. Fifty-one per cent must be deposited to make the plan effective.

You may exchange all, any part, or none of your stock, as you may determine.

Should you elect to retain your stock and not exchange it, we can assure you that there will be no change in this bank's attitude toward you.

Should the plan become effective, there will be no change in the bank's management. The same officers and directors will continue to manage its affairs. The bank will be conducted along the same lines as heretofore, but with enlarged facilities for doing business and in better position to serve its patrons and the needs of this community.

Should you desire to take advantage of the opportunity presented and exchange your stock, your certificates, assigned in blank and properly witnessed, must be deposited with the Ashland National Bank before the close of banking hours on April 10th, 1930.

If by that time fifty-one per cent of the stock has been so deposited certificates of Banco-Kentucky stock representing eight shares for each share of Ashland National Bank stock deposited by you will be delivered to you, when received from the Banco-Kentucky Company.

If by that time fifty-one per cent of the stock has not been deposited your certificates will be returned to you unless time for receiving deposit of stock is extended, which may be done by your Board of Directors.

Your assignment of Ashland National Bank stock must include your stock in the Ashland National Company. Bank stock that does not carry Ashland National Company stock will only be entitled to receive seven and one-half shares of Banco-Kentucky stock in exchange for each share of bank stock.

If you desire further information, the officers of the bank will be glad to have you call at the bank and discuss this matter with them.

Dear Mr. Brown:

I am writing you concerning slump in the market for BancoKentucky stock. We are besieged with inquiries from stockholders who converted their Ashland National Bank stock into Banco. Being unable to give them any satisfactory explanation of the slump in the price of Banco stock, we are writing you in hopes that you may be able to give us something more than the usual explanation we have been giving them,-that it is due to general market conditions.

This does not seem to satisfy them. They feel that Banco stock has slumped more in proportion to other bank stocks and figure that the slump grows out of deal with Caldwell & Company. This situation is not only embarrassing but is hurtful to our business. On this account we trust that you will write us a letter giving us such information as might prove beneficial.

Gentlemen:-

We have just bought a block of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky at $45.00 a share from the Hieatt crowd.

This Company can handle some of it but, of course, we can borrow only $125,000.00 from The Louisville National Bank & Trust Co., as that is our legal limit.

This Company would like to borrow $100,000.00, on its plain unsecured note, from you for thirty days. Of, course, we will lodge with you personally, 40 shares of stock and we want you to let us draw that down as we resell this stock to new stockholders.

A few days ago Mr. Jas. B. Brown heard of what we were trying to do and offered to help us on the transaction.

This is our suggestion of the method. Will you kindly let us have as early an answer as practical?

Very truly yours,

Exhibit 97

THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY capitalized at $20,000,000, with a surplus of $30,000,000, was recently organized in Louisville for the purpose of buying, holding and controlling banks in Louisville and surrounding cities. Stockholders of National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Company Unified stock exchanged their stock for stock in the new company at the ratio of one for two shares. The remaining stock was privately subscribed for by individuals and several large banking houses.

The BancoKentucky Company is the largest company of its kind operating in the South and it is expected that the acquisition of large banks in this section will be announced shortly. The company recently acquired control of the Brighton Bank & Trust Company and the Pearl-Market Bank & Trust Company of Cincinnati. These banks will be merged and operated as the Brighton-Pearl-Market Bank & Trust Company. Gustave M. Mosler, President of the Brighton Bank, will head the combined Brighton-Pearl Market institutions. The $10 par value shares have been listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange and on the Louisville Stock Exchange. The present resources of the new institution are around $215,000,000. Mr. James B. Brown, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, is president of the new company.

The dividend policy of the BancoKentucky Company has not yet been announced.

BancoKentucky stock has advanced rapidly in the Louisville and Chicago markets and has been traded in large volume since BancoKentucky certificates were issued October 1st. The stock should be bought as an investment to be held over a period of time rather than as a speculation, for several points' profit. For the patient holder the stock has tremendous potential value.

Special to The Herald

CINCINNATI—The Brighton Bank and Trust Company and the Pearl Market Bank and Trust Company here have been acquired by the Banco Kentucky, in which James B. Brown, Louisville, Ky. publisher has a controlling interest.

The two banks will become a part of a Middle West chain of banks which Brown is forming after the model of great Canadian banks which have many branches.

The two local banks will merge into what is probably to be known as the Brighton-Pearl Market Bank and Trust Company. Another Cincinnati bank is said to be under consideration in the development of the Middle West chain. Present plans call for the extension of the system in Chicago and Indianapolis. Eventually other cities in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois will be included in the chain.

We are particularly anxious that you check all details at this time inasmuch as we are making a complete revision of the statistics contained in our book. The previous issues of our Manual have been accorded an excellent reception among the investing public in this locality. It is the belief of the members of The Chicago Stock Exchange and of ourselves that the work we are attempting to do in this territory will be valuable not only from the point of view of increasing brokerage business but also from the point of view of the companies concerned inasmuch as it will develop a broader market for their securities.

As you are undoubtedly aware, The Chicago Stock Exchange is cooperating with us in every way and has asked each company whose securities are listed to supply us with all of the necessary information.

We wish to thank you in anticipation of your prompt attention to this matter.

ROUND-UP

FOREST PARK, ILLINOIS
Any legal interference, now, with the operations of the Farm Board, could and probably would precipitate a panic. Better wait until prices indicate they are going up; not down before testing the validity of the law, if that must be done.

of breeding stock has followed the crash in lambs; that will come next summer unless the market recuperates when it goes on a new crop basis.

WOOL: So far as manufacturers are concerned wool trade will continue on a hand to mouth basis. Until the tariff puzzle is cleared up there will be little doing. The low point may have been uncovered, but no one in the trade is ready to take an unequivocal bullish stand. Like wheat, wool is an international proposition, differing only in one respect, that this is an importing country. A world's surplus is the chief bearish factor at present. Mills are picking up packages of wool here and there, but are content to await tariff and government action. If the Government pool decides to carry any considerable quantity of the new clip along into the latter part of the year to advance prices weavers may be forced to compete on that portion of the clip in dealers hands, exerting a stabilizing influence, temporarily at least. What will happen when the pool starts unloading is anybody's guess. Meanwhile values continue firm at the bottom of the slump. Foreign markets show little change and are firm if anything. London sales open March 18th and will be watched with interest. Dealers are contracting some wool in the West and if the pool operators are veracious they will book about 100 million pounds of the new clip. Dealers are apprehensive, in view of the gyrations of the Farm Board with respect to wheat, that something similar will develop in wool, keeping the trade in a condition of uncertainty.

HIDES: Prices are holding firm, both in the spot and futures market. Variations have been fractional and whenever holders make a half-cent concession they can sell hides. Big packers are well sold up owing to light slaughter. That no tariff will be put on hides is a cinch bet, so that no uncertainty exists on this subject. Country hides have shared the firmness of packer stocks and frigorifico markets are holding up well. Leather business is not entirely satisfactory. New England shoe factories are operating more machinery than recently, but complain of lack of a backlog of orders. Basic conditions do not warrant expectancy of any sharp advance on hide values.

LARD: Considering light current make, low stocks and a considerable volume of weekly exports lard deserves more speculative interest. Hog slaughter is falling far below that of the corresponding period of 1929 and that does not mean normal lard production. The March statement of lard stocks by the Department of Agriculture shows only 112 million pounds in all positions, compared with 173 million pounds a year ago and a 5-year March average of 120 million pounds. The February gain was only 20 million pounds and that is usually a month of heavy production. Stocks of other edible fats are heavy and prices low, relegating lard to a by-product position. March butter stocks were 46 million pounds, against 11 million pounds a year ago and 17 million pounds on a five year average for the month. Low butter prices have probably stimulated consumption as stocks diminished 15 million pounds in February.

STOCK FORECASTS

STOCKS: BancoKy Company a bank holding company organized in September, 1929, as a result of the deposit of the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, that old and well seasoned institution which was founded back in 1834, and the Louisville Trust Co., which in the combined organization of the original Louisville Trust Co., and the Louisville National Bank, with the latter institution losing its identity through the merger. The stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Co., both of Louisville, Ky., received in exchange for their bank stock, shares of the capital stock of BancoKy Company on a basis of 2 shares of BancoKy for one share of the bank stock. This exchange was made on the basis of $25 a share for BancoKy.

Since the company began operations, the acquisition was made of two of the leading progressive banks in Cincinnati, Ohio, the Brighton Bank & Trust Co., and the Pearl Market Street Bank & Trust Co. Both these banks have very good records, with earnings ranging from $35 to $40 a share annually. Directly across the Ohio River from Cincinnati, acquisition was made of the two leading banks in Covington, Ky. It is expected that these institutions will be physically merged in their respective locations, which will bring about certain economies that will result in larger earnings. Already a very large increase in deposits was noted at the Covington, Ky., institution when the larger manufacturers withdrew deposits from commercial institutions in Cincinnati and deposited them in their own home town, feeling that the local institution is very financially sound enough and big enough to thoroughly satisfy their banking needs, since it is now being backed by the powerful BancoKy group.

It is the ambitious plan of the company to make further acquisitions of strong profitable organizations, banking institutions throughout the middle west and in such important centers as Chicago, Ill., Indianapolis, Ind., St. Louis, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., Nashville, Tenn., Atlanta, Ga., and Knoxville, Tenn., and in its finality will control resources well in excess of one billion dollars.

One must bear in mind that all worthwhile achievements are not accomplished overnight. The act of purchasing a strong and profitable metropolitan bank is not an easy task. Of course, anything can be bought if there is no objection as to price, but to make an attractive purchase of a good thing, is the work of a genius. In this particular regard, BancoKy Company is extremely fortunate in having at its head a man, although not yet nationally known, yet is rivalled in achievement only by the great A. P. Giannini, that outstanding financial wizard of the west coast who fought so valiantly for the principles of branch banking and bank holding corporations. Mr. James B. Brown, president of BancoKy Company, in my estimation is a financial genius. He, like Giannini, comes from the bottom of the ladder, and by the hard knocks of experience blazon the way to success. His achievements while up to this time have been more or less confined to his own state, have been remarkable. His ability along financial lines has won for him a place he so well deserves, and that is very strongly in evidence by the fact, that at this time, Mr. Brown is director in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, the Louisville Gas and Electric Co., American Turf., Southern Bell Telephone Co., Standard Oil of Kentucky and President of the National Bank of Kentucky.

I have elaborated somewhat on the management of BancoKy company for the reason that a bank holding corporation that has to do with banks, is not looked upon as the ordinary operation of a manufacturing concern or kindred organization, but much depends on its management and popular feeling toward the directorate from a morale standpoint.

While the organization is too young to give a comparative earnings statement, it is well to know, however, that the combined earnings of the original two institutions that go to make up BancoKy under the same management, will show better than 35 percent annually to the stockholders, including cash dividends, stock dividends and price appreciation for the past five years, and on the basis of $20 for the present BancoKy stock, a return of better than 47 percent for the past three years.

At present there are 2,000,000 shares of $10 par value stock outstanding. On the basis of $25 a share for which the stock was sold this gives the company $20,000,000 capital and a reserve of $30,000,000. In January of this year the company was authorized to increase the number of shares from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 and no stock can be sold at less than $25 per share. This additional increase will be used to make additional acquisitions of banks as outlined previously. As soon as this authorized increase in shares is disposed of the company will then have a capital of $50,000,000 and reserve of $75,000,000.

Dividends on the present outstanding stock is at the rate of eighty cents a share annually or twenty cents a share quarterly. At the price of twenty dollars a share the stock yields four percent, which in my opinion is quite an attractive yield for this type of security. I have reason to believe that the dividend will be increased to twenty-five cents a share in the very near future. In that event stock bought at twenty dollars a share will yield five percent.

This stock sold for a high of 34¼ and a low of 18½. Current market price 20@21. While I have always confined my recommendations to those stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange where a broad and open market prevails, yet I feel that BancoKy has such wonderful prospects for the future that commitments made around the present level will certainly return handsome profits to those who have a little patience. Do not expect a quick turn as it is not that type stock, but rather make your commitment from a standpoint of high class investment purposes and stay with it. It is a stock that over a period of years will take care of you.

I SAW THE NEW WORLD

By Selby Maxwell

They have found a new world out in space, as you have probably read in the papers. It is a world some fourteen thousand miles in diameter, and weighing about seven times as much as the earth does, and so far from the sun that daylight out there is no brighter than dim moonlight is here. This planet is forty-five times as far from the sun as the earth is. Its year is about 240 of our years long, that is to say, it takes this world nearly two and a half centuries to go around the sun once.

The planet is of course not really new, it is only new to us. It has been there since the beginning of time, and we have seen its effect on our weather cycles by many centuries. It does not affect our daily lives as much as some of the nearer ones, like Saturn with its weather cycle of some 33 years, or Jupiter, with its huge sunspot cycle, or the sun itself with its cycle of 27 days, but the effect is there, and it is plain enough

Mr. James B. Brown, President,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

My dear Mr. Brown:-

I have been wondering lately whether it would be feasible to consider a consolidation between the Banco-Kentucky Corporation and the banks in which we are interested. If I could discuss the matter with you I have a sugrestion to make which, in my opinion, might be very helpful to the market situation on Banco-Kentucky stock. As you know, the banks in which we are interested already have deposits of above $150,000,000 and I believe that a combination of our interests would make one of the most formidable situations in the country.

I am leaving tonight for St. Louis to attend the annual meeting of the Missouri State Life Insurance Company and if you think this suggestion is worthy of our getting together you might wire me there care of the Missouri State Life Company and I could come back by way of Louisville.

With assurance of my regard and looking forward to discussing this matter with you, I remain,

Very truly yours,

Gentlemen:--

Replying to your favor of the 14th instant, with reference to THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY, wish to advise that we are not in position, at this time, to give you the items requested, as the Company has only operated since September 19th.

THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY was incorporated on July 16th, 1929 for the purpose of owning and controlling Banks and Trust Companies. This Company offered to the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, both local institutions, two shares of its stock in exchange for each share held. As a result, it owns ninety-six per cent of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company; or, approximately 565,000 shares of the par value of ten dollars per share.

In addition, the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company were given the right to purchase shares of stock in THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY at $25.00 per share; which offer resulted in a subscription and payment of 480,000 shares of stock; thus giving THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY cash of $12,000,000.00.

The Company recently purchased approximately 98% of the stock of the Brighton Bank and Trust Company and The Pearl-Market Bank and Trust Company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The combined deposits of these four institutions aggregate at this time approximately $81,000,000.00; the total resources $125,000,000.00 and trust estate assets of approximately $100,000,000.00.

THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY intends to purchase other banks in large cities. We are positive we can considerably increase the earnings of the banks in our group, which already are exceptionally good. We have about six thousand stockholders on our books at this time - the total issue being two million shares of the par value of $10.00 per share.

Very truly yours,

Mr. T. A. Field, V.P.,
Ashland National Bank,
Ashland, Ky.

Dear Mr. Field:-

I am enclosing herewith Oath of Director signed by Mr. James B. Brown and duly acknowledged before a notary.

As you probably know, Mr. Brown is now a director of all the banks that are in the Bank Kentucky group and the Treasury Department has questioned the legality of his serving on the Board of so many banks and this may have to be changed later. However, we will let it stand this way until we hear from Washington.

With kind personal regards,

Yours very truly,

Vice President.

FILED IN COURT
[illegible] YOUNGMAN, CLERK
[illegible] DEPUTY

FIDELITY & COLUMBIA TRUST COMPANY, RECEIVER OF THE LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY, et al., DEFENDANTS.

JOINT ANSWER OF THE LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY, TRUSTEE UNDER THE WILL OF CLARA KENNEDY BULLITT, DECEASED, THE LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY, INDIVIDUALLY and FIDELITY & COLUMBIA TRUST COMPANY, RECEIVER.

PARAGRAPH I.

The defendants, The Louisville Trust Company, Trustee under the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, deceased, The Louisville Trust Company, individually, and Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, named in the intervening petition of Annie Bullitt Brewer, for answer to said intervening petition deny that The Louisville Trust Company either in its capacity as Trustee under the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, deceased, or in its individual capacity, at any time treated or construed Item 8 of the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt as mandatory on the Trustee named in said Will to obtain the advice or consent of C. Malcolm Bullitt before making any reinvestment, investment, sale or change of all of said trust estate, or of any part thereof.

These defendants deny that The Louisville Trust Company as said Trustee had secretly, or without the knowledge or consent of said intervening plaintiff invested funds belonging to the corpus of said trust estate in the sum of $14,500, or in any sum, in 580 shares, or any shares, or share, of the Common Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company, and deny that said plaintiff did not know of, or discover the fact, that said Trustee had acquired for said trust estate 580 shares of the Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

Defendants deny that The Louisville Trust Company in acquiring for said trust estate said 580 shares of the Banco-Kentucky Company stock wilfully or fraudulently or in bad faith, or utterly, or at all, breached Item 8 of said Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, or that it purposely, or at all, concealed or hid from C. Malcolm Bullitt, or from said intervening plaintiff, or from any of the remaindermen under said Will named as defendants in said intervening petition the acquisition of said 580 shares of Banco-Kentucky Company stock for said trust estate, and deny that the sum of $14,500, or any part thereof, belonging to said trust estate was misused, or that The Louisville Trust Company made a secret profit, or any profit, for itself from said alleged funds, or any part thereof, or from or out of said trust estate in the manner and form as alleged in said intervening petition, or at all.

Defendants deny that at the time of the acquisition by said trust estate of the said 580 shares of BancoKentucky Company stock, the BancoKentucky Company owned or controlled any stock in various or any speculative enterprises; and deny that at the time of the acquisition by the said trust estate of the 580 shares of BancoKentucky Company stock, the BancoKentucky Company had not been in operation more than ten years, as required or contemplated by Section 4706 of Kentucky Statutes; deny that at the time of the acquisition by said trust estate of the said 580 shares of BancoKentucky Company stock, the officers or directors of The Louisville Trust Company were heavy owners of stock of BancoKentucky Company, or that they, or any of them, were speculators on margin or credit of the stock in BancoKentucky Company; and deny that from or by reason of any of the facts alleged, or at all, said The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee was misusing or did misuse the funds, or any fund, of said trust estate when it acquired the said 580 shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

The defendants deny that said intervening plaintiff has been bereft of the income from the said $14,500, or any part thereof, or that the corpus of said trust fund has been bereft of $14,500, or any part thereof, by reason of said alleged breach of trust, or any breach of trust, or the fraudulent or scandalous conduct, or any conduct, of The Louisville Trust Company, or by or through the wilful or illegal acts or any act of The Louisville Trust Company, or to the permanent detriment or harm, or any detriment or harm of said intervening plaintiff, or of said remaindermen, or any of them, or against the conscience of equity, or any breach of the statutes, or any statute, in such case made and provided.

Defendants deny that for all of the $14,500, or any part thereof, referred to in said intervening petition, said estate of Clara K. Bullitt, or the beneficiaries under her Will, or any of them, are entitled to a preference on the assets of the defendant, The Louisville Trust Company; and deny that said alleged claim is preferred under Sections 598-b-4, or 3868 Kentucky Statutes.

PARAGRAPH II.

For further answer to the intervening petition of Annie Bullitt Brewer, these defendants state:

That the said Clara K. Bullitt, after making certain specific and pecuniary bequests devised and bequeathed under Item 6 of her Will all of the residue of her estate, real and personal, unto The Louisville Trust Company in trust as follows:

"To invest and reinvest the same as often as in its judgment the interests of the estate and the production of a good income may demand, and to that end and for the purpose of distribution and settlement of my estate, it shall have power to sell and convey the real estate, and to sell and transfer the personal estate from time to time and whenever necessary, for the best interests of my estate; to pay to my daughter, Annie Bullitt Brewer, during her life, monthly or quarterly, the net income of the estate, after payment of taxes and all lawful charges and expenses. Should my said daughter anticipate, pledge or attempt to dispose of her estate herein, or should any of her creditors attempt by legal proceedings or otherwise, to subject her said interest to the payment of their demands, then, in any of said events, her said interest in my estate shall thereby and at once cease and terminate, and vest in the devisees in remainder."

That at the time of the death of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, she was the holder and owner of 18 shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky; that The Louisville Trust Company made a full and complete settlement of its accounts as Executor of the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, deceased, and thereupon transferred to itself as Trustee under said Will all of the residue of said estate, and that said 18 shares of National Bank of Kentucky stock were included in said residuary estate that came into the hands of The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee, and that said Trustee never sold the said 18 shares of stock, or any part thereof, but still holds the same, but in the converted form as hereinafter set out.

That thereafter, on the _____day of April, 1927, the National Bank of Kentucky duly and regularly declared a dividend of 60% on all of its then outstanding stock and in payment thereof issued to its stockholders certificates for 60% of the amount of stock then held by each stockholder in the National Bank of Kentucky, and by virtue of the declaration of said dividend and the payment thereof in stock The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee under the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, became entitled to and received from the National Bank of Kentucky 10.8 shares of its capital stock, in addition to the 18 shares then held by it. The said National Bank of Kentucky did not issue certificates for fractions of shares, and it became necessary for The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee, to sell 8/10 or purchase 2/10 of a share. The said National Bank of Kentucky had regularly paid dividends on its Capital stock in amounts which produced an adequate income on the value thereof and in the judgment of said Trustee the best interests of the estate could be served by purchasing 2/10 of a share rather than selling 8/10 of a share, and it did purchase 2/10 of a share of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky for which it paid the sum of $69.00, which was the fair and reasonable market value of said 2/10 of a share of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky at the time it was purchased. The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee under the Will of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, was then the owner of 18 shares of the Capital stock in the National Bank of Kentucky devised to it by the said testator, at the appraised value of $4320.00, of 10.8 shares of said stock which came to it as a stock dividend and 2/10 of a share which it purchased, paying therefor the sum of $69.00.

That on April 22nd, 1927, a large majority of the owners and holders of the Capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and a large majority of the owners and holders of the Capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company determined that the interests of these respective institutions as separate corporate entities and of each stockholder therein required closer cooperation of said Bank and Trust Company to be of greater service to their respective patrons and, in order to secure such cooperation, they entered into an agreement by which the stock of said National Bank of Kentucky and the stock of the said The Louisville Trust Company was pooled and placed in the hands of Henry Vogt, Thomas J. Kinary, Stuart E. Duncan, Allen P. Dodd, Edwin M. Drummond and Charles H. Bohmer, and their successors, as trustees, to hold and vote the same on the condition set forth in said trust agreement, a copy of which will be filed herewith as part hereof marked "Exhibit A", and Trustees' Participation Certificates therefor representing the proportion of each share-holder therein were issued and delivered to the respective stockholders; that The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee of Clara Kennedy Ballitt, delivered to the trustees under said agreement of April 22nd, 1927, certificate for 29 shares of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and received therefor Trustees' Participation Certificates in lieu of said 29 shares of stock; that said National Bank of Kentucky then had outstanding 40,000 shares of its capital stock, of the par value of $100 per share, and in accordance with the provisions of said pooling agreement under which the ownership of a large majority of the outstanding stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company was unified, 39,820 shares of the National Bank of Kentucky were thus deposited with said trustees under the agreement of April 22nd, 1927, and The Louisville Trust Company had outstanding 17,500 shares of its Capital stock, of the par value of $100 per share, and in accordance with said agreement there were deposited with said trustees 17,235 shares of The Louisville Trust Company stock, and said trustees issued and delivered to the depositors of said bank stock and said trust company stock Trustees' Participation Certificates evidencing the ownership of 57,055 Participating Shares, as described in said agreement of April 22nd, 1927; that thereafter, each of said Trustees' Participation Shares was split or divided and 10 shares were issued in place thereof, so that The Louisville Trust Company, Trustee of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, became and was the owner of 290 Trustees' Participation Shares, and the trustees paid to the holders of Participation Certificates regularly thereafter dividends aggregating 16% per annum on the par value of the Capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, so that The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, received an annual income of $464.00 from said Trustees' Participation Shares.

That the unification of the shares of Capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and of The Louisville Trust Company, through the transfer of the legal title to said shares unto Trustees, and the issue by said Trustees of Participation Certificates at the rate of one share in said unified trust fund for each share of said National Bank of Kentucky stock and for each share of The Louisville Trust Company stock unto the respective owners so transferring their shares of bank stock or trust company stock unto said Trustees, was designed and intended for the purpose of enabling the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company each to operate more advantageously and profitably and to enable each of them to facilitate and extend the operations and business of the other; that such unification of the holdings of stock of said two institutions was in accordance with the modern trend of business and was regarded by all persons competent to judge such matters to be to the best interests of both institutions and their respective stockholders.

That any actual merger and consolidation of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company into a single corporation was rendered impossible by reason of the fact that said bank was created and existed under an act of Congress providing for the establishment of national banks, while The Louisville Trust Company was organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky; that the unification of interests, to the extent that the same was accomplished through the medium of aforesaid unified trust, was resorted to in an effort to secure for both of said institutions and their respective stockholders most of the advantages and benefits that would have accrued from actual consolidation of said two institutions if the same could have been accomplished legally.

That the operation of said two institutions for a period of more than one year under aforesaid unified trust arrangement proved and demonstrated the advantage of said plan to both said bank and said trust company and to their respective stockholders, and that it was thereupon determined by the officers and directors of both of said institutions and by those persons who were in fact the beneficial owners of a large majority of the shares of stock of both institutions, that it would be to the best interests of each of said institutions and of the respective stockholders thereof if a more complete and beneficial unification of interests and of the operations of said two institutions were accomplished through the formation of a separate corporation for the purpose of acquiring from said Trustees such number of Trustees' Participation Shares as would vest in such new corporation the beneficial ownership of the majority of shares of outstanding stock of both said bank and said trust company; that in order to carry out such purpose, the BancoKentucky Company was organized as a holding corporation and was empowered to acquire and hold the shares of capital stock of both said bank and trust company, including the shares of Trustees' Participation Certificates issued by the trustees as aforesaid, and was further authorized and empowered to acquire and hold the shares of Capital stock of other banks, trust companies and corporations.

That immediately after the organization of the BancoKentucky Company as aforesaid, the beneficial owners of a large majority of the Capital stock of said bank and the beneficial owners of a large majority of the Capital stock of said trust company, constituting a large majority of the owners of said Trustees' Participation Shares, entered into a contract and agreement with the BancoKentucky Company pursuant to which said shareholders exchanged their respective Trustees' Participation Shares, representing their beneficial interests as stockholders in both said bank and trust company, for shares of the Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company, upon the basis of two shares of BancoKentucky Company stock for one share of Trustees' Participation Certificates.

That in manner as aforesaid, a further and more complete unification of the interests of the stockholders in the Bank of Kentucky and the stockholders in The Louisville Trust Company was accomplished, and that at the time when said

The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee under the Will of Clara K. Bullitt, exchanged the 290 shares of Trustees' Participation Certificates held in said trust estate for 580 shares of the Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company, the BancoKentucky Company was the holder and owner of a large majority of said Trustees' Participation Shares and by reason thereof was the beneficial owner of a large majority of the Capital stock of both said bank and trust company; that at the time of aforesaid exchange, the BancoKentucky Company did not own, either directly or indirectly, any shares of stock in any other corporation, and that, while the BancoKentucky Company was in law and in fact a legal entity separate and distinct from both said bank and trust company, and competent to hold and own shares of stock of both said bank and trust company, the exchange of said 290 Trustees' Participation Shares for 580 shares of the Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company, did not essentially change the nature or character of the interest of the trust estate of said Clara K. Bullitt in either said bank or trust company, save and except that said BancoKentucky Company became the beneficial owner of the shares of bank stock and the shares of trust company stock represented by said 290 Trustees' Participation Shares and became subject to the double liability attaching to both said bank stocks and said trust company stocks.

That neither at the time of the exchange as aforesaid nor at any time during the corporate existence of the BancoKentucky Company did it own or hold any bonds or bond or securities or security of any corporation that at the time of such ownership had not been in operation for more than ten years or that during such time had defaulted in the payment of principal or interest in its bonded debt, and that at no time during the corporate existence of the BancoKentucky Company did it own the bonds of any county, district, town or city that within ten years had defaulted in the payment of interest or principal of its bonded debt.

That the aforesaid agreement entered into between the BancoKentucky Company and the owners of a large majority of the Trustees' Participation Shares, to exchange said Trustees' Participation Shares for shares of the Capital stock of the Banco-Kentucky Company, brought about a situation where it became apparent that unexchanged Trustees' Participation Shares would not maintain the market price that would attach to the shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company that would be received therefor if such exchange were effected, and that said The Louisville Trust Company, in its capacity as Trustee under the Will of Clara K. Bullitt, deemed it to be to the best interests of said trust estate and of all the beneficiaries thereof, that such exchange of Trustees' Participation Shares for shares of the BancoKentucky Company be made, and that it did make such exchange for those reasons.

That at the time of the exchange of said 290 Trustees' Participation Shares for 580 shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company was agreed upon and actually made, the BancoKentucky Company was not engaged in any business or activity other than the owning of the shares of stock of said bank and the shares of stock of said trust company represented by the large majority of the Trustees' Participation Shares that it had theretofore acquired and then owned, and that the fact that the BancoKentucky Company had not been in existence for the period of ten years did not in any way affect the safety of that part of said trust estate of Clara K. Bullitt, Deceased, which was then represented by the 580 shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company received in exchange by The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt, Deceased.

That the acquisition by The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt, Deceased, of said 580 shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company was a mere change in form of securities, and did not represent or result from any investment of funds by said Trustee except to the extent of $20.00 paid for two-tenths of a share of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky as aforesaid, but that such acquisition represented, and was in its essence, a mere continuation and retention of the ownership of said Trustees' Participation Shares belonging to the estate of Clara M. Bullitt, which in turn, were received by The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt, Deceased, in exchange for the shares of bank stock as augmented by stock dividends, plus the purchase of two-tenths of a share as aforesaid, which belonged to said Clara M. Bullitt at the time of her death and which originally came to the hands of The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt.

That the acquisition by The Louisville Trust Company as Trustee under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt of said 580 shares of BancoKentucky Company stock, under the facts and circumstances as hereinbefore set out, was both lawful and proper, and that in acquiring said 580 shares of BancoKentucky Company stock, The Louisville Trust Company acted in good faith and for the best interests of the complainant, Annie Bullitt Brewer, and all the other beneficiaries under the Will of Clara M. Bullitt, Deceased.

That at the time the aforesaid exchange was made for shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company, the purchase of stock of the BancoKentucky Company was regarded by prudent business men generally as constituting a safe and proper investment; that for more than a year after the acquisition of said 580 shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company, quarter-annual dividends were earned and paid thereon in an amount equal to or greater than any quarter-annual dividends theretofore paid upon either the shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky or of The Louisville Trust Company; and that the placing of the affairs of the BancoKentucky Company in the hands of a receiver was brought about and resulted from the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company respectively and was not occasioned by any losses sustained by the BancoKentucky Company itself.

That Section 4706 of the Kentucky Statutes, insofar as the same forbids investment of funds held in a fiduciary capacity to be made in dividend-bearing securities of a corporation that has not been in existence for a period of ten years, was designed to prevent the investment of such funds in new and untried corporate enterprises, and was not intended or designed to prevent the investment of trust funds in shares of stock even of a newly-formed corporation which was in fact a mere corporation organized for the purpose of holding the shares of stock of other corporations that had been in existence for a period of more than ten years and which had not during said time defaulted in the payment of principal or interest on their respective bonded debts and which were regarded by prudent business men generally as constituting a safe and proper investment; that the BancoKentucky Company regardless of the fact that it had not been in existence for a period of ten years, was, in fact and in essence, a corporation whose capital stock met all the requirements for investment of funds held in a fiduciary capacity as required by Section 4706

of the Kentucky Statutes; that at the time said exchange was made, the only activity of the BancoKentucky Company consisted in the control of said bank and trust company and the respective businesses thereof, both of which had been in operation for more than ten years; that in the organization of the BancoKentucky Company it was determined to be an essential part of said plan of organization that its shares of stock, or at least a substantial majority thereof, be owned by the Trustees' Participation shareholders, and that the BancoKentucky Company be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of said bank and trust company; that said organization plan was in fact carried out and that during the entire time of the corporate existence of the BancoKentucky Company, it was managed and operated by a Board of Directors and by officers who constituted the Boards of Directors and officers of the bank and trust company, respectively.

That the organization of the BancoKentucky Company and the acquisition by it of the control of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, through its ownership of said Trustees' Participation Shares was in fact and in substance a mere reorganization which permitted a continuation of the business of the bank and trust company, respectively, under their former management, and that such reorganization in no way injured said trust estate, but on the contrary it benefited the same.

PARAGRAPH III.

For additional answer to said intervening petition of Annie Bullitt Brewer, these defendants state:

That it was the declared purpose of those who organized the BancoKentucky Company in 1929 that said corporation would exchange its stock for the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company; that said declaration and purpose was published in the newspapers of Louisville and widely discussed throughout the City of Louisville and that The Louisville Trust Company, as such Trustee, on March 29, 1930, caused to be made up and delivered to the plaintiff, Annie Bullitt Brewer, a statement of assets in its hands belonging to said estate, which statement set forth the transaction showing that 290 shares of said Trustees' Participation Certificates had been exchanged for 580 shares of the BancoKentucky Company. Said statement further showed that the BancoKentucky Company had paid into said estate a quarterly dividend on said stock and September 30, 1930, it caused another statement to be made up and delivered to the plaintiff, Annie Bullitt Brewer, which last statement showed that The Louisville Trust Company, as such Trustee, was then holding 580 shares of the BancoKentucky Company stock and that it had received from the BancoKentucky Company dividends thereon and by said written statement so delivered to the plaintiff, Annie Bullitt Brewer, by The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee, she was notified and knew that said Trustee had exchanged the 18 shares of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky, which came to its hands from the estate of Clara Kennedy Bullitt, and the stock delivered to it by the National Bank of Kentucky as a dividend, together with the 2/10 of a share purchased by it for Trustees' Participation Certificates covering stock in National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, and that it had exchanged said 290 Trustees' Participation Certificates for 580 shares of the Capital stock of the BancoKentucky Company and she did not at the time either of said statements were delivered to her, or at any time until November 17,1930, object to said transfer; that the said Trustee received from the BancoKentucky Company dividends on the 580 shares of stock so held by it on January 1, 1930, on April 1, 1930 and on July 1, 1930, and on October 1, 1930, and the dividends so received from the BancoKentucky Company were paid by it to the plaintiff, Annie Bullitt Brewer, and she thereby approved the acquisition by The Louisville Trust Company, as Trustee, of the 580 shares of the BancoKentucky Company.

By reason of the foregoing facts, the plaintiff, Annie Bullitt Brewer, is guilty of laches and is estopped from asserting any claim against the defendants on account of the acquisition or holding of the said 580 shares of stock in the Banco-Kentucky Company, and they plead and rely upon such estoppel in bar of her right to recover herein.

WHEREFORE, the defendants pray that plaintiff's petition be dismissed; for their costs and for all proper relief.

a reasonable time as directed by said will, or that when said stock was sold it did not receive therefor bonds issued by the United States of America or invest the proceeds in said bonds, or that by reason of the alleged failure of said executor and trustee to faithfully carry out its trust in regard to said Van Camp Packing Company stock said estate was damaged in the amount of $10,867, or any sum, and defendant denies that said Van Camp Packing Company stock was sold at all.

PARAGRAPH II.

For further answer to the petition of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, as trustee under the will of said Frank A. Menne, the defendant, the Louisville Trust Company states that the will of the said Frank A. Menne, among other provisions, contains the following:

" . . . . I further direct that my Executor and Trustee convert into cash as soon after my death as its best judgment may direct, the remainder of my estate, both real and personal, except my home-place, "Kenilworth", and invest the same in bonds issued by the United States of America, by it to be held, used and controlled during the period of time hereinafter stipulated for the use and benefit of my said wife, Katie Kissel Menne, and my children, Flora Annette Evans, Bertram Louis Menne, Edwin Charles Menne, Catherine May Menne Cogsins, Mildred Margaret Menne, Clifford Raymond Menne, and any other children hereafter born to me, as hereinafter provided, and my Executor and Trustee is empowered and requested to manage the estate in such a way as may seem to it most to redound to the best interest of my said wife and children and to use profit, increase and income for the benefit of my estate in the same way and as fully as I could lawfully do if living, subject only to the express provision of this my last Will.

"Whenever my Executor and Trustee has on hand any fund for investment, whether realized from unexpended income or from the sale of property, either real or personal, belonging to my estate, whether referred to in this clause or any other clause of my Will, I direct my Executor and Trustee to invest said fund in bonds of the United States of America, and give to said Executor and Trustee no discretion for investment or re-investment in other securities or property."

"11. I hereby appoint the Louisville Trust Company Executor and Trustee of this my last Will, and expressly authorize it to sell and convey any real or personal estate that may belong to me, and pass a good title thereto with the assent of any one of the Committee provided for in Clause Thirteenth hereof, which assent shall be evidenced by the signature of said member of the Committee to the writing evidencing such sale, and the purchaser shall not be required to look to the application of the purchase money.

"17. I appoint my friends, August C. Walter of St. Louis and Henry J. Angermeier, of Louisville, Ky., as Advisory Committee, to cooperate with my Executor and Trustee in the management of my estate and supervise all accounts and investments thereof, this Committee also to be consulted as to the disposition of my real estate and my Executor and Trustee is to be governed by their decision. * * * * *"

Defendant states that the said August C. Walter and the said Henry J. Angermeier each accepted the appointment as a member of the said Advisory Committee under the terms of said will, and in accordance with the terms of said will advised this defendant as to the manner of sale of said estate, and further in accordance with said will were kept regularly informed as to the status of said estate, both as to the principal and the income therefrom, said formal statements showing the status of said estate as to principal and income being sent to each of said persons quarterly during each year.

Defendant states that at the time of the qualification of this defendant as the executor of the will of said Frank A. Lerne it was not deemed prudent, because of the prices which it would have been necessary to have accepted for same, to sell either the stock in the National Bank of Kentucky, or the stock in the Jacobsen Divers, Inc., or the stock in the Van Camp Packing Company, which said stock is set out in the petition herein, but that at a later time this defendant recommended to the said August C. Walter and the said Henry J. Angermeier that said stock should be sold, but that this defendant was unable after correspondence and conferences with said Walter and said Angermeier to secure the assent either of said Walter or said Angermeier to the sale of any of said stock, and that at no time up to the closing of the said Louisville Trust Company on November 17, 1930, was this defendant able to secure the assent of either of the members of said committee to the sale of any of said stock.

on the 27th day of March, 1929, it was given all the powers of a combined bank and trust company under the statutes of the State of Kentucky.

That under said trust agreement dated April 22, 1927, referred to above, Henry Vogt, Thomas J. Minary, Stewart E. Duncan, Allen P. Dodd, Edwin K. Drummond and Charles H. Bohmer were created trustees for the purpose of holding in trust the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville, Kentucky, and the capital stock of the Louisville Trust Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, with the power to issue to the holders of stock in either of said two corporations a certificate representing the same number of shares of said trust estate of the par value of $100 each as said depositing stockholder owned in either the said National Bank of Kentucky or said The Louisville Trust Company, and that under the terms of said trust the said trustees had powers as set out in said trust agreement, among others the following, same being contained in Section III of said trust agreement:

"(4) In addition to the Trust Estate herein presently provided for, the Trustees shall have power to purchase all or part of the stock of any other corporation of similar character and engaged in a like or similar business, but only with the written consent of the Advisory Committee, as to terms, price and conditions of purchase, and any stock so purchased by The Trustees shall become and be a part of the Trust Estate above referred to, and the Trustees may issue Trustees' Participation Certificates in sufficient amount to pay for the stock so purchased by them. The Trustees may issue such new certificates direct to the holders of the stock so purchased by the Trustees in exchange or payment therefor, in whole or in part, or may sell such Trustees' Participation Certificates to the then holders of such Trustees' Participation Certificates in proportion to their then holding thereof, which right of purchase by such holders shall be assignable. If all the certificates so offered to existing certificate holders be not taken and paid for by them or their assigns within the time fixed by the Trustees in their offering of the same, it shall be the duty of the Trustees to offer for sale such certificates not taken or paid for to any other person or persons."

"(6) The Trustees, with the written consent of the Advisory Committee, may sell any stock acquired under Subsection (4) of Article III and the proceeds of sale when collected shall be disposed of by the Trustees with the written consent of the Advisory Committee by:

(a) - Either dividing the same among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates, in which event the Trustees shall have the right to correspondingly reduce pro rata the number of shares represented by outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates; or

(b) - Using the same in the purchase of stock of corporations engaging in like or similar business; or

(c) - Adding to the capital or surplus or capital and surplus of any of the corporations the stock of which is owned by the Trustees."

. . . . . .

"(7) The Trustees, with the written consent of the Advisory Committee:

(a) Shall have the right to consent to and take any legal action appropriate for an increase or decrease in the capital stock of any corporation, the stock of which may become a part of the Trust Estate:

(b) In case of an increase in the capital stock of any such corporation, the propor proportionate part thereof to which the Trustee may be entitled, may be purchased by them and same shall be added to and become a part of the indivisible Trust Estate held by the Trustees under the same terms and conditions as are herein provided for the stock acquired hereunder;

(c) The Trustees shall thereupon issue additional Trustees' Participation Certificates equal to the par value of such increase of capital stock so purchased by them and shall offer the same pro rata to the then holders of outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates at a price which will reimburse the Trustees for the purchase price so paid by them.

If any holder of Trustees' Participation Certificates declines or fails within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Trustees, to take his prorata of such increased issue of certificates, and which right of purchase by such holder shall be assignable, the Trustees shall have the right to sell such certificates to any purchaser for a price not less than that at which the Trustees acquired such stock.

(d) In case either the Bank or Trust Company, or any other institution in which the Trustees shall own stock, shall reduce its outstanding capital stock in the manner provided by law so as to effect a distribution of corporate assets among stockholders, the Trustees shall dispose of said fund as a distribution pro rata among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates or, under the written direction of the Advisory Committee, for the benefit of the trust estate, in any other lawful manner.

(8) The Trustees shall have the right, and it shall be their duty subject only to the limitations herein prescribed, to exercise in the interest of the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates, all of the powers of management and control over any corporation in which they shall hold stock, incident to the ownership of stock held by them hereunder, and their power shall include all rights as stockholders in connection with any corporate purposes or functions whatever and shall authorize them to exercise all voting rights and rights of ownership over such stock in the election of directors or in the discharge of any other corporate functions.

Provided, however, that the owner of record on the books of the Trustees of any Trustees' Participation Certificate, shall have the right by written directions to the Trustees given at least 5 days before the vote is to be cast, to instruct them how they shall vote in the corporate meetings such proportionate number of shares therein owned by the Trustees as the number of shares represented by the Trustees' Participation Certificate owned by such person giving such directions may bear to the total number of shares represented by outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates, and the Trustees shall vote such proportion of stock in accordance with such instruction.

(9) Dividends received by the Trustees on any stock held by them shall be distributed among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates; provided, however, that upon the written direction of the Advisory Committee, the Trustees may use any extra dividends, or part thereof, received by the Trustees, for the benefit of the trust estate, in any lawful manner."

"(11) The enumeration of powers herein shall not be held to be exclusive of other powers herein referred to or incidental to the powers herein mentioned."

That said The BenecKentucky Company was, and is, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, with the following powers, among others, towit:

LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY,

ANSWER OF LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY

Comes the defendant, Louisville Trust Company, and for its answer to the petition and amended petition of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, as Trustee under the will of Frank A. Kenne, deceased, denies that contrary to the terms of the will of said Frank A. Kenne said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment to dispose of said National Bank of Kentucky stock within a reasonable time, and denies that on August 1, 1929 it sold and transferred the same for 800 participating certificates of the National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Company stock, or that on November 22, 1929 it sold and transferred said participating certificates for 1600 shares of Bancokentucky Company stock, or that the said Louisville Trust Company sold said stock at all, or that by reason of said alleged action, or any action, of the said Louisville Trust Company the terms of said will of said Frank A. Kenne were violated in that said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment, or sell same within a reasonable time as directed by said will, or that at any time when same were sold or transferred said Louisville Trust Company did not receive therefor bonds issued by the United States of America and invest the proceeds in said bonds, or that by reason of said alleged failure of said executor and trustee to faithfully carry out its trust in regard to said National Bank of Kentucky stock, said estate was damaged in the sum of $43,200, or any amount, or that the said Louisville Trust Company violated the provisions of said will in any particular.

Defendant further denies that contrary to the terms of the will of said Frank A. Menne, said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment to dispose of said 100 shares of Godchaux Sugars, Inc. preferred stock within a reasonable time, or that on August 9, 1929 it sold and transferred same for other stock of said Godchaux Sugars, Inc., or that by reason of said alleged action of this defendant, or by reason of any action of this defendant the terms of said will of said Frank A. Menne were violated in that said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment and sell same within a reasonable time as directed by said will, or that when said stock was sold it did not receive therefor bonds issued by the United States of America or invest the proceeds in said bonds, or that by reason of said alleged failure of said executor or trustee to faithfully carry out its trust in regard to said Godchaux Sugars, Inc. stock said estate was damaged in the amount of $8,000 or any sum, and defendant denies that it sold said Godchaux Sugars, Inc. stock at all.

Defendant further denies that contrary to the terms of the will of said Frank A. Menne said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment to dispose of said 207 shares of Van Camp Packing Company preferred stock within a reasonable time, or that on December 21, 1928 it sold or transferred the same for 207 shares of Van Camp Packing Company preferred stock and 103½ shares of common stock of the Van Camp Packing Company, or that by reason of said alleged action of the defendant the terms of said will of said Frank A. Menne were violated in that said Louisville Trust Company did not exercise its best judgment and sell same within

PARAGRAPH III.

Further answering herein, defendant states that the transfer of stock from the original form in which same was received by this defendant in each of the matters sued on herein, towit, stock in the Godchaux Sugars, Inc., stock in the Van Camp Packing Company and stock in the National Bank of Kentucky, was not a sale thereof, but was only an exchange of securities through re-organization of the respective corporations; that as to the said Van Camp Packing Company and the said Godchaux Sugars, Inc., the assets and the corporate entity remained the same, and that said re-organization through re-adjustment of the form of securities in each instance was for the purpose of aiding the corporation and its stockholders in issuing in exchange for the old securities new securities which it was in good faith believed by those interested therein would be more attractive to investors and more saleable, and that as to the National Bank of Kentucky, the re-organization of same was for the same purpose and also for the further purpose of bringing together the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, in the hope and expectation that the association of said two institutions under a unified control would result in larger profits to the stockholders of both institutions, as hereinafter set out.

Defendant states that said decedent, Frank A. Menne, during his life time and at the time of his death was the owner of fifty shares of capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, of the par value of $100 each; that on the 21st day of February 1922 this defendant qualified as executor of the will of said Frank A. Menne, and that the appraised market value of said shares of stock at said time was $16,250; that thereafter this said defendant transferred to itself as trustee under said will said fifty shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, and on the 28th day of June, 1927, as such trustee, received a stock dividend of thirty shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky.

That during the period that this defendant acted as executor and as trustee of the will of said Frank A. Menno the value of the holdings of said estate in the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky increased, and that said increase came about largely, if not entirely, because of the early prospect of some sort of connection or consolidation with the Louisville Trust Company, and that the trust agreement hereinafter referred to dated April 22, 1927, effectuated said connection or consolidation, and as a result thereof said shares of stock and trustees participation shares, hereinafter referred to, enhanced further in value after same came into the hands of this defendant as trustee, and that said shares further enhanced in value because of the formation of the BancoKentucky Company.

That on June 28, 1927, the defendant herein, as such executor, transferred said stock into eighty so-called Trustees' Participation Shares, the certificate issued therefor representing eighty shares of the par value of $100 each of an indivisible trust estate created by a trust agreement dated April 22, 1927, ~~said trust estate consisting~~ at that time solely of shares of the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville, Kentucky, and The Louisville Trust Company, of Louisville, Kentucky. A copy of said trust agreement, if required, will be filed herewith, as part hereof, as if fully copied herein, marked Exhibit "A".

That thereafter, towit on August 1, 1929, this defendant as such trustee exchanged said 80 Trustees' Participation Shares of the par value of $100 each for 800 of said Trustees' Participation Shares of the par value of $10 each, said trustees having by proper action changed the par value of said shares from $100 to $10 each.

That thereafter, towit on November 22, 1929, this defendant as trustee exchanged said 800 Trustees' Participation Shares for 1600 shares of the common stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

That the Louisville Trust Company at all the times herein mentioned had all powers given to trust companies by the statutes of the State of Kentucky, and by proper amendment of its Articles of Incorporation [redacted] original stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and of the [redacted] Trust Company; and at the time the 600 shares of the par value [redacted] each of said Trustees' Participation shares, held by their defendant trustee herein, were exchanged for [redacted] shares of stock in The BancoKentucky Company, said The BancoKentucky Company had no assets other than [redacted] Trustees' Participation shares of said Trust and such cash as had been [redacted] as subscriptions to its stock.

That it was the opinion of the directors of said The National [redacted] Bank of Kentucky that it was to the interest of said The National Bank of Kentucky and of its stockholders, including the estate of said Frank A. [redacted] that the reorganization of interest with the Louisville Trust Company [redacted] on the plan of said trust agreement of April 22,1927, [redacted] on the stock and the value of the investment would [redacted] and that it was also the opinion of the directors of [redacted] National Bank of Kentucky that the organization of said The BancoKentucky Company and the exchange of said Trustees' Participation shares [redacted] shares of stock in said The BancoKentucky Company and the carrying on of the corporate purposes of said The BancoKentucky Company would likewise result in increased earnings and increased value of the investment of that portion of the estate of Frank A. Verne formerly represented by said stock in The National Bank of Kentucky.

That the organization of said The BancoKentucky Company and the exchange of said Trustees' Participation shares for shares of stock therein was considered by the stockholders, directors, officers, trustees and other persons involved therein as a reorganization of The National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, and that the Government of the United States, by a ruling of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, after a hearing of all the facts connected with said transaction, held that same was a reorganization of the institutions above mentioned, and that the exchange of said Trustees' Participation [redacted] for shares of stock in The BancoKentucky Company was not a sale of securities and that no profit or loss resulted to the owners of said Trustees' Participation shares from said exchange.

That if this defendant, either as executor or as trustee, had sold the said Trustees' Participation shares or the said stock of the BancoKentucky Company received in exchange for said Trustees' Participation shares, said sale would have resulted in a profit to said estate and that said estate would have been forced to pay income taxes thereon.

That at the time of the organization of said The BancoKentucky Company both the said The National Bank of Kentucky and the said Louisville Trust Company had been in successful operation and had paid dividends continuously for a period of more than thirty years, and the Trustees' Participation shares had also paid dividends during the time such shares were in existence, and that for that reason, although said The BancoKentucky Company as a corporation had not been in existence for a period of ten years, the corporations, the stock of which comprised its assets as above set out, had been in existence and in active and successful operation for a period of time much longer than ten years, and during said time had not defaulted in the payment of the interest or principal of any debt, bonded or otherwise.

That very many of the most prudent and successful business men in the City of Louisville and the State of Kentucky and elsewhere, including stockholders, directors and officers of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, and others, regarded the plan by which the affiliation of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company was effected, by the trust agreement above mentioned and by the organization of The BancoKentucky Company and the exchange of securities thereunder, as herein mentioned, as very advantageous to all the stockholders of the said bank and the said trust company, and exchanged their own stocks in said bank and said trust company for Trustees' Participation shares, and exchanged their Trustees' Participation shares for stock in The BancoKentucky Company, and that said Trustees' Participation shares and said BancoKentucky stock were then regarded by prudent business men as safe investments, and continued to be so regarded until within a few days of the date of the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company.

That this defendant exchanged said shares as set out herein and purchased said stock in The BancoKentucky Company only after it had received legal opinions from lawyers in whom it had confidence that said exchange of securities and said purchase of stock were legal and not in violation of any statute or other law of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

That as to the 1900 shares of stock in the BancoKentucky Company which were exchanged for Trustees' Participation shares as above set out, there was no investment of the funds of the estate of Frank A. Menne, deceased, but merely an exchange of securities through reorganization.

That after the exchange of the said stock of The National Bank of Kentucky for Trustees' Participation shares as set out herein, dividends at the rate of sixteen per cent per annum were earned and paid quarterly on said shares, which said dividends were in excess of any dividends theretofore paid on said stock of The National Bank of Kentucky; and after the exchange of said Trustees' Participation shares for said stock in The BancoKentucky Company, dividends were earned and paid on said stock quarterly, up to and including October 30th, 1930, at the rate of twenty cents per quarter on each share of stock, which represented the same total quarterly dividend which had been paid on said Trustees' Participation shares held by this defendant as trustee for the estate of Frank A. Menne, deceased.

That so large a percentage of the stock of The National Bank of Kentucky was exchanged for said Trustees' Participation shares, towit, 39,820 shares out of a total of 40,000 outstanding shares, and so large a percentage of said Trustees' Participation shares was exchanged for stock of The BancoKentucky Company, towit, more than ninety-five per cent thereof, that it was known to this defendant and to all other persons familiar with transactions in investment securities that after the period for the exchange of said respective securities expired, either the stock in The National Bank of Kentucky, or the Trustees' Participation shares would possess little or no marketability, and for that reason would be less desirable, either as a trust investment or as an investment for a private individual, than would stock in The BancoKentucky Company.

That the BancoKentucky Company was placed in the hands of a receiver solely because of the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company and the losses to The BancoKentucky Company which resulted therefrom, and that but for the closing thereof said The BancoKentucky Company would now be a going and prosperous corporation and would be earning and paying dividends.

That had this defendant retained said stock in The National Bank of Kentucky owned by the estate of said Frank A. Menne, either in its original form or as Trustees' Participation shares, same would have been of no greater value than the said BancoKentucky Company stock into which it was converted, and furthermore, either as stock in The National Bank of Kentucky or as Trustees' Participation shares said investment would in all probability have entailed an additional liability against said estate in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Kentucky relating to the liability of owners of stock in banks and trust companies.

PARAGRAPH IV.

Further answering herein defendant, Louisville Trust Company, says:

That all of the beneficiaries under the will of said Frank A. Menne who had any interest in the question of the retention or early re-investment of the securities held by the said Frank A. Menne, and particularly Mrs. Katie Menne, the widow of said Frank A. Menne, knew of the retention of the stocks referred to herein in the estate of Frank A. Menne and received statements thereof showing said stock as investments and showing the dividends received therefrom, and received and accepted income on account of said dividends, and no complaint of the retention of said stocks or the exchange thereof, in accordance with the reorganization plans of the companies involved, was ever made by the said Katie Kenne or any other person interested in said estate or by the advisory committee appointed under the will of the said Frank A. Kenne, until after the 24th day of November, 1930, and the dividends on said stock were, with full knowledge of their source, received by said Katie Kenne and the other persons interested in said income without objection.

That because of the facts herein set forth the said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company as Trustee under the will of the said Frank A. Kenne is estopped to claim any sum in damages against this defendant insofar as the income accruing to the said Katie Kenne and the other recipients of income from said estate is concerned on account of the failure of this defendant to sell the stock of the Godchaux Sugars, Inc., or the stock of the Van Camp Packing Company or the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, or on account of the exchange of said securities for other securities through reorganizations of said companies.

WHEREFORE, having fully answered, defendant prays to be dismissed hence with its costs, and for all other equitable relief to which it may appear to be entitled.

Attorneys for Defendant,
Louisville Trust Company.

Gentlemen:

We enclose herewith to Mr. Brown the original letter containing the ruling of the Rules and Regulations Section of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, holding that the Trust Agreement entered into on April 23rd, 1927, between the shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, constitutes an association within the meaning of the various Revenue Acts, and a copy of the same letter to Mr. Bean.

In our judgment this ruling will fortify our opinion that the present plan in connection with the Bancokentucky Company constitutes a reorganization within the meaning of the Revenue Act of 1928.

The original of the letter which is enclosed to Mr. Brown should be carefully preserved.

Sirs:

Reference is made to your letter of July 15, 1929, enclosing a copy of trust agreement entered into on April 22, 1927 between the owners and holders of capital stock in The National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, and requesting a ruling with respect to the taxable status of the organization.

The trust agreement recites that the owners and holders of the shares of the capital stock of The National Bank of Kentucky and the owners and holders of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company, looking to the best interests of the respective institutions as separate corporate entities and of each stockholder therein, have determined that such interests require closer cooperation of such Bank and Trust Company to be of greater service to their respective patrons and in order to secure such cooperation have agreed upon the plan set forth for creating a trust estate, to consist of their respective shares of stock in the Bank and Trust Company. The trust agreement provides for the creation of an Advisory Committee composed of the individuals who are the then directors of the Louisville Trust Company and The National Bank of Kentucky. Any action taken by the trustees is subject to the approval of the Advisory Committee. The trustee may purchase the stock of any other corporations of similar character engaged in a like or similar business with the written consent of the Advisory Committee. The trustees have power with the written consent of the Advisory Committee to sell certain stock acquired and the proceeds when collected shall be disposed of by the trustees with the written consent of the Advisory Committee, by division among the certificate holders or using same in the purchase of stock of corporations, or adding to capital or surplus, of any of the corporations the stock of which is owned by the trustees. The certificate holder may instruct the trustees how to vote their interest at corporate meetings. Dividends received from stock owned by the trustees shall be distributed among the certificate holders, but with the written consent of the Advisory Committee and all or any part of any extra dividend may be used for the benefit of the trust in any lawful manner. The trust agreement provides for regular and special meetings of the certificate holders. By written direction of the Advisory Committee, the trustees named in the trust agreement may be removed and a corporation authorized to act in a fiduciary capacity, designated in their stead, in which event the corporation so named shall acquire all the powers of the individual trustees. The trust agreement provides for the organization of the trustees, consisting of a Chairman, Vice Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer, and an Assistant Secretary, and a Transfer Agent and Registrar for the transfer and registration of certificates. The form of participating certificates provided for in the trust agreement is similar to an ordinary stock certificate. The trust may be terminated or modified by a vote of two-thirds of the holders of certificates.

It is apparent that the certificate holders and trustees have undertaken as an organized body to trade in securities owned by the organization. Such activities constitute the carrying on of a business enterprise for income tax purposes. The organization is in quasi corporate form, its trustees, like the directors of a corporation, are carrying on the business for the beneficiaries who only share in the profits. The beneficial interests of the organization are represented by certificates, which like corporate shares and in much the same manner are transferable. The certificate holders through the Advisory Committee control the management and operations of the organization. An organization having these characteristics, engaged in the prosecution of a business enterprise, has the general form, mode of procedure and effectiveness in action of a corporation.

In view of the foregoing, the organization created by the owners and holders of capital stock in The National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, Henry Vogt, Thomas J. Minary, Stuart H. Duncan, Allen P. Dodd, Edwin H. Drummond and Charles H. Bohmer, Trustees, is taxable as an association within the meaning of the several Revenue Acts and should file returns accordingly.

Respectfully,

C. R. ALLEN,

Deputy Commissioner,

By (Signed) L. Sunderlin

Chief of Section.

Dear Mr. Barret,

Our stock records show that you have not yet brought in the Interim Receipt for 3 6/10 shares for exchange into the current $10.00 par value participation shares.

Will you be kind enough to look into the matter at once because there have been a number of changes in the form of these securities and unless an exchange is made, you will be holding a certificate that is not of the current form and, therefore, will not enjoy a good market should you ever care to sell it in the years to come.

We feel it our duty to give you this information, because, of course, we want our stockholders to enjoy all of the privileges that come with holding a form of security that is being traded in all the time.

We are registering this letter to be sure that it reaches your hands.

The stockholders exchanged for about twenty-eight (28) millions in stock and there was paid in in cash about ten (10) millions. Chicago has subscribed for six (6) millions and Cincinnati took about two and one-fourth (2¼) millions. This leaves in the treasury three and three-fourths (3¾) millions, which will handle the remaining Cincinnati and Covington deals probably. If we trade for any more banks, we will have to increase the capital.

The Bank of Kentucky does not know how much was drawn out in deposits to pay for stock and we do not know accurately, but we guess about one-half million dollars.

The Bank of Kentucky loaned $5,300,000.00 and we loaned $1,710,000.00, or a total of $7,000,000.00. From this you will see that only about three millions in cash remain.

The company now has on deposit $550,000.00 with us and $3,500,000.00 or less with the National Bank of Kentucky. The Bank of Kentucky is always flush up to the Seventeenth of the month when the Standard Oil has to be paid and later the L. and N. payment so they are hard up the last of the month.

Dear Mr. Ahern:-

In line with the decision to issue Interim Receipts at the Fifth & Fourth Street Offices of the National Bank of Kentucky, May I make the following suggestions in order to assure accuracy of the Transfer Department records?

I suggest that both of the banks deliver to the Trustees at the close of business each day, all certificates of National Bank of Kentucky The Louisville Trust Company stock, which have been deposited that day, together with a record thereof in quadruplicate prepared similar to the form which we are now using.

In addition to this record, in order that we may be able to keep our postings up to date, I suggest that each day both banks furnish our Stock Transfer Department with a complete record of the Interim Receipts, which have been issued for that day. This record should show the number of the Interim Receipt, the exact name in which it has been issued, the complete address of the registered owner, and the number of shares represented thereby.

Another suggestion which I believe is of extreme importance is as follows: At the close of business each day that both banks could deliver to our Stock Transfer Department all subscriptions taken in, in that day's work. These subscriptions should be sent to the Trust Company accompanied by a complete list showing the name of the subscriber, his address, and the number of shares subscribed for. The list could be made up in duplicate, and we could sign the duplicate copy, and return to the banks as a receipt for the subscriptions. In other words, I see no necessity for having the actual subscriptions scattered among the three offices.

Mr. John S. Ahern - Continued -

The new certificates have been ordered and as soon as they are ready for delivery, I will let you know.

If my suggestions, as outlined herein, meet with your approval, kindly advise me and Mr. [redacted] can instruct the Fourth Street Bank accordingly.

The BancoKentucky Company
Louisville, Ky., Dec. 31, 1929.

TO THE STOCKHOLDER ADDRESSED:

You are hereby notified that the annual meeting of stockholders of The BancoKentucky Company will be held at the office of the corporation in the National Bank of Kentucky, Fifth and Main Streets, Louisville, Kentucky, on Tuesday, January 14, 1930, at ten o'clock A. M.

At said meeting there will be submitted to the stockholders for their consideration and action a recommendation of the Board of Directors that the Certificate of Incorporation be amended (a) so as to increase the total authorized capital stock from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 and (b) so as to abolish the pre-emptive right of stockholders to subscribe for newly authorized shares. The resolution adopted by the Board of Directors is as follows:

RESOLVED that it is deemed advisable by the Board of Directors of The BancoKentucky Company that the charter of the corporation be amended as follows:

1: By striking out the whole of Paragraph Number "Fourth" of the Certificate of Incorporation and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"The total authorized capital stock of this corporation is Five Million (5,000,000) shares of common stock, each share of the par value of Ten Dollars, amounting in the aggregate to Fifty Million ($50,000,000) Dollars, and being a total authorized capital stock of Fifty Million ($50,000,000) Dollars."

2: By adding to the Certificate of Incorporation an additional Paragraph as follows:

"The stockholders of the corporation shall have no pre-emptive right to subscribe for any newly authorized or issued shares of stock of the corporation."

RESOLVED, further, that the newly authorized shares, as hereinabove provided for, shall be disposed of at such times, in such amounts and upon such terms as may be determined by the Board of Directors of the corporation, but no shares shall be disposed of at a price of less than Twenty-Five ($25.00) Dollars, per share.

RESOLVED, further, that the purpose of this increase of capital stock is to provide additional capital needed for the proper carrying on of the business of the corporation and the acquisition of other property.

RESOLVED, further, that the proposed amendments of the Certificate of Incorporation, as above set out, be submitted to the stockholders at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the corporation, to be held on January 14, 1930, at ten o'clock A. M., at the office of the corporation in the National Bank of Kentucky, Fifth and Main Streets, Louisville, Kentucky.

RESOLVED, further, that with the letter containing the notice to stockholders of the annual meeting, which shall be mailed to each stockholder, at least ten days prior to the date of meeting, there shall be enclosed a copy of this resolution and a proxy appointing Attorneys In Fact to represent stockholders at said annual meeting.

The meeting will also be for the purpose of electing members of the Board of Directors to serve during the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

Exhibit 134-8

There is also enclosed a proxy to be signed by each stockholder and returned in the enclosed stamped and addressed envelope as soon as possible.

For your information it is stated that the abolishing of the pre-emptive right of stockholders in no wise restricts their right to subscribe for additional shares on the same basis that persons not stockholders are permitted to subscribe.

If you wish to exchange your stock, please sign the enclosed deposit my receipt and return it to us together with your stock properly endorsed and itemized, at your earliest opportunity.

The right to exchange this stock expired on the 19th day of September, 1929. We feel that it is to your advantage to deposit your stock and exchange it for the Bancoe-Kentucky. Be kind enough to let us hear from you promptly as this privilege cannot remain open longer than ten days from the date of this letter.

Dear Sir,

The following facts have been called to the attention of the Stock Transfer Department, and we are listing them here for your information.

Mrs. Emma Robbins is a holder of a Trustees' Participation Certificate for 520 shares of stock. The circular sent out July 19th, 1929 and the registered letter that followed were both mailed to the above mentioned stockholder at 505 West Ormsby Ave. This address was put on our records through error and the mail should have gone to Mrs. Emma Robbins cafe of Mr. J. The receipt for the registered letter was signed by a maid at the Louisville address and we are of the opinion that Mrs. Emma Robbins did not receive any notice regarding the BancoKentucky Co.

PLAINTIFF'S EXHIBIT No. .....
OCT 18 1938
Paul C. Carpenter
OFFICIAL REPORTER

Hon. J. W. Cammack,
Attorney General,
Frankfort, Ky.

Dear General:

Agreeable to my promise to elaborate the points discussed in our conference, on the above subject, I take pleasure in submitting the following suggestions.

I understand that the question of doubt in your mind was as to whether the State Board of Education or the Sinking Fund Commissioners have the power to consent and take the necessary steps to unify that part of the National Bank of Kentucky stock owned by the Board of Education under the Trust Agreement, dated April 22, 1927, between the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company; and I will return to this subject promptly having first explained that I had originally understood the purpose of the conference to be in regard to the interpretation of the Agreement referred to and as to the economic advantage to the stockholders uniting therein.

So far as the economic considerations are concerned, I rather gather that the members of the Board of Education are satisfied from the showing that the plan had been approved by seventeen hundred individual stockholders of the two institutions, and has resulted in an increase in the market value in the Bank of Kentucky shares from the time the plan was first announced to date of about $115 per share, and in the dividend basis of about $5.60 per share upon the stock previously held when supplemented by the stock dividend.

The present stock owned by the State is a part of that originally issued in 1834 when the Bank of Kentucky was chartered by Chapter 448 Session Acts 1833-1835, pages 618 to 634, and which charter was approved by Governor John Breathitt. Apparently at that time the Governor was authorized to take $2,000,000 out of the $5,000,000 of capital authorized, but my search of the original records fails to disclose where the State ever acquired more than $1,040,000.

By the Amendment, Chapter 256 Acts of 1841-1843, page 44, in Section 17, it was provided that $1,000,000 of the stock held by the State of Kentucky in the Bank of Kentucky would be surrendered by the banks returning to the State $1,000,000 of its own bonds which had been previously acquired by the bank.

There are many other amendments of this character increasing and reducing stock which are unnecessary to consider in detail.

When the Constitution of 1849 was adopted, Article XI, concerning education, expressly set up a common school fund, which among other items consisted of $73,500 of stock of the Bank of Kentucky, and certain bonds of the Commonwealth payable to the State Board of Education. This section of the Constitution of 1849 is almost a counterpart of Section 184 of the present Constitution, referring again to the $73,500 of stock of the Bank of Kentucky, together with the bonds of the Commonwealth, and in which it is expressly declared that these funds shall be "held by the Board of Education" and as such is known as the school fund.

You will find a rather interesting interpretation of the provisions of the old Constitution in Higgins v. Frater, Sheriff, 91 Ky. 6, opinion by Chief Justice Holt, and of the similar provisions in the present Constitution in Agricultural & Mechanical College v. Hager, 121 Ky., 1, opinion by Judge O'Rear.

Owing to this setting aside of this stock and the bonds, a question arose as to whether the Legislature would have the power to dispose of the stock or as to who would have the power to dispose of the stock if the Constitutional limitations were not clarified.

So in the Constitutional Debates, Vol. III, page 457, in reporting the meaning of the provision, it was said:

> "Upon examination of the present Constitution, it was a matter of doubt whether the Legislature could by any act dispose of its stock in the Bank of Kentucky; whether the State was not bound under the provisions of the present Constitution to keep the stock in the way it is now held. This fund amounts to $73,000.00. While there is nothing to be said against that admirably managed and solvent institution, the object of the provision is simply to put it in the power of the Legislature to dispose of the stock, if, in the course of years any necessity should arise for doing so to secure the fund."

It is in light of these conditions and Legislative history that we must consider Section 185 which refers back to the "said school fund" and provides, in substance, that

> "The General Assembly shall make provisions by law for the payment of the interest of said school fund and may provide for the sale of the stock in the Bank of Kentucky, and in case of a sale of all or any part of said stock, the proceeds of sale shall be invested by the sinking fund commissioners in good interest bearing stocks or bonds which shall be subject to sale and reinvestment from time to time . . ."

From the latter section it is to be noted: (a) that the Legislature may provide for the sale of the stock of the Bank of Kentucky; (b) that the proceeds of sale are to be reinvested by the sinking fund commissioners; and (3) that these commissioners are by the Constitution authorized to invest in interest-bearing stock or bonds. Whereas in the preceding section, 184, as above noted, it was provided that the stock should be > "held by the Board of Education and its trustees shall be held inviolate for the purpose of sustaining the system of common schools."

Neither the Board of Education nor the Sinking Fund Commissioners are specifically provided for in the Constitution. Therefore, I take it that the General Assembly would have power to determine the qualifications and personnel of either or both these boards, though apparently the drafters of the Constitution assumed that they exercised the same functions.

Both of these Boards are given the power to sell the stock in the Bank of Kentucky in the following ways:

I

As to the State Board of Education, it is by Section 4377 created a body corporate, and by Section 4378 as such corporation it is authorized as follows:

> "The corporation shall take, hold and dispose of real and personal estate for the benefit of the common schools of the State."

It seems clear to me that the words "take, hold and dispose of", used in this section, relate to a complete cycle of acquiring, possessing and selling, the funds set apart to the Board of Education, including that specifically mentioned in the Constitution, Section 184, where among other things the stock in the Bank of Kentucky is to be "held by the Board of Education and its trustees shall be held inviolate for the purpose of sustaining the system of common schools."

The words "dispose of" have been many times construed by the courts to be broader than the words "to sell". Thus the Supreme Court in Phelps v. Harris, 101 U.S. 370, said:

> "The expression 'to dispose of' is very broad and signifies more than 'to sell'. Selling is but one mode of disposing of property".

And the Court of Appeals in Sherrill v. Overbacker, 182 Ky. 626, held that the word "dispose" is sufficiently comprehensive to include every possible mode of alienation or disposition of property.

And, again, it held in Carpenter v. Allen, 198 Ky. 282, that the words "sell and dispose" include every form of alienation.

Black's Law Dictionary defines the word "dispose" as:

Exhibit 134-10

"To alienate or divest the ownership of property; * * * called a word of large extent."

You will probably have noticed that the words used to explain the meaning of Section 185 in the Debates were the words "to dispose of", and, therefore, it seems to me that the State Board of Equalization would have the right under this Legislative authority to order a disposition or sale or exchange of the stock in the Bank of Kentucky which is vested in them by the Constitution, Section 184, even though under the Constitution the Sinking Fund Commissioners are directed by the Constitution to reinvest the proceeds, and which proceeds, in turn, are to be held inviolate for the purpose of maintaining the common schools by the Board of Equalization.

II

Now let us consider the powers of the Sinking Fund Commissioners. It is undoubtedly true that the Constitution, Section 185, they are required to reinvest the proceeds arising from the sale of stock of the Bank of Kentucky, and it is also true that among the powers conferred for the Sinking Fund Commission by the Kentucky Statutes, Section 4888, is the provision that

"The Commissioners shall have authority to sell any bank stock owned by the Commonwealth and apply the proceeds to the payment or to the purchase of the bonds of the State".

It may be necessary to separate this sentence and treat it as a power in the Sinking Fund Commissioners to sell, and to ignore as surplusage the method of their reinvestment, because the Constitution itself, Section 185, has specifically directed that if this stock is sold, the proceeds "shall be invested by the Sinking Fund Commissioners in other good interest bearing stocks or bonds which shall be subject to sale and reinvestment from time to time."

Irrespective of who has the power to hold, which I think is the Board of Equalization, or who has the power to reinvest, which under the Constitution is a duty required of the Sinking Fund Commissioners; it seems to me that both bodies are given the power to sell. The matter could be put beyond question of doubt by and through expediency of having the Board of Education and the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, at their respective sessions, adopt the same resolution, each concurring in and authorizing the sale or transfer of the stock into the new certificates of the united institutions, and the results so adopted would be recognized by the transfer agent of the stock and the new stock certificates issued.

OFFICIAL REPORTER

Mr. Nicholas H. Bosker, Vice-President
The Louisville Trust Company
Louisville, Kentucky

Dear Mr. Bosker:

IN RE: THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY

In reply to your recent inquiry, we beg to advise that in our opinion the shares of The BancoKentucky Company will not be taxable to the shareholders under the laws of Kentucky.

Section 4020, Carroll's Kentucky Statutes, as amended by the Acts of 1924, provides immunity from taxation for the shareholders of a corporation upon the shares of a corporation (domestic or foreign),

> "at least seventy-five per cent (75%) of whose total property is taxable in Kentucky, ... so long as the corporation pays taxes on all its property in Kentucky . . . . ."

For the purposes of this opinion we assume that all of the property of The BancoKentucky Company, or at least a very substantial part thereof, will be intangible personal property; for, manifestly, there could be no question as to the situs of taxation of an office building or other real estate owned by the corporation in Louisville.

The question then narrows down to this: would the intangible personal property, owned by The BancoKentucky Company, be "taxable in Kentucky" within the meaning of Section 4020, supra? If so, then there could be no doubt that the shares of the Company would not be subject to taxation in the hands of the shareholders.

Section 4020, Carroll's Kentucky Statutes, provides as follows:

> "All real and personal estate within this state, and all personal estate of persons residing in this state, and of all corporations organized under the laws of this state, whether the same be in or out of the state, including intangible property, which shall be considered and estimated in fixing the value of corporate franchises as herein provided, shall be subject to taxation unless the same be exempt from taxation by the constitution, and shall be assessed at its fair cash value, estimated at the price it would bring at a fair voluntary sale: Provided, however, That tangible personal property located and having a taxable situs without the state, of persons residing in this state, and of all corporations organized under the laws of this state, shall not be subject to taxation: And, provided further, That the situs of intangible personal property for purposes of taxation shall be at the residence of the real or beneficial owner, and not at the residence of the fiduciary or agent having the custody or possession of same. Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall in any way affect the liability for franchise taxes now payable by corporations organized under the laws of this state. (Sec. as amd. by act March, 1908, p. 121.)"

In quite a number of decisions, beginning with Commonwealth v. R. G. Dun and Company, 126 Ky. 108, 31 K.L.R. 561, 102 S.W. 859, the Court of Appeals of Kentucky has held that personal property of a non-resident "within this state" temporarily is not subject to taxation here, whether the personal property be tangible or intangible; but, where such property is located here permanently, or is produced in the course of a business which is of more or less permanent location in this State, or is used in the course of such business, then, such personal property acquires a taxable situs in this State, regardless of the domicile of the owner.

In the Dun case, supra, this rule was applied to the Louisville office of R. G. Dun and Company, sustaining an assessment by the Commonwealth upon Accounts Receivable on the books of the Company in Louisville, even though Dun and Company was operated by Trustees and the chief office of the Company was located in the State of New York. In sustaining the assessment the Court said:

"This section of the statute literally includes all property, whether owned by residents or nonresidents. This court, however, in construing this statute has determined that it does not apply to the property of nonresidents when in this State temporarily; that in such a case the situs for the purpose of taxation is at the domicile of the owner. (Citing several cases.) But this court has never held that when a nonresident of this State establishes a business in this State, from which money is derived, and other property is accumulated, that such property should be relieved from taxation.

"In our opinion the accumulations from the business of appellee are not temporarily in this State in the meaning of the decisions referred to. In this case we have a nonresident with an established business, agents residing here who managed it, and an income of over $40,000 annually; its business received the same protection as the business of the citizen under the laws of the State, and should be compelled to share equally the burden. The obligation to pay taxes on property for the support of the government arises from the fact that it is under the protection of the government. Persons should not be permitted to avail themselves of the benefit of the laws of the State in the conduct of their business, within its limits, and then escape their due contribution to the public needs."

The Dun case was followed and approved in the case of Commonwealth v. Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company, 143 Ky. 314, 136 S.W. 1032. In this case the taxpayer was a New Jersey corporation, but all of its distilleries, having whiskey in storage, were located in Kentucky, as was its principal office and place of business. In the course of its business, storage accounts for whiskey in bond accrued to the Company, and these the Commonwealth undertook to assess for taxation. The assessment was sustained by the Court in a very elaborate opinion, concluding with the following words:

> "The Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company is a New Jersey corporation, and may be said to have a legal residence in that state. But all of its distilleries having whisky in storage are located in this state, and the principal business office of the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company is located in Louisville, Jefferson county, in this state. It is at this office that all the business relating to and concerning the distilleries operated by it is carried on and there are kept all of the books, accounts, and papers of the corporation that relate to the transaction of its business in this state. It may therefore be said that, while the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company has a technical legal residence in the state of New Jersey, it has in this state a business residence at which all its business in this state is managed and carried on by resident agents and employes. It is here that the warehouse receipts are issued, and here that they are presented when the possession of the whisky described in them is demanded, and here that the storage accounts are paid, although in the meantime and before they are actually transferred to the purchaser they may pass through an office of the company in New Jersey or New York. It is here that the whisky is located upon which these receipts are a lien, and to which the company looks for the payment of its storage fees. In short, aside from the fact that it has a mere technical legal residence in the state of New Jersey, all of its business is conducted and carried on in this state, and for every business purpose it is a Kentucky corporation. Under these facts we think it manifest that the accounts are assessable to it in this state at its established place of business in this state. The case of the Commonwealth v. Dun and Co., 126 Ky. 108, 108 S.W. 859, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 561, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 920, is directly in point upon this question."

In the case of Commonwealth v. Consolidated Casualty Company, 170 Ky. 103, 185 S.W. 508, the principle announced in the foregoing cases was reaffirmed by the Court of Appeals, but not applied because of a distinction in the facts, which, however, serves to emphasize the applicability of the rule to the case of The BancoKentucky Company. In this case the Consolidated Casualty Company, a West Virginia corporation, writing accident, health and indemnity insurance, purchased some bonds secured by Kentucky real estate and deposited them with the Insurance Commissioner of West Virginia under provisions of the insurance laws of that state. The bonds were purchased with money derived from the sale of appellee's capital stock and not from premiums or profits derived in the course of business. The Court held these bonds were not taxable and in the opinion said:

> "We do not overlook the fact that it was held in Commonwealth v. Dun & Co., 126 Ky. 108, 108 S.W. 859, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 561, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 920, that intangible property owned by a nonresident could acquire a situs for taxation in Kentucky if used exclusively in or accumulated from business done in Kentucky, but the rule announced in that case cannot apply here, because the bonds sought to be > taxed are not held in Kentucky or used by appellee exclusively therein, nor were they acquired from business done in Kentucky. On the contrary, as previously remarked, they were admittedly purchased by appellee with money derived from the sale of its stock, when its executive office was in West Virginia, and immediately placed on deposit with the auditor or insurance commissioner of that state, in whose custody they have since remained. If appellee were a domestic corporation, the fact that the bonds are held in another state would not necessarily exempt them from taxation in this state, but, as it is not a domestic, but a foreign, corporation, and the bonds have not been held in this state, used exclusively therein, or accumulated from business done in the state, it cannot be said to have a taxable situs therein. In other words, the property sought to be taxed here consists of bonds that represent one isolated loan made by appellee at a time when even its executive office was not in the state, and the money loaned had not been accumulated from business done in the state. There is a manifest distinction between taxing the average capital invested by a nonresident in business carried on in a particular state and the taxation of isolated credits due to a nonresident."

To the same effect, see Commonwealth v. Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, 38 K.L.R. 796, 107 S.W. 233.

It is true that in Kentucky, as in a number of the American states, the situs of intangible personal property is fixed, by statute, at the domicile of the real or beneficial owner; and, if the State of Delaware levied an ad valorem tax upon intangibles of corporations organized under its laws, the result would be that the intangibles owned by The BancoKentucky Company would be assessed for taxation in both States. It is our understanding that the State of Delaware has no such tax. However, it should be pointed out that the mere fact that double taxation can, and sometimes does, exist, is no conclusive argument against the taxation of intangibles where physically located or where the business is conducted which produces them.

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky at one time held, in order to avoid double taxation of intangibles, that the intangibles of a Kentucky corporation, located and developed by business outside of the State, were not taxable here. See Commonwealth v. West India Oil Company, 138 Ky. 828, 129 S.W. 301, 36 L.R.A. (N.S.) 895, and also, Commonwealth v. Avery & Sons, 163 Ky. 813, 174 S.W. 518. In these cases, the Court went so far as to say that so much of Section 4020, supra, as undertook to impose a tax upon intangibles located outside the State, was unconstitutional.

But some years after these cases had been decided the Supreme Court of the United States held in the case of Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, Executor, L.P.Ewald, v. City of Louisville, 245 U.S. 54, 62 Law Ed. 145, that it was not a denial of due process or equal protection to tax intangibles outside the state in which the owner maintained his domicile, even though the domiciliary state likewise assessed and taxed these intangibles. And, following this decision (which in effect reversed Commonwealth v. West India Oil Company and Commonwealth v. Avery and Sons, supra) the Court of Appeals in the case of Bingham's Administrator v. Commonwealth, 199 Ky. 402, 251 S.W. 936, expressly overruled these two cases. The result of the foregoing seems to be that at the present time the State of Kentucky can, and does, assess for taxation, not only intangible property of nonresidents which is "located" within this State, but also, the intangibles of residents of Kentucky which are "located" without this State.

This being true, all of the intangible property owned by The BancoKentucky Company would be taxable in Kentucky, within the meaning of Section 4088, supra, and, therefore, the shares of this corporation would be exempt from taxation.

Yours very truly,

Robert F. Vaughan

Dear Mr. Brown:

IN RE: THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY

Supplementing my former letter to you under date of July 6th, on Wednesday I had a conversation with a lawyer, representing the Income Tax Unit at Washington, in the General Counsel's Department, who shortly expects to become a member of the firm of Miller and Chevalier, my office associates in Louisville, which firm, as heretofore explained, specializes in Federal Tax cases, with offices in Washington and New York.

The gentleman gave as his opinion (without opportunity to study the history of the entire transaction) that it was highly important that every preliminary paper, resolution, etc., dealing with this Company and its organization, should clearly recite that the Company is a "reorganization," within the purview of the Revenue Act of 1939.

In other words, the issue and delivery of two shares of stock of the Company, for one Trustees Participation Share, must be made to appear (so far as the Bank's stockholders are concerned) as a mere receipt of the same property in another form, and not as a closed transaction wherein they part with one species of property in exchange for an entirely different species of property.

I believe we can accomplish this result, without in anywise impairing the structure of the setup already agreed upon, by prefacing the prospectus with some general remarks, as per the enclosed draft herewith submitted for your criticism.

To the Holders of Trustees Participation Shares,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Your Officers and Directors have, for sometime past, been seriously considering a reorganization of your banking institutions to meet the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business in this country, and also, to prepare for still greater changes, which, in our opinion, are rapidly approaching.

We are unanimously of the opinion that the first step to be taken by our shareholders in this reorganization is the creation of a third corporation, under state laws, with broad powers and strong resources, to be operated by your Officers and Directors in conjunction and in close cooperation with the two banks, expanding their credit facilities and supplementing their functions in the financial world.

Accordingly, your Directors have caused to be organized, subject to your approval, as hereinafter set forth, a corporation under the laws of Delaware, known as The Bancokentucky Company. In keeping with the idea of its formation and the plans of its future operation, it is essential that the shares of the Company, or at least a substantial majority thereof, must be owned by the present holders of the Trustees Participation Shares. Mr. James B. Brown, President
Louisville, Kentucky

Dear Sir:

In re: Bancokentucky Company

On yesterday you asked me whether the holders of the Trustees Participation Shares would be subject to income tax, in the event they exchanged their shares for the shares of Bancokentucky Company, in accordance with the terms of the prospectus.

I have conferred with my associates, Messrs. Miller and Chevalier, and submit herewith our composite view on this question.

1) If the Bancokentucky Company cannot be considered as a "reorganization" under the Revenue Act of 1928, then, undoubtedly the holders of the Participation Shares would be taxable on the transfer, on the amount of the profit realized from the transaction. This profit would be the difference between the cost of the Participation Shares and the fair market value of the shares of Bancokentucky Company, which would be $25.00 or more. In view of the fact that every shareholder of the National Bank of Commerce is still a shareholder in the two institutions, it will be at once seen that the taxable gain would be very large, were it not possible to treat the Bancokentucky Company as a reorganization under the Revenue Act of 1928.

2) We believe that the Bancokentucky Company will be treated as a reorganization, provided it acquires not less than a majority of the Trustees Participation Shares. A reorganization is defined in the Revenue Act as a merger or consolidation, including the acquisition by one corporation of at least a majority of the voting stock of another corporation. For the purposes of our transaction, it is our opinion that the Trustees for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company will be treated as an Association or Corporation. This opinion is based upon two facts:

a. Because the Rules and Regulations Section of the Income Tax Unit have held that Trustees, under similar trust agreements, are to be treated as an Association or Corporation for income tax purposes; and

b. Because under Section 701 of the Revenue Act of 1918, the term, corporation, is defined to include "Associations."

134-14

Exhibit 134-14

2. Bancokentucky Company.

Assuming that we are right in the foregoing conclusions, then, no taxable gain will be realized as a result of the exchange of the shares, under Subsection 3 of Section 112, Revenue Act of 1928, which reads as follows:

> "No gain or loss shall be recognized if stock or securities in a corporation, a party to a reorganization, are in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, exchanged solely for stock or securities in such corporation, or, in another corporation, a party to the reorganization."

Of course, the foregoing Section would apply only in the event the Department should treat the Trustees, for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, as a corporation, for in that event, the Trustees would be a "party to the reorganization" within the meaning of the above Section, and the Bancokentucky Company would be the other party thereto. It is our best opinion, as above stated, that the Trustees would be so treated by the Department, and, therefore, that no taxable gain would result from these transfers.

In order to clinch our right, as far as possible, to claim for our stockholders the immunity provided for in the above Section, we believe it will be necessary to add a clause to the prospectus, providing that, the offer of the Bancokentucky Company stock on the plan outlined is conditioned upon the acceptance thereof by at least a majority in interest of the Trustees Participation Shareholders.

PETITION IN EQUITY

The plaintiff, John C. Wicklliffe, Jr., states that pursuant to the appointment and qualification as hereinafter set out, he is now Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company in place and stead of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company which was originally appointed Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company as hereinafter set out.

Plaintiff states that at all the times hereinafter mentioned The Louisville Trust Company was and now is a duly incorporated trust company organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky; that on the 17th day of November, 1930, The Louisville Trust Company was closed by action of its Board of Directors, and on said day, O. S. Denny, the Banking Commissioner of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, took charge of said closed trust company and of all its property and effects, pursuant to the provisions of law in such case made and provided; that thereupon, and while said closed trust company and all its property and effects still remained in the charge of said Banking Commissioner, said Banking Commissioner caused a petition, No. 305,178, in the name of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, by said O. S. Denny, Banking Commissioner as relator, against The Louisville Trust Company, to be filed in the Chancery Branch of the Jefferson Circuit Court, that being the Circuit Court of the county where said Louisville Trust Company was and is located, and that in and by said petition said relator applied to said Court for the appointment of a Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company according to the provisions of Section 165a-16, Kentucky Statutes; that notice of said application was duly served upon The Louisville Trust Company and thereupon said Court, upon proper hearing of the parties, determined that the appointment of a Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company in said proceeding was justified, and said Court did, on the 21st day of November, 1930, duly appoint the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company of Louisville, Kentucky, a trust company duly organized and existing under the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company and fix the amount of bond to be given by it; that on said day, said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company accepted said appointment and duly qualified as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company in said proceeding by executing the bond fixed as aforesaid and by its proper officer taking the oath prescribed by law, and that by virtue of aforesaid appointment and qualification said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company then became Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company and that its said receivership continued until this plaintiff was appointed in its place as hereinafter set out.

Plaintiff states that The Louisville Trust Company was insolvent at the time of the appointment of said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company as its Receiver and at the time of the entry of the judgment, hereinafter referred to, on the 3rd day of July, 1931, and that at the time of the entry of the aforesaid judgment, said Receiver had in its hands for administration and settlement the estate of said insolvent trust company, and as such Receiver had the right and was under the duty upon the order of the Court which appointed it, to bring such actions and take such proceedings as might be necessary and proper to enforce the liability imposed upon stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and all persons and estates subject to such stockholders' liability as fixed and provided by Section 547, Chapter 32, Kentucky Statutes, and such other statutes as impose the liabilities of stockholders in banks and trust companies organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky.

Plaintiff states that in aforesaid action No. 305,178, in which said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company was appointed Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, such further proceedings were had with the result that the Court did, by judgment entered on the 3rd day of July, 1931, duly decree and determine that The Louisville Trust Company was, on November 17, 1930, and continued to be at the time of the entry of said judgment, insolvent to such an extent that the amount of its indebtedness, over and above the total value of its assets, exceeded the sum of $1,750,000.00, the aggregate amount of the par value of the shares of capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company outstanding in the hands of its stockholders at the time of the closing of the company as aforesaid, and that it was necessary under and for the proper administration of the assets and settlement of the estate of The Louisville Trust Company in the hands of its Receiver, that an assessment of the maximum liability imposed by law upon the stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company, and all persons and estates subject to such stockholders' liability, be made by the Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, and that said Receiver bring such actions and take such proceedings as might be necessary and proper to enforce the maximum liability as aforesaid of all persons and estates subject thereto; that, in and by the aforesaid judgment, said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, in its capacity as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, was duly ordered and directed to assess the maximum liability imposed by statute, measured by the par value of their respective shares of stock of The Louisville Trust Company, against all then stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and against all its former stockholders still subject to such assessment, including all other persons and estates subject to assessment on account of such stockholders' liability, and, in and by the aforesaid judgment, said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, in its capacity as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, was further ordered and directed to bring such actions and to take such proceedings as might be necessary and proper to collect each and all of said assessments and to enforce the maximum liability of all stockholders, other persons and estates subject to said liability, under the statutes in such case made and provided. An attested copy of said judgment is filed herewith as part hereof marked Exhibit "A."

Plaintiff states that said judgment was duly entered and has not been set aside, or modified or appealed from, and is now in full force and effect, but that this plaintiff in his capacity as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, in the place and stead of said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, under appointment as hereinafter set out, is now charged with the duty of carrying out the directions and orders which aforesaid judgment imposed upon said former Receiver.

Plaintiff states that The Louisville Trust Company was insolvent at the time of the appointment and qualification of said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company as its Receiver as aforesaid, and that at the time of the entry of the aforesaid judgment, which directed the assessment and collection of the maximum liability imposed by law upon the stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and all persons and estates subject to such stockholders' liability, said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, in its capacity as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company, had in its hands for administration and settlement the estate of said insolvent Trust Company; that after the entry of the aforesaid judgment relating to the liability of stockholders, reorganization and reopening of The Louisville Trust Company was effected in manner as follows:

That at the time of the closing of The Louisville Trust Company as aforesaid, and at the time of its reorganization as hereinafter set out, The Louisville Trust Company was indebted to depositors in an aggregate sum in excess of $11,500,000.00; that depositors holding valid and subsisting claims against The Louisville Trust Company in an aggregate amount in excess of $9,000,000.00, out of aforesaid total deposit liability of The Louisville Trust Company, subscribed and agreed to and carried out a plan for the reorganization of The Louisville Trust Company under which said depositor-creditors holding claims in an aggregate sum in excess of $9,000,000.00 subscribed and applied fifteen per cent of their said claims in order to furnish the new capital and surplus necessary for the reorganization and reopening of The Louisville Trust Company, and said depositor-creditors further agreed that only twenty per cent of their respective claims should be subject to immediate withdrawal, and that five per cent of their said claims should be subject to withdrawal only after four months from the reopening of The Louisville Trust Company, five per cent of their said claims should be subject to withdrawal only after eight months from the reopening of The Louisville Trust Company, and five per cent of their said claims should be subject to withdrawal only after twelve months from the reopening of The Louisville Trust Company, and that twenty per cent of their respective claims should remain on deposit with The Louisville Trust Company, if and when reopened, and to bear interest at the rate of three per cent per annum, and to be demandable by said depositor-creditors only at the expiration of two years from the reopening of The Louisville Trust Company; and that said depositor-creditors holding claims in an aggregate sum in excess of $9,000,000.00 agreed and bound themselves that the remaining thirty per cent of their respective claims, aggregating more than $2,940,000.00 in amount, should be withdrawn from all participation in the assets of The Louisville Trust Company if and when said company should be reopened; and that by so withdrawing said portion, aggregating more than $2,940,000.00, of their claims against The Louisville Trust Company from participation in the assets of The Louisville Trust Company if and when reopened, said depositor-creditors who agreed to and united in said reorganization plan assigned and relinquished unto the other creditors of The Louisville Trust Company the increased distributive interest in the assets of The Louisville Trust Company that would have belonged to said relinquishing depositor-creditors if they had not so withdrawn said portion of their deposit claims; that said withdrawal of aforesaid portion of their respective claims by said depositor-creditors reduced the liabilities of The Louisville Trust Company payable out of its assets in an amount in excess of $2,940,000.00, and such reduction in the liabilities to be paid by The Louisville Trust Company if and when reopened made possible the reorganization plan that was carried out; that in consideration for such withdrawal of said portion of their claims, said depositor-creditors reserved and secured the right to seek and obtain payment of such withdrawn portion of their claims, aggregating more than $2,940,000.00, out of, a so-called Depositors' Refunding Account and certain assets and choses in action to be included and embraced therein.

That in and by aforesaid reorganization plan it was arranged and provided that all amounts that should be collected by the Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company from present or former stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and from persons and estates subject to liability, on account of the maximum liability imposed by statute upon the stockholders of said company and persons liable as stockholders, should be paid into said Depositors' Refunding Account for the use and benefit of the aforesaid relinquishing depositor-creditors.

That the aforesaid reorganization plan was duly approved by the Court in action No. 305,178, styled Commonwealth of Kentucky, On relation of C. S. Wilson, Banking Commissioner, vs. The Louisville Trust Company, and the said receivership of The Louisville Trust Company was partially terminated on the 20th day of August, 1931, insofar as was necessary to enable the Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company to restore to The Louisville Trust Company all its assets then in the hands of its Receiver, but that said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company was continued as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company for the purpose of enforcing the collection of the maximum statutory liability as aforesaid.

That on the 10th day of September, 1931, by orders duly entered in aforesaid action No. 205,178, said Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company was permitted to resign its office as Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company insofar as such receivership was still in effect for the purpose of enforcing the collection of the maximum statutory liability of stockholders as hereinbefore set out, and this plaintiff was then appointed Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company in the place and stead of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, and under such order of appointment the power and duty was imposed upon this plaintiff to take such steps and proceedings as should be necessary to enforce the collection of the maximum statutory liability of stockholders and persons subject to such stockholders' liability as set out in aforesaid judgment, copy of which is filed herewith as part hereof marked Exhibit "A"; that pursuant to said appointment this plaintiff forthwith on said date qualified as such Receiver by executing bond and taking the oath as prescribed by law, and that this plaintiff continuously since has been and now is Receiver of The Louisville Trust Company for the purposes as aforesaid and this suit is now filed by plaintiff pursuant to the authority and direction imposed upon him as aforesaid.

Plaintiff states that the defendants herein were each and all stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and beneficial owners of shares of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company within the period of one day less than two years next before the commencement of this action against them and each of them and that the defendants herein named were holders and owners of the shares of capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company within the period aforesaid in the respective amounts and as of the respective dates as hereinafter set out, and that such respective ownership of shares of capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company was represented and shown by Trustees' Participation Certificate-shares issued, outstanding, held and owned in the manner as hereinafter set out.

Plaintiff states that heretofore and prior to the 1st day of September, 1929, the owners of 17,225 shares of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company of the par value of $100.00 each, and the owners of 29,820 shares of the capital stock of The National Bank of Kentucky of the par value of $100.00 each, assigned and transferred their respective shares of said trust company stock and of said bank stock unto certain trustees provided for in an agreement in writing styled "Trust Agreement with reference to stock in The National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville and The Louisville Trust Company," dated April 22, 1927, to be held by said trustees and their successors in trust as one indivisible trust estate in the manner and for the purposes as set out in said trust agreement; that said trust agreement is in words and figures as follows:

I.

APPORTIONMENT OF INTERESTS BETWEEN THE TWO SETS OF STOCKHOLDERS.

At this time the Bank has a capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than $4,800,000, which will be represented by 40,000 shares of its stock when a contemplated stock dividend of 60% has been declared; and The Trust Company has a capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than $1,700,000, represented by 10,000 shares of its stock.

The combined net assets of the two institutions aggregate more than $6,500,000.

In apportioning between the Bank Stockholders and the Trust Company Stockholders the participation shares hereinafter provided for, which represent interests in the Trust Estate, presently consisting of the stocks of said two institutions deposited hereunder, such apportionment shall be made upon the following basis:

The total assets and business of the Bank shall be treated as worth 80% of the combined assets of the Bank and of the Trust Company, and the total assets and business of the Trust Company shall be treated as worth 20% of the combined assets and business of the Bank and of the Trust Company.

The rights of such stockholders in said respective institutions as become a party to this agreement shall be determined on said basis, namely, each shareholder shall receive one participation certificate for each share of stock.

II.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

There is hereby created an Advisory Committee, with such powers as are herein conferred, and which shall at all times be composed of the individuals who are the then directors of The Louisville Trust Company and of The National Bank of Kentucky.

Said Committee shall have the right by a resolution adopted by them, respectively, to add to their number not more than three of the higher executive officers of each institution who are not already members of the Committee, and such action upon the part of the Advisory Committee if taken, shall be evidenced by a writing filed with the Trustees.

III.

TERMS OF TRUST.

The Trustees shall hold all assets which shall come into their hands hereunder as one indivisible Trust Estate, the proportionate interest of each shareholder therein being represented by the certificates issued by such Trustees, and the Trustees agree to hold such estate upon the following trust, terms and conditions:

(1) They shall reassign to each person who shall be at the time of signing this agreement a member of the board of directors of The National Bank of Kentucky, or of The Louisville Trust Company, who desires and is eligible a sufficient number of shares of stock in such Bank and Trust Company to qualify him as a director in both institutions.

(2) The Trustees may, out of the shares owned by them, sell and assign absolutely to any holder of a Trustees' Participation Certificate desiring to be elected a director of either of said institutions, the number of shares of stock necessary to legally qualify him for such office. These provisions shall apply to any other stock acquired by the Trustees.

(3) Upon request made in writing not more than 30 nor less than 15 days before any annual election of directors, by the holders of sufficient in amount of Trustees' Participation Certificates to insure his election they shall sell and transfer to a designated person the number of shares of stock necessary to legally qualify him for such office, upon his surrender of sufficient Trustees' Participation Certificates therefor.

(4) In addition to the Trust Estate herein presently provided for, the Trustees shall have power to purchase all or part of the stock of any other corporation of similar character and engaged in a like or similar business, but only with the written consent of the Advisory Committee, as to terms, price and conditions of purchase, and any stock so purchased by the Trustees shall become and be a part of the Trust Estate above referred to, and the Trustees may issue Trustees' Participation Certificates in sufficient amount to pay for the stock so purchased by them. The Trustees may issue such new certificates direct to the holders of the stock so purchased by the Trustees in exchange or payment therefor, in whole or in part, or may sell such Trustees' Participation Certificates to the then holders of such Trustees' Participation Certificates in proportion to their then holding thereof, which right of purchase by such holders shall be assignable. If all the certificates so offered to existing certificate holders be not taken and paid for by them or their assigns within the time fixed by the Trustees in their offering of the same, it shall be the duty of the Trustees to offer for sale such certificates not taken or paid for to any other person or persons.

(5) No certificate shall be issued by the Trustees calling for a fraction of a share, but scrip may be issued for fractions of shares to those entitled thereto, and when scrip representing as much as one full share shall be presented to the Trustees, they shall issue a certificate in lieu of such scrip for as many full shares as said scrip shall call for in the aggregate. No dividends shall be paid on scrip, but when such scrip shall have been converted into Trustees' Participation Certificates, the rights represented thereby shall be entitled to receive their full share of dividends thereafter declared and theretofore declared during a period not to exceed five years before such conversion.

(6) The Trustees, with the written consent of the Advisory Committee, may sell any stock acquired under Subsection (4) of Article III and the proceeds of sale when collected shall be disposed of by the Trustees with the written consent of the Advisory Committee by:

(a) Either dividing the same among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates, in which event the Trustees shall have the right to correspondingly reduce pro rata the number of shares represented by outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates; or

(b) Using the same in the purchase of stock of corporations engaging in like or similar business; or

(c) Adding to the capital or surplus or capital and surplus of any of the corporations the stock of which is owned by the Trustees.

(7) The Trustees, with the written consent of the Advisory Committee:

(a) Shall have the right to consent to and take any legal action appropriate for an increase or decrease in the capital stock of any corporation, the stock of which may become a part of the Trust Estate;

(b) In case of an increase in the capital stock of any such corporation, the proper proportionate part thereof to which the Trustees may be entitled, may be purchased by them and same shall be added to and become a part of the indivisible Trust Estate held by the Trustees under the same terms and conditions as are herein provided for the stock acquired hereunder;

(c) The Trustees shall thereupon issue additional Trustees' Participation Certificates equal to the par value of such increase of capital stock so purchased by them and shall offer the same pro rata to the then holders of outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates at a price which will reimburse the Trustees for the purchase price so paid by them.

If any holder of Trustees' Participation Certificates declines or fails within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Trustees, to take his pro rata of such increased issue of certificates, and which right of purchase by such holder shall be assignable, the Trustees shall have the right to sell such certificates to any purchaser for a price not less than that at which the Trustees acquired such stock.

(d) In case either the Bank or Trust Company, or any other institution in which the Trustees shall own stock, shall reduce its outstanding capital stock in the manner provided by law so as to effect a distribution of corporate assets among stockholders, the Trustees shall dispose of said fund as a distribution pro rata among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates or, under the written direction of the Advisory Committee, for the benefit of the trust estate, in any other lawful manner.

(8) The Trustees shall have the right, and it shall be their duty subject only to the limitations herein prescribed, to exercise in the interest of the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates, all of the powers of management and control over any corporation in which they shall hold stock, incident to the ownership of stock held by them hereunder, and their power shall include all rights as stockholders in connection with any corporate purposes or functions whatever and shall authorise them to exercise all voting rights and rights of ownership over such stock in the election of directors or in the discharge of any other corporate functions.

Provided, however, that the owner of record on the books of the Trustees of any Trustees' Participation Certificate, shall have the right by written directions to the Trustees given at least 5 days before the vote is to be cast, to instruct them how they shall vote in the corporate meetings such proportionate number of shares therein owned by the Trustees as the number of shares represented by the Trustees' Participation Certificate owned by such person giving such directions may bear to the total number of shares represented by outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates and the Trustees shall vote such proportion of stock in accordance with such instruction.

(9) Dividends received by the Trustees on any stock held by them shall be distributed among the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates; provided, however, that upon the written direction of the Advisory Committee, the Trustees may use any extra dividends, or part thereof, received by the Trustees, for the benefit of the trust estate, in any lawful manner.

(10) The Trustees shall deposit in the Bank or the Trust Company all funds which they receive with directions to such Bank or Trust Company as to the distribution thereof as hereinabove authorized and the making of such deposits and the giving of such directions shall relieve the Trustees of all further responsibility for such dividends. The Trustees shall out of the funds coming into their hands pay the expenses of the organization and conduct of the Trust.

(11) The enumeration of powers herein shall not be held to be exclusive of other powers herein referred to or incidental to the powers herein mentioned.

IV.

(6) The right to vote at any meeting of Participation Certificate Holders shall be restricted to holders of such certificates of record at least 15 days before the annual meeting, and in case of a special meeting 15 days before the notice of such meeting is required to be mailed. Holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates may vote either in person or by proxy, and if by proxy by a writing attested by one person.

This power to fill vacancies shall not only apply to the original Trustees herein named, but to any successor, and shall be exercised as and when any vacancy may hereafter occur in the position of any Trustee herein designated as the representative Trustee of the stockholders of either the Bank or the Trust Company.

(4) The term "Trustee" whenever used in this agreement shall include successors duly appointed or elected and all estate hereby vested in and all the rights herein given to and the powers herein conferred upon any Trustee shall be vested in, given to and exercised by his successor duly appointed or elected, and such successor shall be substituted in all respects in place of the former Trustee without the necessity of any formal assignment or transfer to him.

(3) They shall adopt a seal and prescribe such regulations or by-laws as they may deem necessary, including regulations for the issuance of duplicate Trustees' Participation Certificates in case of loss or destruction of original certificates, and regulations governing the transfer of such certificates, and no Trustees' Participation Certificate shall be transferred except upon the surrender thereof duly endorsed, in person or by attorney, and all such transfers shall be made only upon the books of the Trustees.

(4) The seal of the Trustees shall be affixed to the Trustees' Participation Certificates and they shall be signed by the Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the Trustees and by their Secretary or Assistant Secretary.

(5) The Louisville Trust Company is hereby designated as Transfer Agent for the transfer of Trustees' Participation Certificates, and The National Bank of Kentucky shall be the Registrar thereof, and no certificate issued by the Trustees shall be valid unless countersigned by the Transfer Agent and Registrar.

VII.

Each assignment is made upon the terms, trusts and conditions herein stated.

Each assignment shall be made effectual by proper transfers upon the books of the Bank and the Trust Company, respectively, as provided by law and by the by-laws, rules or regulations of said institutions, respectively, governing such transfer.

The certificate or certificates issued by the Bank or by the Trust Company to the Trustees for the shares transferred to such Trustees hereunder, may be issued to them, as 'The Trustees Under Stockholders' Agreement of April 22, 1927' without designating them by name.

It shall not be necessary to issue a new certificate to the Trustees in the event of a change in the personnel of the Trustees, but if desired by the Bank or by the Trust Company the names of the Trustees or any changes therein may be indicated by a memorandum endorsed upon each certificate issued to the Trustees.

The Trustees and their Transfer Agent for the certificates issued by them shall certify to the Bank and Trust Company a copy of the Trustees' register of Trustees' Participation Certificate-Holders and their addresses and from time to time and as often as any change may be made in the holders of such certificate shall certify such change.

VIII.

TRUSTEES' PARTICIPATION CERTIFICATES.

(1) The shares for which such Trustees' Participation Certificates shall be issued shall be of the par value of $100.00 each, provided that if hereafter the Trustees shall consider it wise to change the par value of such shares, they shall have the power to do so, and to that end may call in all outstanding certificates and issue others in lieu thereof prescribing the changed par value of shares. After such call has been issued no dividends shall be paid on shares represented by such outstanding old certificates until they have been surrendered for exchange for new certificates in the revised form.

(2) The Trustees' Participation Certificates, subject to the aforesaid power of modification as to the par value of shares, shall be in form as follows:

IX.

RESPONSIBILITY OF TRUSTEES.

(1) The trustees shall not be responsible for any acts done by them as Trustees in good faith and in the exercise of an honest judgment. No Trustee shall be liable for the act or omission of another Trustee.

(2) They shall not be liable, except as Trustees to the extent of the Trust funds held by them, by reason of the ownership of stock in any corporation. They shall be indemnified against any such liability by each holder of Trustees' Participation Certificates to the extent hereinafter set forth.

(3) Each owner of a Trustees' Participation Certificate issued hereunder shall be subject to the same liability thereon as he would have been subject to in case he had been the owner of record of such proportionate part of the shares held by the Trustees in any corporation as the number of shares called for by his Trustee's Participation Certificate bears to the whole number of shares covered by all outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates; and to such extent he shall indemnify and hold harmless the Trustees owning such stock from any loss or liability on account of being the holders or owners thereof. The measure of liability assumed hereunder shall be the same as that provided by law with reference to the holders of stock in any particular corporation in which the Trustees may hold stock as is provided by law with reference to the holders of such stock, and no more.

TERMINATION OR MODIFICATION OF AGREEMENT.

1. The trust herein created shall continue until the death of the last survivor of all those persons who are now stockholders of either of said institutions who presently enter into this agreement, and for the further period of twenty-one years after the death of such last survivor, unless sooner terminated, as it may be, by a vote of the owners of not less than two-thirds in amount of the Trustees' Participation Certificates, such vote to be taken at a special meeting called for that purpose, of which notice shall be given in writing thirty days in advance of such meeting as above provided.

2. By a vote of two-thirds had at a meeting called as above, this agreement may be modified, such modification being evidenced by the signatures of the owners of Trustees' Participation Certificates assenting thereto, in person or by proxy. Such written modification shall be lodged with the Trustees and a copy thereof lodged with The National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company.

XI.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF AGREEMENT.

This agreement shall become effective only when it shall have been executed by the owners of not less than one-half in amount of the stock in The Louisville Trust Company and one-half in amount of the stock in The National Bank of Kentucky by signing this agreement or assigning their stock to the Trustees. It shall, however, remain open for one hundred and twenty days from the date hereof for additional stockholders to make themselves parties hereto by signing it or a counterpart hereof and which additional period may be further extended by a majority vote of the persons herein named as Trustees.

WITNESS the hands of the parties the day and year first above written.

Plaintiff states that the trustees named and provided for in aforesaid trust agreement accepted said trust and took unto themselves as such trustees proper assignments of said 17,225 shares of capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company and said 20,220 shares of capital stock of The National Bank of Kentucky, and caused all of aforesaid shares of capital stock to be issued unto themselves in their capacity as trustees under said trust agreement upon the books and records of the trust company and bank respectively, and that on September 1, 1929, and thereafter continuously until the date of the dissolution of the trust existing under aforesaid trust agreement, as hereinafter set out said 17,225 shares of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company and said 20,220 shares of the capital stock of said National Bank of Kentucky stood upon the books of said trust company and said bank respectively in the name of the trustees under aforesaid trust agreement and that during all of said time said trustees were the holders of the legal title, as shown by the stock books and records of both said trust company and said bank, of the aforesaid shares of capital stock of said trust company and bank respectively.

Plaintiff states that, as provided for in aforesaid trust agreement, said trustees, prior to the 1st day of September, 1929, caused to be issued and delivered unto the respective owners of the shares of trust company stock and the shares of bank stock as transferred Trustees' Participation Certificates, in the form as set out in said trust agreement, evidencing the ownership of the number of shares of the par value of $100.00 each of the indivisible trust estate created as aforesaid, in each of said certificate holders equal to the number of shares of stock so transferred by them respectively; that after such issue by said trustees of Trustees' Participation Certificates of the par value of $100.00 each, but before the 1st day of September, 1929, said trustees reduced the par value of the shares of the indivisible trust estate evidenced by said Trustees' Participation Certificates and issued in lieu of all outstanding certificates evidenced by shares of the par value of $100.00 each, new Trustees' Participation Certificates for shares of said indivisible trust estate of the par value of $10.00 each.

Plaintiff states that on September 1, 1929, and continuously thereafter until said indivisible trust estate was dissolved as hereinafter set out, the total number of Trustees' Participation Certificates outstanding had a par value of $2,700,500.00, being 270,050 shares of the par value of $10.00 each, and that the owners of said Trustees' Participation Certificates were the beneficial owners of said 17225 shares of said trust company stock and said 20,220 shares of said bank stock in the proportions which the respective shares evidenced by their Trustees' Participation Certificates bore to the total number of shares evidenced by the Trustees' Participation Certificates outstanding.

Plaintiff states that, in and by Clause IX of aforesaid trust agreement, it was expressly provided that each owner of a Trustees' Participation Certificate issued under and pursuant to said trust agreement, should be subject to the same liability thereon as such owner would have been subject to in case he had been the owner of record of such proportionate part of the shares of stock held by said trustees in any corporation as the number of shares called for by such owner's Trustees' Participation Certificate bears to the whole number of shares covered by all outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates.

Plaintiff states that, in and by Clause X of aforesaid trust agreement, it was provided and agreed that the trust therein and thereby created should be revocable and terminable at any time by a vote of the owners of not less than two-thirds in amount of the Trustees' Participation Certificates outstanding under said trust agreement, such vote to be taken at a special meeting called for that purpose, of which notice should be given in writing thirty days in advance of such meeting; that pursuant to aforesaid provision, a special meeting of the holders and owners of said Trustees' Participation Certificates was duly called to be held in the directors' room of the old Louisville Trust Company Building, 5th and Market Streets, City of Louisville, on December 28, 1929, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of considering and voting upon the question of dissolving and terminating said trust agreement and restoring to the holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates their shares of stock in The Louisville Trust Company and their shares of stock in The National Bank of Kentucky; that due notice of said special meeting and of the purpose for which the same was called was given in writing to all holders and owners of outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates thirty days in advance of said meeting as in said trust agreement provided; that pursuant to the written notice given as aforesaid, a special meeting of the holders and owners of said Trustees' Participation Certificates was held at the time and place as fixed in said notice, and that at said meeting, by the affirmative vote of the owners of more than two-thirds in amount of said Trustees' Participation Certificates outstanding, said trust agreement was forthwith terminated and said 17,235 shares of the capital stock of the Louisville Trust Company, and said 30,230 shares of the capital stock of The National Bank of Kentucky then became distributable unto the holders and owners of outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates in proportion to their respective interests in said indivisible trust estate as represented by their shares therein.

Plaintiff states that the various defendants herein were respectively, at the time hereinafter shown, the owners of Trustees' Participation Certificates for the number of shares of the par value of $10.00 each as hereinafter set out, and that by virtue of such ownership of Trustees' Participation Certificates said certificate owners respectively were the beneficial owners of shares of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company in the proportions of 3.0207695 per cent of a share of stock of The Louisville Trust Company of the par value of $100.00 each for every share represented by said Trustees' Participation Certificates of the par value of $10.00 each.

Plaintiff states that under and by the express terms of aforesaid trust agreement, and by reason of the voluntary creation and the nature of the estate created by said trust agreement and its revocability as therein provided, each and all of said Trustees' Participation Certificate owners were and remained and continued to be subject to liability as stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company to the same extent as if they had respectively been and remained stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company upon its own proper records for the number of shares computed in proportion to 3.0207695 per cent of a share of trust company stock for each Trustees' Participation Certificate-share of the par value of $10.00 each.

Plaintiff states that all the defendants hereinafter named in GROUP I and GROUP II were respectively, within the period of one day less than two years immediately preceding the date of the filing of this petition, the owners of said Trustees' Participation Certificates for the number of shares of the par value of $10.00 each, as shown in the first column opposite the name of each of said listed defendants.

Thurman, is the duly appointed, qualified and acting executrix of the will of said I. H. Thurman, deceased, and was such executrix at the time of the entry of the aforesaid judgment on July 3, 1931, and that this plaintiff has assessed against said executrix liability in the sum of $1,208.31 for and because of the ownership by said I. H. Thurman, deceased, of Trustees' Participation Certificates as aforesaid

Plaintiff states that at all times mentioned in this petition and at this time the defendants above named, to-wit:

Business Enterprise Company, DeMolay Commandery No. 12, Frankfort Cemetery Company, Franklin Printing Company, Kentucky State Life Insurance Company, Louisville Cement Company, Charles P. Moorman Home for Women, Semonin-Goodman, Inter-Southern Life Insurance Company, Woodson Kratch Monument Company, Wright & Taylor, Children's Free Hospital, Callahan & Sons, Cook Benevolent Institution, Blythe & Company and E. W. Hays & Company were and now are each and all corporations organised by and under the laws of the State of Kentucky and by their several and respective charters authorized to contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued; that the defendant, Roman Catholic Bishop, was and now is a corporation sole organised by and under the laws of the State of Kentucky and by its charter authorized to contract and be contracted with and sue and be sued as a corporate entity; that the defendant, Executive Board of General Association of Baptists in Kentucky was and is a corporation organised by and under the laws of the State of Kentucky and by its charter authorized to contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued.

Plaintiff further states that in listing in GROUP I and in GROUP II the various partnerships hereinafter set out, said list is to be read and construed as if the same included the names of the individual members composing said respective firms as the owners of the Trustees' Participation Certificates respectively listed opposite the names of said firms and as subject to the assessment liability as shown in the last column opposite each of said firm names; that the defendants, Isaac Hilliard, Edw. H. Hilliard, A. J. Howard, Marion H. Cardwell, Andrew P. Geis, Robert J. Theobald and Harold Walton constituted and now constitute and compose a partnership doing business under the name of J. J. B. Hilliard & Son; that the defendants, S. C. Lyons, B. C. Lyons, W. L. Lyons, W. G. Lyons and J. M. Warden constituted and now constitute and compose a partnership doing business under the name of W. Dunlap & Company; that the defendants, Milton S. Trost (a resident of Kentucky), and Julian S. Stein, C. Prevost Boyce, Henry C. Evans and W. T. Childs and others (all of whom are non-residents of the State of Kentucky), constituted and now constitute a partnership transacting business under the firm name of Stein Brothers & Boyce; that the defendant, A. E. Latta, is the sole partner of and the owner composing the firm or business operated under the name of Wakefield & Company; that the defendants, D. X. Murphy and J. C. Murphy constituted and now constitute a partnership doing business under the firm name of D. X. Murphy & Brother.

Plaintiff states that out of a total of Trustees' Participation Certificates for an aggregate number of 570,550 shares of the par value of $10.00 each outstanding, Trustees' Participation Certificates for an aggregate number of 540,484 shares were assigned and transferred unto the BancoKentucky Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, in exchange for shares of the capital stock of said BancoKentucky Company at the rate of two shares of such corporate stock for each share represented by said Trustees' Participation Certificates, and that a large number of the defendants exchanged their Trustees' Participation Certificates for shares of the capital stock of The BancoKentucky Company, and that the defendants listed hereinabove in GROUP I respectively exchanged their Trustees' Participation Certificates, representing the number of shares of the par value of $10.00 each shown in said list, for shares of stock of The BancoKentucky Company

Plaintiff states that on the first day of September, 1929, The Louisville Trust Company was indebted to various and sundry creditors in an aggregate sum in excess of $6,000,000.00, and that this liability that existed at said time to such creditors continued until the closing of The Louisville Trust Company as hereinbefore set out, and that no part thereof was paid, discharged or released until after the reorganization and reopening of The Louisville Trust Company as hereinbefore set out, and that more than $1,750,000.00 of aforesaid indebtedness existing on September 1, 1929, still remains unpaid and that the creditors of The Louisville Trust Company to whom such liability is owing are legally and equitably entitled to all proceeds recoverable in this action.

Plaintiff states that said BancoKentucky Company was organized for the purpose of acquiring and it did acquire more than one-half of the entire capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company, and that such acquisition of more than one-half of the capital stock of The Louisville Trust Company by The BancoKentucky Company was in direct violation of the statutes of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and that those of the defendants herein named who exchanged Trustees' Participation Certificate-shares for shares of the capital stock of The BancoKentucky Company, as hereinbefore set out, were parties to and co-operated and participated in such illegal acquisition by said BancoKentucky Company of said stock, and that said defendants still remain subject and now are subject to the maximum liability as stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company, to the same extent, measured by their beneficial ownership of Louisville Trust Company stock as hereinbefore set out, as if they had not respectively assigned their Trustees' Participation Certificates to The BancoKentucky Company in exchange for shares of its capital stock but had continued to retain ownership of their respective Trustees' Participation Certificates.

Plaintiff states that by virtue of the judgment and orders hereinbefore set out directing the assessment and collection of the stockholders' liability as aforesaid, plaintiff has assessed against the defendants herein respectively the sums as shown in the last column opposite their names; that each of said defendants is indebted unto this plaintiff in the amount so shown in the last column opposite such defendants names; and that this plaintiff is entitled to recover of the defendants respectively the amounts so shown, and that all of said sums are due and are wholly unpaid.

WHEREFORE plaintiff prays for a judgment against each of the defendants herein in the amounts as set opposite their respective names in the last column, together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent (6%) per annum from date until paid, and plaintiff prays for all other legal and equitable relief that may be necessary or proper

Dear Mr. Vaughan:

I wish to thank you for your letter of the 16th inst., advising that another stockholders' meeting was held on October 15 at which time it was voted to make the liquidation of the National Bank of Kentucky effective November 15. (We assume close of business that date.)

In an effort to avoid an interruption in the membership in the institution, as requested by you, we have worked out the procedure suggested in the attached letter to Mr. Chas. F. Jones, Cashier of the bank. If this procedure is satisfactory the form furnished Mr. Jones should be executed and returned to me as soon as possible in order that it may be forwarded to the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. It should be accompanied by a copy of the articles of incprporation of the new institution which I assume sets out the powers which it will exercise.

Awaiting your further favors, I am

Attention: Mr. Martin, Federal Reserve Agent.

Dear Mr. Martin:

I am writing you as attorney for the National Bank of Kentucky, which has been authorized to dissolve in accordance with Sections 5220 and 5221, United States Revised Statutes, and is about to be converted into a State Bank, under the laws of Kentucky, to be known as The Bank of Kentucky. The Comptroller of the Currency has approved the resolution of the stockholders, and the articles of incorporation of the new bank will be filed tomorrow.

Under the terms of the resolution of the stockholders, the dissolution becomes effective October 15th, 1929. The directors have authorized application for cancellation of shares in the Federal Reserve Bank, and the new State Bank will desire to become a member of the System and subscribe for the identical number of shares.

Will you kindly send me the necessary forms for accomplishment this and advise how the liabilities of the National Bank of Kentucky can be properly taken care of in the meantime? You will recall that we recently went through this same process with the old Louisville National Bank & Trust Company, at the time of its merger with The Louisville Trust Company.

October 12, 1929.

Mr. Robert F. Vaughan,
Marion E. Taylor Bldg.,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mr. Vaughan:

This morning I received your letter of October 10, stating that the National Bank of Kentucky is about to go into voluntary liquidation, and asking for the necessary forms for use in applying for surrender of the stock which it holds in this institution. Your letter of October 11, addressed to Mr. Martin, has also been referred to me in his absence.

From your letter to Mr. Martin, it is noted that the dissolution of the National Bank of Kentucky becomes effective October 15, 1929, and that it will be succeeded by a new State bank which desires to become a member of the Federal Reserve System.

In accordance with Section 5 of the Federal Reserve Act and Regulation 1, issued by the Federal Reserve Board, herewith I send you three copies of Form 86 for use by the Liquidating Agent or Committee of the National Bank of Kentucky in applying for surrender of the stock which it holds in the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. The application should be executed in triplicate, two copies being returned to me and one retained for its files. The stock certificate should also be returned in order that it may be canceled.

I also enclose a copy of Form 83a for use by the new State bank in making application for membership in the Federal Reserve System. After it has been executed, it should be returned to me together with a copy of the charter and articles of incorporation, with amendments, if any. Regulation H, issued by the Federal Reserve Board, covers the membership of State banks and trust companies.

It is our practice to examine all State banks applying for membership in the Federal Reserve System and, if agreeable, we will arrange to visit the new institution as soon as possible.

You ask how the liabilities of the National Bank of Kentucky can be properly taken care of between the date the national bank goes into voluntary liquidation and the date the new State bank becomes a member of the System. The maturing paper of the national bank can be taken care of by the State bank opening a nonmember clearing account with our Louisville Branch and authorizing it to charge the paper, as it matures, against said account.

Exhibit 158-2

Upon receipt of the enclosed applications, we shall be pleased to give them prompt attention.

Yours very truly,

C. M. Stewart (Signed)
Asst. Federal Reserve Agent.

Attention - Mr. Quinn

Dear Mr. Quinn:

The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis was unable to examine the Bank in time for an effective dissolution as of October 15th. It was therefore impractical to make the transfer now to the new State Bank, since it was desired that the latter become a Member of the Federal Reserve System, with the privileges of re-discount, etc.

When I discovered this condition, I called your office and in your absence talked to Mr. Awalt, who recommended that the former Resolution be rescinded and a new one adopted, fixing the effective date of liquidation as of November 15th, 1929.

Accordingly, a meeting was held this afternoon and this action was taken. I enclose you certified copy of the Resolution which I will thank you to substitute for the one previously sent.

With kind regards, I am,

Yours sincerely,

Attention - Mr. C. M. Stewart

Dear Mr. Stewart:

At the time the resolution authorizing liquidation was adopted by the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky, it was not contemplated that the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis would require an examination of the successor state bank before admitting it to membership. We were fully cognizant of the general rule in this regard as applied to an entirely new institution or to an applicant theretofore having no connection with the Federal Reserve System, but we thought that rule would be waived (as it was recently in connection with The Louisville Trust Company) by virtue of the fact that the National Bank of Kentucky had been connected with the System from the beginning and further, that the state bank succeeded to all the assets and liabilities of the national association.

After conferring with Mr. Moore (of the local Branch) and finding that the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis would insist upon the rule, I communicated with the Comptroller of the Currency, and we held another stockholders' meeting on yesterday, prior to the effective operation of the former resolution, and rescinded that resolution and adopted a new one, making liquidation effective as of November 15th. This was communicated to Mr. Moore who told me that he would wire Mr. Atterberry.

Will you kindly arrange to have the examination of the Bank made within this extended period, so that when the transfers are made to the state bank, it will be immediately admitted to membership without any interruption of the rediscounting privileges?

Thanking you, I am

Yours sincerely,

Robert F. Vaughan

For the attention of:
Mr. James B. Brown, President, or
Mr. Charles F. Jones, Cashier.

Dear Mr. Brown:

On October 7th, 1929, the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky adopted a resolution authorizing the voluntary dissolution of the bank under the Acts of Congress, the liquidation to become effective October 15th, 1929. At the same meeting, the directors of the bank were authorized to organize the State Bank under the laws of Kentucky, into which the National Bank would be converted at the effective date of liquidation. Subsequently this State Bank was organized by filing Articles of Incorporation, as provided by law.

On October 12th, it was definitely ascertained that the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis would insist upon an examination of the new bank before admitting it to membership in the System. Since this examination could not be completed prior to the effective date of liquidation, the stockholders on October 15th, 1929, rescinded the former resolution and adopted a new resolution, fixing November 15th, 1929, as the effective date, so as to enable the Reserve Bank to make this examination, and admit the new bank to membership before the old bank went into liquidation. This was done, of course, to preserve the rediscount privileges of the National Bank of Kentucky until the new bank was qualified as a member, and entitled to exercise these privileges.

Some days ago I received a communication from Mr. Stewart, Assistant Federal Reserve Agent at St. Louis, enclosing a copy of a letter he had written to Mr. Jones, in which we were advised that an examination would be required of the new bank before admitting it to membership, and suggesting that in the meantime the National Bank of Kentucky might file application for membership on behalf of the new bank.

I am writing this letter merely to remind you of the fact that under the terms of the last resolution adopted, the National Bank of Kentucky will go into voluntary liquidation at the close of business on November 15th, at which time our rediscount facilities and privileges still [illegible]thirteen. The time within which an examination could be made is very short. I would, therefore, suggest immediate action upon one of the following courses:

1. Apply immediately for membership on behalf of The Bank of Kentucky, in accordance with Mr. Stewart's letter, and request the earliest examination possible; or,

2. Rescind the resolution of the stockholders authorizing liquidation as of November 15th.

In the event the latter course is adopted, we should consider what to do with the newly organized The Bank of Kentucky. It is, of course, possible for the stockholders and directors of this Bank to formally dissolve the corporation under the laws of Kentucky, but of course, we do not desire to do this unless the whole scheme of denationalization is to be abandoned.

I would appreciate your advising me at your earliest convenience what course is to be followed so that I can prepare the necessary legal papers.

Yours sincerely,

Attention - Mr. Quinn

Dear Mr. Quinn:

I enclose you herewith a resolution unanimously adopted by the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky, at a meeting held November 8th, 1929. The effect of this resolution is to again extend the effective date of liquidation of the National Bank of Kentucky, and this time the extension is to the close of business on December 28th, 1929.

The unusual conditions prevailing during the last three weeks have required so much of the time of the officers of the bank, as to make it impossible to carry forward the program for the denationalization of the bank at this time.

At a conference between Mr. James B. Brown, Mr. Charles F. Jones, (Cashier) and myself, it was estimated that by the close of business on December 28th, 1929, conditions will have been stabilized to a point where we can resume the program for the National Bank of Kentucky, begun in October. We are therefore fixing this date (December 28th) as the effective date of liquidation.

I am sorry to trouble you again, but of course, I am sure that you fully appreciate the situation.

I am sending you under separate cover, a personal memorandum which might be of interest to you.

With kind regards and much appreciation for your past courtesies, I am

I am enclosing you herewith resolution of the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky, rescinding their former resolution of November 8th and readopting same with the provision however that the effective date shall be March 29,1930.

This extension was necessary and is for the best interests of the Bank and the stockholders as decided by them and the Directors at the meeting held on yesterday.

Under the former resolution the Bank of Kentucky became denationalized on December 28, 1929. I would appreciate it very much if you would kindly write a letter to the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, attention of the Federal Reserve Agent, Mr. Martin or Mr. Stewart, certifying that the effective date of the liquidation may be postponed to March 29, 1930.

Dear Mr. Penny:

Your call for a statement of the condition of The Bank of Kentucky at the close of business December 31st, 1929, has been referred to me as its attorney. I desire to explain the present situation of this bank, following receipt of which by you, I would appreciate your advice as to just the character of report which should be filed.

As you doubtless are aware, the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and the stock of The Louisville Trust Company is owned by a group of six trustees under a trust agreement dated April 22, 1917. Trustees Participation Certificates, evidencing proportionate interest in the indivisible trust estate held by them, are issued and outstanding; and these Certificates are listed on the Board under the title "National Bank of Kentucky."

Early last fall, the Directors of the two institutions, together with Mr. James B. Brown, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, and Mr. Richard Heun, President of The Louisville Trust Company, were favorably disposed towards denationalization of the National Bank of Kentucky and the organization of a state bank under the laws of Kentucky as its successor; and it was at one time considered (though never decided) that a merger of The Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, under state law, might be of material advantage in the prosecution of the business conducted by the two banks.

After considerable discussion in the Board, I was employed to take steps to denationalize the National Bank of Kentucky. I obtained the necessary consent of the stockholders (trustees as above) and filed with the Comptroller of the Currency a resolution authorizing the dissolution of the bank, effective October 15, 1929. Later a resolution was adopted extending this period to March 30, 1930.

Meanwhile we had filed articles of incorporation for The Bank of Kentucky (a Kentucky corporation) looking to the ultimate acquisition by this institution of all of the assets of the National Bank of Kentucky. But since the effective date of the liquidation has been postponed, The Bank of Kentucky (a Kentucky corporation) has remained nothing more than a name; it has no assets whatever and possesses nothing but the charter from the state authorizing it to do business when and as the denationalization becomes effective.

As you know, conditions have materially changed all over the country since October, 1929, and it is not yet determined definitely whether or not the denationalization will become effective. We will know pretty definitely about this within the next thirty or sixty days. If the plan of denationalization is abandoned, we will simply surrender the state charter.

Under the above circumstances, I would appreciate your advice as to the form of report to be filed with your department. I have in mind a report giving the names of the Directors and embodying an affidavit setting up substantially the foregoing facts. May I have your advice in this matter, and oblige,

Dear Mr. Quinn:

The stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky have decided to remain in the national system and to withdraw their resolution of liquidation.

I enclose you herewith a certified copy of the minutes of the meeting in which this action was taken.

Will you kindly acknowledge receipt of the resolution; also, kindly wire, at our expense, the Federal Reserve Agent at St. Louis, advising that the resolution for denationalization has been rescinded and that therefore the bank will not go into voluntary liquidation, effective at the close of business on March 29th.

This request is made so that there will be no interruption to the facilities of the National Bank of Kentucky with the local branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

With kindest regards and many thanks for your former courtesies, I am

Dear Mr. Brown:

I am enclosing a memorandum of the services rendered during last Fall and Winter for the National Bank of Kentucky, in connection with the proposed surrender of its National Charter, and in connection with the organization of the State Bank, known as the Bank of Kentucky as successor to the National Bank.

I have attached to this memorandum a statement of some small expenses incurred by my office in connection with the work.

In view of the fact that the Bank changed its plans and therefore did not avail itself of the new State Charter, I feel that a fee of about $5,000.00 would be fair. However I am going to leave this matter entirely in your hands, with the assurance that whatever you do about it will be satisfactory with me.

I have delayed sending any statement in this matter because I did not care to burden you with my personal affairs while you were so busily engaged on the great program for the BancoKentucky Company.

With kindest regards and sincere appreciation for your consideration, I am

MEMORANDUM OF SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH THE DENATIONALIZATION OF THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY AND THE ORGANIZATION OF THE BANK OF KENTUCKY (A STATE BANK)

About October 1st I was employed to do the above work, through Mr. Charles F. Jones who called me over the telephone. I went to his office at the Bank and spent the remainder of the day in outlining the plan of procedure, copy of which was furnished to him. It was decided to rush the procedure as rapidly as possible, fixing October 15, 1929 as the effective date of liquidation. The following papers were then prepared by me:

Waiver of notice of stockholders meeting.

Resolution of the Trustees authorizing Henry Vogt as Chairman to sign this waiver on behalf of the Trustees.

Minutes of the stockholders meeting, containing the resolution authorizing voluntary liquidation, the appointment of a liquidating agent, etc., in conformity with the law and with the rules of the Comptroller's office.

Resolution of the Board of Directors of National Bank of Kentucky authorizing withdrawal of bonds securing circulation.

Application of National Bank of Kentucky to the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis for cancellation of shares in the Reserve Bank.

Application in behalf of the Bank of Kentucky (the State Bank) for membership in the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

Resolution of the Board of Directors of National Bank of Kentucky authorizing such application.

Articles of Incorporation of The Bank of Kentucky (the State Bank).

Consent of the Advisory Committee and resolution of the Trustees authorizing the Directors of National Bank of Kentucky to file these Articles of Incorporation on behalf of the new State Bank.

#2.

Contract between National Bank of Kentucky and the new State Bank, wherein the former agreed to transfer all its property to the latter, in consideration of which the latter assumed all liabilities of the former, except circulation.

Resolution of the Trustees consenting to the above, and minutes of Trustees meeting in this regard.

(Note: - Proper resolutions were filed with the Comptroller, who approved same, the Articles of Incorporation of the new Bank were filed with the Secretary of State and approved by the Banking Commissioner, and all other steps had been taken necessary to complete the denationalization by October 15, 1929 when we received word from the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis that it would require an examination of the new Bank before admitting it to membership. As the time was too short for this examination, I called up Mr. C. M. Stewart, Assistant Federal Reserve Agent of St. Louis and tried to get him to waive this requirement as he had done in the case of The Louisville Trust Company in its merger with the Louisville National Bank. I also went to see Mr. Moore of the local branch of the Federal Reserve Bank. Neither of these attempts was successful, and we therefore decided to postpone the effective date of dissolution from October 15 to November 15, 1929. This decision made necessary the following steps and the following papers):

Called the office of the Comptroller of the Currency and arranged for an extension, together with certification of same from his office to the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

New waiver of notice of stockholders, together with the resolution of the Trustees.

New set of minutes of stockholders meeting, adopting resolution rescinding the first resolution and extending the effective date to November 15, 1929.

Notified the Banking Commissioner of Kentucky of this change in plans.

Had all these papers signed and attested and forwarded to the Comptroller's office.

After the stock market collapse in November, it was decided to postpone the effective date of dissolution to November 28, 1929, so I went through the same procedure as above, in order to extend the time to said date.

The same procedure was again followed in December, the time being extended to March 29, 1930.

#3.

About the middle of March it was finally decided to abandon the plan of denationalization. I thereupon prepared new waivers of notice and new set of minutes for the stockholders meeting, including a resolution rescinding altogether the former resolution for the liquidation of Bank of Kentucky. I had these papers properly signed and attested and forwarded to the Comptroller's office, and in addition called him over the telephone and explained the situation then existing.

I then notified the Banking Commissioner at Frankfort of the foregoing so that he would not be calling for statements of condition, etc. of the State Bank.

September 18, 1929

"Upon call of the Chairman, the State Board of Education convened in the office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Frankfort, Kentucky, on Wednesday, September 18, 1929, 2:00 P.M., with the following members present:

Miss Ella Lewis, Secretary of State,
Hon. J. W. Cammack, Attorney General, and Supt. W. C. Bell, Chairman.

"Mr. James Cammack, Jr., staff member of the Department of Education, was also present.

"The meeting was held for the purpose of considering the sale of trustees' participation certificates in the National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville, and The Louisville Trust Company, Louisville, held by the State Board of Education in the name of the State School Fund of the Commonwealth.

"After quite a discussion in regard to the sale of the trustees' participation certificates referred to above, it was moved by General Cammack, seconded by Miss Lewis, that the following resolution be adopted by the Board:

"WHEREAS, the Commonwealth of Kentucky owns and there is held by the State Board of Education 776 trustees' participation shares of the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, which stock is set aside as a part of the permanent common school fund of Kentucky, the income from said stock being used for the benefit of the common schools of the Commonwealth, and

"WHEREAS, the directors of the above named Bank and Trust Company notified holders of trustees' participation shares on July 19, 1929, that a corporation known as the Banco-Kentucky Company had been organized under the laws of Delaware with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares having a par value of $10.00 per share, the shares to be sold at $25.00 each and that holders of trustees' participation shares could exchange these trustees' participation shares for shares in the new Company at the rate of two shares of stock in the Banco-Kentucky Company for one share of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, and

"WHEREAS, the State Board of Education, desiring to know more of this new enterprise, suggested by letter to Mr. Richard Bean, President of The Louisville Trust Company, on August 5 that some one appear before the State Board of Education to discuss this proposed plan of reorganization, and

"WHEREAS, Mr. Richard Bean appeared before the Board on August 13 and discussed the economic phases of the enterprise, and

"WHEREAS, there being doubt as to the legal right of the State Board of Education to make a sale of said shares under Section 185 of the Constitution and it appearing to the Board that the Legislature alone should authorize a sale of said shares and authorize the Sinking Fund Commission to invest the proceeds arising from the sale of said shares in such stock, bond or securities as it may recommend, a request was made of said Bank and Trust Company for their interpretation of the authority of the Board of Education to sell said shares and the Sinking Fund Commission to reinvest the proceeds of the sale of the same, and

"WHEREAS, Mr. T. K. Helm, Attorney for said Bank and Trust Company, wrote the Attorney General on August 29 to the effect that he thought the transfer could be made without an act of the Legislature and later appeared before the Board on September 11 and confirmed his former opinion with the suggestion that it would be advisable to proceed under the declaratory judgment act should the State Board of Education decide to sell said shares and the Sinking Fund Commission decide to invest the proceeds of the sale in the Banco-Kentucky Company, in view of the fact that an act of the Legislature, which is Chapter 56, page 241, Acts of 1920, was passed to authorize the change in 1919, made necessary by the consolidation of the Bank of Kentucky with certain other banks in Louisville, Kentucky, so far as the Commonwealth's stock was concerned, and

"WHEREAS, Mr. A. J. Carroll, Mr. T. K. Helm and Mr. Richard Bean appeared before a joint meeting of the State Board of Education and the Sinking Fund Commission on September 17, 1929, and reiterated what had formerly been said as to the legal and economic phases of the new enterprise so far as the Commonwealth is concerned, and

"WHEREAS, at all times the State Board of Education has felt, and has so stated, that an extension of time beyond September 19, 1929, the last day for making the exchanges of the stock referred to above, should be granted to the Commonwealth in accordance with Section 5, Subsection (a), of the notice published by The Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky to their stockholders dated July 19, 1929, in order that the Legislature might, in accordance with Section 185 of the Constitution, exercise discretion as to whether or not this sale and reinvestment should be made; the Board of Education feeling at all times that the Legislature, being the sole body possessing the authority to authorize a sale of the Commonwealth's stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, should be given an opportunity at the 1930 session to determine whether it would or would not authorize the sale and reinvestment as set out above, and

"WHEREAS, the Board of Education has been advised that the Directors of the institutions set out above contemplate making no extension of time in behalf of the Commonwealth,

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the National Bank of Kentucky, The Louisville Trust Company and the Banco-Kentucky Company be notified by a night letter of this date that the State Board of Education is firm in its belief that it has no legal authority to sell trustees' participation shares in said Bank and Trust Company, which shares belong to the Commonwealth and are a part of the permanent school fund.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the officials of the above named institutions are earnestly urged to extend to the Commonwealth sufficient time for the 1930 Session of the Legislature to exercise its discretion under Section 185 of the Constitution as to the sale and reinvestment of the stock on the same terms as were granted to holders of trustees' participation shares on July 19, 1929.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the 1930 State Senate and to the Speaker of the 1930 House of Representatives with the request that it be read to each body and with the further request that a legislative committee be appointed to investigate the present condition of the stock held by the Commonwealth in the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company to determine whether or not the stock should remain invested as at present or whether it should be sold and reinvested in the Banco-Kentucky Company or in some other good interest-bearing stock.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT copies of this resolution be sent to members of the Sinking Fund Commission and to the National Bank of Kentucky, The Louisville Trust Company and the Banco-Kentucky Company.

"The vote upon the above resolution was as follows:

Miss Lewis ----- Aye
Gen. Cammack --- Aye
Supt. Bell ----- Aye.

All voted 'Aye', and it was so ordered."

Hon. J. W. Cammack,
Attorney General,

Dear General:

Mr.Richard Bean, President of the Louisville Trust Company, has told me about his conference with you and members of the State Board of Education in regard to the Trustees' Participation Certificates in the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company held by the State Board of Education for the school fund. He has requested that I take the matter up with you to see if some solution can be found for the proposed exchange of such certificates for stock in the new BancoKentucky Company.

It seems to me that there are two questions involved:

First, as to the power of the Board of Education to sell or exchange the Trustees' Certificates, and Second, the economic wisdom of the reinvestment in the BancoKentucky stock by the Sinking Fund Commissioners.

It is the first of these questions, I assume, your office will be called upon to express an opinion for the guidance of other State officials.

Personally, I have no doubt of the power of the State Board of Education to make this sale. My conclusion is reached from a careful study of the Constitutional provisions in Sections 184 and 185,and the underlying history.

You will recall that Article XI of the Constitution of 1849 set up a trust fund for the common school fund, which included $73,500 of stock of the Bank of Kentucky. Section 184 of the present Constitution contains similar provisions.

In the Constitutional Debates of 1891, Vol.III, page 457, in reporting upon a new provision authorizing the sale of this stock, the Committee explained the purpose of Section 185 as follows:

> "Upon examination of the present Constitution, it was a matter of doubt whether the Legislature could by any act dispose of its stock in the Bank of Kentucky; whether the State was not bound under the provisions of the present Constitution to keep the stock in the way it is now held. This fund amounts to $73,000.00. While there is nothing to be said against that admirably managed and solvent > institution, the object of the provision is simply to put it in the power of the Legislature to dispose of the stock, if, in the course of years any necessity should arise for doing so to secure the fund."

To carry out this purpose Section 185 of the Constitution was adopted and refers back to the "said school fund" mentioned in Section 184, and provides, in substance, for the disposition of the securities held in the school fund as follows:

> "The General Assembly shall make provision by law for the payment of the interest of said school fund and may provide for the sale of the stock in the Bank of Kentucky, and in case of a sale of all or any part of said stock, the proceeds of sale shall be invested by the sinking fund commissioners in good interest bearing stocks or bonds which shall be subject to sale and reinvestment from time to time * * *".

From Section 185 it is to be noted: first, that the Legislature is given the power to pass a law authorizing State boards or officials to sell stock in the Bank of Kentucky. The General Assembly has delegated such power to the State Board of Education as follows:

By Section 4377 of the Statutes the Board of Education is created a body corporate, and by Section 4378 of the Statutes such corporate body is authorized as follows:

> "The corporation shall take, hold and dispose of real and personal estate for the benefit of the common schools of the State."

It seems clear to me that the words "take, hold and dispose of", used in this section, relate to a complete cycle (a) of acquiring, (b) possessing, and (c) selling, the trust funds set apart to the State Board of Education, including that specifically mentioned in the Constitution, Section 184.

In view of the report on the purpose of Section 185 where the stock of the Bank of Kentucky was specifically referred to as being the stock it might be deemed advisable "to dispose of", it seems to me that the words "to dispose of" must be given that ordinary judicial and commonsense meaning. You will recall from our previous correspondence and conversations that the words "to dispose of" have been held many times to be broader than the words "to sell". The words "to dispose of" may mean to barter or exchange or any form of alienation. This was held by the Supreme Court in the case of Phelps v. Harris, 101 U.S.370, where it was said:

> "The expression 'to dispose of' is very broad and signifies more than 'to sell'. Selling is but one mode of disposing of property."

Exhibit 161

The Court of Appeals in Sherrill v. Querbacker, 182 Ky., , and again in Carpenter v. Allen, 198 Ky., 252, has held that the ds "to dispose of" includes every form of alienation.

Black's Law Dictionary defines the word "dispose" as:

> "To alienate or direct the ownership of property; * * * called a word of large extent."

Hence, we find that under the Constitution of 1849 in 1891 ere was a question raised as to whether the Legislature might authorize sale of the trust fund held for common school purposes, and for that ry reason such power was given in Section 185 to the General Assembly, d the General Assembly, by Sections of the Statutes 4377 and 4378, has nferred the power on the Board of Education in the broadest possible rms - not simply to sell or exchange but to dispose of the property held by it.

Secondly, Section 185 of the Constitution is equally clear d self-executing in providing that "the proceeds of sale shall be vested by the Sinking Fund Commissioners in good interest bearing tocks or bonds, i.e."

If any doubt exists as to the power of the State Board of ucation to dispose of the Trustees' Participation Certificates because of e power of the Sinking Fund Commissioners to reinvest, I suggest that e two Boards might hold a joint meeting and adopt the same resolution, meet in rotation as was done before. So far as the power of the nking Fund Commissioners to sell is concerned, Kentucky Statutes, ction 4592, provides:

> "The Commissioners shall have authority to sell any bank stock owned by the Commonwealth and apply the proceeds to the payment or to the purchase of the bonds of the State."

It seems to me to be legally necessary to separate this sentence nd treat it as a power in the Sinking Fund Commissioners to sell, and to gnore as surplusage the method suggested by the Legislature for reinvest- ent, because as to the shares of stock in the Bank of Kentucky the onstitution itself by Section 185 has specifically directed that if this stock s sold, the proceeds "shall be invested by the Sinking Fund Commissioners in ther good interest bearing stocks or bonds which shall be subject to sale nd reinvestment from time to time."

Whether or not the Legislature's intention as to the sale of the ank's stock can be limited by the Constitution in so far as that power was onferred upon the Sinking Fund Commissioners, it certainly was within the ower of the Legislature to delegate such power to the State Board of ducation and even as to the Sinking Fund Commissioners I believe that the ower to sell was delegated, and that only the Legislature's restriction s to how the proceeds should be reinvested would be rejected as contrary to he Constitution.

From the foregoing, it seems to be perfectly clear that the Board of Education has the power to sell and that the Sinking Fund Commissioners have the power to reinvest, and that by joint or concurring resolution the two have all the Legislative power that is necessary to carry out this exchange if the economic advantages of the exchange are approved by the respective boards.

There are precedences for the proposed action although none of them go to the full extent of the present exchange. The stock in the Sinking Fund was originally in the old Bank of Kentucky, a state corporation, which included branches at Lexington and Frankfort. When these branches were separated from the parent company the State received its share in the separate institutions. When the Bank of Kentucky was nationalized it ceased to be a State institution and the exchange of stock from a state to a national institution was effected with the consent of the State officials. The National Bank of Kentucky to a very large extent changed its identity, location and officials when it was merged with the National Bank of Commerce and the American Southern National Bank, which latter included four or five absorbed state institutions in its organization; and, finally about two years ago the stock therein was exchanged into Trustees' Participation Certificates which represented an interest of 80% in the Bank of Kentucky stock and 80% in the Louisville Trust Company stock.

The now proposed change in the holding of Trustees' Participation Certificates is the unanimous recommendation of the same men who proposed and put through the other changes which have certainly proved very profitable to the stockholders, including the State of Kentucky.

The $73,500 of stock in the Bank of Kentucky, referred to in the Constitution, you will recall was supplemented by the purchase by Auditor Samuel M.Stone in 1897 of an additional 63 shares. However, in April 1920, incident to one of the mergers the State received a refund of $45,921.40, and even after this refund the original investment has now present market value of over $364,000, in addition to receiving during all of the time very handsome dividend returns.

It is true that the present BancoKentucky Company's form is somewhat different from that which I had in mind and discussed with you early last year, but nevertheless it is an extension of the same idea referred to in my letter to you of March 27th.,1928, when I said "As I explained to you, the Bank is also contemplating further cooperative moves". In the opinion of all the officials and directors the present move tends to offer the best prospects of profit to the stockholders, and is regarded as absolutely sound. In fact, the plan is conditioned upon the holders of at least the majority in amount of Trustees' Participation Certificates owning at least a majority in amount of the stock in the BancoKentucky Company, which is under the same management and officers as have heretofore successfully conducted the other institutions.

If I can be of any assistance to you in preparing resolutions or explaining the matter in detail to the Board of Education, or the Sinking Fund Commissioners I hope you will feel free to call upon me and I will gladly co-operate to expedite matters.

Mr. C. F. Jones,
Vice-President, National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing a self-explanatory statement of what was a complete bust owing to the adverse position of Senator Young. I think the statement is self-explanatory in that it shows actual cash disbursements and a reasonable per diem for out of the office services.

I do not know whether this should be charged to the BancoKentucky Company or the Bank of Kentucky or to the Trustees, and am submitting the whole matter to your discretion in the hope that you will advise me as to how and when it should be paid.

Yours very truly,

TKH-MI.

Plaintiff's ~~Defendants'~~ Exhibit No. 164

Mr. Chas. F. Jones,
Vice-President, The Bank of Kentucky,
Fifth & Main Sts.,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Brown did not attend The Louisville Trust Company Directors' meeting, as you anticipated, and I, therefore, could not pursue further with him the two subjects concerning which I telephoned you this morning.

(1) I am enclosing a letter just received from Superintendent W.C. Bell, as Chairman of the State Board of Education, stating that there will be a meeting on Monday, February 17th. This is the same meeting concerning which I telephoned you on February 4th was called for the 5th, but was not held on that day.

Attorney General Cammack informed me on the 4th that from recent talks with Superintendent Bell he thought that the Board would recede from or take back their action, requesting an extension of time, and expressing a favorable opinion for the exchange of the Trustees' Participation Certificates into BancoKentucky Company stock.

I expressed surprise at this proposed action as the stock has been withheld for the State at their request, and stated that I could not assume responsibility of attending the meeting and insisting on a resolution being introduced, though I felt very much like it should be done to carry out the moral obligation of the officers of the State. I told him I would notify you, and did so, and have received the attached letter from Superintendent Bell, which may be interpreted in the light of what I have said.

(2) The suggested repeal of that part of the Statute which prohibits any one person or company directly or indirectly owning more than 50% of the stock in a Kentucky bank or trust company, needs some active and intensive attention. The Jurisprudence Committee of the Kentucky Bankers Association has not made this one of its measures but adopted a "hand-off" policy. The Banking Commissioner has expressed a willingness to promote such a Bill, but the Attorney General seems reluctant to aid him in doing so. The situation is complicated by the fact that Mr. A. J. Eckels, President of the Planters Bank and Trust Company of Hopkinsville, is actively promoting a Bill to permit State banks having a capital and surplus of [illegible]0,000.

to establish branches in their own and adjoining counties by the purchase of existing small banks. Ex-Senator J.K.Waller of Morganfield, would be interested in the Bill if the capital and surplus limitation of the present bank were reduced to $150,000.00, and if the right to acquire branches were limited to the county.

All these diversified and conflicting advices have gotten the State officials up in the air at a time when they say the whole Legislative situation is most complicated with personal controversies.

I think it very obvious that the interests and the legal rights of The BancoKentucky Company should be protected by the first amendment repealing the limitation to the ownership of not exceeding 50% of the stock of any bank or trust company in Kentucky, and unless the people interested get together and outline their plans, I doubt very seriously the chance of passing any remedial bill; and I have been ready, as you know, for several months to go into this subject with you and Mr. Brown to consider what may be accomplished, or have you take it up with some one else, if you prefer, to try to protect the BancoKentucky Company in the way suggested.

The suggested way for enforcing this law is to deny voting power to the person owning more than a majority of the stock, and to suspend all dividends thereon until the stock is disposed of, and there may be other remedies, and it does not take much argument to see how seriously such a threat, if instigated by competitors, would be to The BancoKentucky Company.

Yours very truly,

TKH-ML.

Dear Sir:

I want to call your special attention at the present time to BancoKentucky Company, the shares of which have been listed andware quite active on the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Since the formation of this Company, we have kept quite closely in touch with its affairs and after careful consideration of its well-defined programme of development and appreciation of its splendid management, we feel that the future of the Company is very promising. Bank stocks enjoy a distinguished record among corporate investments but probably have been overlooked by most investors because of their high price per share and the low dividend return. BancoKentucky Company stock around its present market is selling at a price which makes it within the range of all investors and we think it may profitably be included in any diversified list of conservative investments.

The rapidly changing conditions in the banking world have brought about a situation in the securities of group banking companies, such as BancoKentucky, which many keen observers think is a parallel case to the public utility situation several years ago and offers the same promising opportunity for investors.

In our opinion, the acquisition by BancoKentucky of practically the entire capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, as well as the control of the two Cincinnati banks - The Pearl Market and The Brighton Bank - is but the beginning of a very carefully considered programme of expansion which this Company has in mind. The genius of its President, Mr. James B. Brown, in affecting consolidation along sound and successful lines is well-known far beyond this immediate vicinity and scarcely needs comment. In our opinion, he is exceptionally qualified to head a Company of this character and we believe it will be his major achievement thus far and become one of the outstanding group banking companies in the Middle West.

At present prices, I consider the stock quite attractive to anyone wanting an equity security of sound merits and unusual possibilities. I would be pleased to discuss this matter with you further or to have your order to be executed at once around present levels.

Very truly yours,

Bob McDonald

Bank Shares and Group Banking

BANK stocks enjoy a distinguished record among corporate investments but knowledge concerning them is by no means general. Probably they have been overlooked by the average investor because of the high prices per share and the low current dividend return.

At the present time such issues as Banco Kentucky Company shares are available at prices within the range of all investors and the outstanding profitable record of bank stocks in general makes such situations extremely interesting. In connection with this record it is noteworthy that anyone who purchased National Bank of Kentucky stock five years ago and sold in the existing market, by averaging his profit over the period, together with dividends, would have an annual yield of over 35% on his capital. (National Bank of Kentucky is the bank through which Banco Kentucky Company was organized.)

The business of banking is favorable to steady profitable operation. Bank deposits usually increase in due proportion to the increase in wealth of the country. Such an increase is usually more sure than the increase in any one industry. Because a bank's stock in trade is money, additions to capital are more immediately profitable than in most enterprises. Thus, it has become banking practice for the stockholders to consent to low dividends so that the balance of earnings may be reinvested in the bank and compounded for them. It is returned to them through stock dividends and rights.

The formation of corporations which control a number of banking institutions is a comparatively new development in America. One of its obvious merits is that it supplies a supervisory managerial ability available in formulating loan and investment policies which is of a higher calibre than a single moderately sized bank could employ. Another advantage is that it gives diversification of risk, so that the whole group is more financially sound than would be the sum of its parts if separated. This soundness and size instills confidence in the public and makes the development of new business easier both in commercial banking and in trust and investment corollaries.

In a strategically located group of banks the inter-bank relationships may be kept more within the group so that profits are increased. The policy of most groups is to retain local staffs and boards of directors so that close relationship with the affairs of the community is maintained.

The advantages of grouping banks are quite similar to those which caused the grouping of public utility properties. Many observers have expressed the opinion, therefore, that bank stocks are in a similar position to public utility stocks six and seven years ago and that they will show the same spectacular development.

Organization

The Banco Kentucky Company was recently formed to acquire and hold controlling interests in commercial banks throughout the Middle West. By charter broad powers are conferred upon the Company, so that all types of operations in the financial field are permitted.

Upon completion of present transactions the Company will control the National Bank of Kentucky, organized in 1834, the Louisville National Bank and Trust Co., organized 1884 as Louisville Trust Company, both of Louisville, Ky., the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co., organized 1907, and the Brighton Bank & Trust Co., organized 1898, both of Cincinnati, Ohio. In addition, the Company will have funds of approximately $8,200,000, which are expected to be used for the acquiring of additional bank institutions.

Exhibit 172-A

History

The formation of the Banco Kentucky Company was occasioned under the leadership of Mr. James B. Brown of Louisville, President of the National Bank of Kentucky. Its cash capital was subscribed to by the shareholders of this bank at $25 per share and practically the entire outstanding stock of the Louisville banks was exchanged for Banco Kentucky stock.

The National Bank of Kentucky, the largest unit in the Company at present, was organized in 1834 as a state bank by the same group of capitalists who organized the Bank of North America in Philadelphia and the Bank of America in New York. The National Bank of Kentucky has a continuous dividend record since its organization for 95 years. At the time of granting the original state charter, the State of Kentucky was given a small block of stock in the bank which it still holds. These shares at present market prices are worth over

(Note change) ~~$1,250,000~~ $500,000.00

Territory

It is the present policy of the Company to control only middle western institutions. This territory contains the center of population of the United States and represents some of the greatest industrial developments of the country. The Company is confining its interest to institutions in larger cities.

Growth

The following table shows the consolidated growth of the group of banks as presently constituted:

Year Ended	Total Resources	Deposits	Capital and Surplus Account
1925
1927
1928
1929 (June 30)	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

See schedule

Change to Oct. 10.

These totals will, of course, be greatly enlarged by the purchase of institutions contemplated with the $8,200,000 cash now in the treasury of the Company.

Capitalization

The Banco Kentucky Company will presently have outstanding 1,750,000 shares of $10 par value capital stock. It has no other classes of securities outstanding or authorized.

Earnings

The earnings after Federal taxes and reserves of constituent banks for six months' period ended June 30, 1929, after elimination of earnings applicable to minority stocks, plus a sum equal to 6% on cash now in treasury awaiting investment in banks, equal an amount which would be equivalent to annual earnings of $1.33 per share on presently outstanding stock. Such calculation gives no effect to benefits expected through the merger of Kentucky banks, or to expected benefits from group management and operation.

Trust Funds

The present group of banks, in addition to its total resources, as shown, controls approximately $100,000,000 of trust funds.

Management

The active executive head of the Banco Kentucky Company is Mr. James B. Brown of Louisville. Mr. Brown has been president of the National Bank of Kentucky for a number of years. He is a director of the following nationally known corporations, as well as many local enterprises: Louisville and Nashville Railroad, Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky, Louisville Gas & Electric Co. and Southern Bell Telephone Co.

The information contained herein has been obtained from sources that we deem reliable and although not guaranteed, is believed by us to be accurate.

THE WORLD: SUND

FIFTY BANKS MERGE I HERE IN 3 YEARS

Only 17 Retain Former Identity; Competition Is Cut 65 P. C.

Seventeen out of fifty New York banks that have been merged in the last three years retain their former identity. This rapid and unprecedented elimination of independent banking units in this city got its first real impetus with the consolidation of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank and the Chase National Bank on April 12, 1926.

The aggregate capital, according to Clinton Gilbert, head of the bank and insurance stock house of that name, represented by these mergers amounted to $125,050,000, or within $15,050,000 of the present capital of the National City Bank, conceded to be second only to Barclay's Bank, Ltd., of England, in capitalization.

"These mergers," Mr. Gilbert explained, "signify in the aggregate a degree of merger activity in the short space of about three years never before enjoyed by the banking fraternity in a similar period, as well as a greater and more effective stimulation of investment interest that would not have ben possible under the diffused conditions with the fifty banking institutions, State and National, operating independently. Not only have far stronger institutions been created, but in the cases of national banks which were merged with State banks and trust companies the field of operations has been automatically extended and made more profitable thereby.

"It is of interest to note that there has been a constant relinquishment of national banking charters in favor of State charters through these consolidations, thus giving the continuing institutions the broader powers permitted them as State banks or State banks and trust companies. Trust companies operate under State charter and their trust business provides a substantial percentage of a State institutions's earnings, hence one of the reasons for the surrender of the national charter in favor of a State charter when a national bank merges with a State bank.

"At present, out of all these institutions which have been merged with larger ones there are but seventeen which have retained their old or similar identity. The striking thing about this is that the competitive phase of New York City banking, so far as the mergers here listed are concerned, has been reduced by approximately 65 per cent. This does not, of course, take into consideration those institutions which have sprung up in the mean'ime.

"It is probable," says Mr. Gilbert, "that this list of merged banks will be considerably augmented in the next identical period, the smaller being taken into the fold of the larger institutions powered by greater capital. This deduction is made as a result of the present disposition of the National and State authorities to countenance mergers when they are in the interest of greater banking strength."

Only in one instance, during the period under which has a national bank linked up with a State bank and at the same time retained both national and State charters. This case is that of the National City Bank's acquisition of a controlling stock interest in the Farmers Loan and Trust Company. It is pointed out, however, that this was not a merger in the strict sense of the word in that the City Bank Farmers Trust is operated as a complete unit and held in trust for the benefit of the National City Bank stockholders.

The table, giving the absorbed banks capital at time of merger, continuing institutions and date of mergers, follows:

Absorbed Banks.	Capital at Time of Merger.	Continuing Institutions.	Date of Merger.

Louisville, Ky., November 19, 1930

Special Committee's Report re Sale of Cincinnati and Covington Banks.

To the Board of Directors and Executive Committee
The BancoKentucky Company.

Gentlemen:

On the 17th of November, 1930, the Executive Committee and Board of Directors of The BancoKentucky Company adopted Resolutions appointing the undersigned "a special Committee with full authority to negotiate and sell all the capital stock now owned by The Banco-Kentucky Company" in four banks hereafter mentioned "on such terms as in the judgment of said Committee may be for the best interest of The BancoKentucky Company, and to carry the sale of same, if made, into effect by executing in behalf of The BancoKentucky Company such documents as may be necessary."

The banks covered by resolution were the Brighton Bank & Trust Company and the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Peoples Liberty Bank & Trust Company and Central Trust & Savings Bank, of Covington, Kentucky.

As you understood and expressed, the situation of these banks was somewhat serious because of rums growing out of the failure of Caldwell & Company and the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, all of which were owned by or in alliance with The BancoKentucky Company, owner of the stock in the above mentioned banks.

This assignment to committee work was made at the meeting of your Board Monday afternoon, November 17, 1930, at 6:10 P.M. It was first arranged and suggested that the Committee, with proper creden-tials and stock certificates, proceed by airplane to Cincinnati to meet a committee of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association then in session, and which remained in session until the arrival of your Committee, which did not go by airplane but made good speed by automobile.

Your Committee not having any detailed information of the statements of the banks to be sold but being told that an emergency existed, deemed it necessary to call upon Mr. James B. Brown, President of The BancoKentucky Company, for suggestions as to the personnel and information as to the cost and the conditions of theCincinnati and Covington banks, before undertaking to act upon the question of sale of the stocks. To obtain the information desired your Committee stopped at Mr. James B. Brown's house from 8:08 P. M. to 10:45 P. M. and urged and insisted that he having bought these banks and knowing the men should go with your Committee, but he positively refused to do so because, he said, of other pending negotiations.

We then proceeded to Cincinnati to keep the engagement with the Committee of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association, which had remained in session pending our arrival about 3:00 A. M. our time but 4:00 A. M. their time, and found them very anxious to complete the negotiations for the Cincinnati banks before 8:00 A. M.

They represented themselves as the President and a Special Committee of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association, which, in view of its experience in a run on Cincinnati banks, in June or July of this year, had obtained special authority from the Cincinnati Clearing House banks to protect the banking interests in Cincinnati through acquiring the Brighton Bank & Trust Company and the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company, which had been for the previous week and on the previous day subjected to runs amounting to a panic.

The Committee of the Clearing House stated that the Chemical

Bank Shares and Group Banking

BANK stocks enjoy a distinguished record among corporate investments but knowledge concerning them is by no means general. Probably they have been overlooked by the average investor because of the high prices per share and the low current dividend return.

At the present time such issues as The Banco Kentucky Company shares are available at prices within the range of all investors and the outstanding profitable record of bank stocks in general makes such situations extremely interesting. In connection with this record it is noteworthy that anyone who purchased National Bank of Kentucky stock five years ago and sold in the existing market, by averaging his profit over the period, together with dividends, would have an annual yield of over 35% on his capital. (National Bank of Kentucky is the bank through which The Banco Kentucky Company was organized.)

The business of banking is favorable to steady profitable operation. Bank deposits usually increase in due proportion to the increase in wealth of the country. Such an increase is usually more sure than the increase in any one industry. Because a bank's stock in trade is money, additions to capital are more immediately profitable than in most enterprises. Thus, it has become banking practice for the stockholders to consent to low dividends so that the balance of earnings may be reinvested in the bank and compounded for them. It is returned to them through stock dividends and rights.

The formation of corporations which control a number of banking institutions is a comparatively new development in America. One of its obvious merits is that it supplies a supervisory managerial ability available in formulating loan and investment policies which is of a higher calibre than a single moderately sized bank could employ. Another advantage is that it gives diversification of risk, so that the whole group is more financially sound than would be the sum of its parts if separated. This soundness and size instills confidence in the public and makes the development of new business easier both in commercial banking and in trust and investment corollaries.

In a strategically located group of banks the inter-bank relationships may be kept more within the group so that profits are increased. The policy of most groups is to retain local staffs and boards of directors so that close relationship with the affairs of the community is maintained.

The advantages of grouping banks are quite similar to those which caused the grouping of public utility properties. Many observers have expressed the opinion, therefore, that bank stocks are in a similar position to public utility stocks six and seven years ago and that they will show the same spectacular development.

Organization

The Banco Kentucky Company was recently formed to acquire and hold controlling interests in commercial banks throughout the Middle West. By charter, broad powers are conferred upon the Company, so that all types of operations in the financial field are permitted but no investments are contemplated other than controlling interests in financial institutions.

Upon completion of present transactions the Company will control the National Bank of Kentucky, organized in 1834, the Louisville National Bank and Trust Co., organized 1884 as Louisville Trust Company, both of Louisville, Ky., the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co., organized 1907, and the Brighton Bank & Trust Co., organized 1898, both of Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, organized 1906, of Covington, Ky. In addition, the Company has funds of approximately $6,000,000, which are expected to be used for the acquiring of additional banking institutions.

History

The formation of The Banco Kentucky Company was occasioned under the leadership of Mr. James B. Brown of Louisville, President of the National Bank of Kentucky. Its cash capital was subscribed to by the shareholders of this bank at $25 per share and practically the entire outstanding stock of the Louisville banks was exchanged for The Banco Kentucky stock.

The National Bank of Kentucky, the largest unit in the Company at present, was organized in 1834 as a state bank by the same group of capitalists who organized the Bank of North America in Philadelphia and the Bank of America in New York. The National Bank of Kentucky has a continuous dividend record since its organization for 95 years. At the time of granting the original state charter, the State of Kentucky was given a small block of stock in the bank which it still holds. These shares at present market prices are worth over $500,000.

Territory

It is the present policy of the Company to control only middle western institutions. This territory contains the center of population of the United States and represents some of the greatest industrial developments of the country. The Company is confining its interest to institutions in larger cities.

Growth

The following table shows the consolidated growth of the group of banks as presently constituted:

Year Ended	Total Resources	Deposits	Capital and Surplus Account
1924	$ 93,559,000	$78,499,000	$10,794,000
1925	97,629,000	79,753,000	11,019,000
1926	103,791,000	84,998,000	11,505,000
1927	113,280,000	89,366,000	12,196,000
1928	120,168,000	90,005,000	12,458,000
1929 (Oct. 10)	123,197,000	91,749,000	12,807,000

These totals are expected to be enlarged by the purchase of institutions contemplated with the cash of approximately $6,000,000 now in the treasury of the Company. The above table does not include statistics on the recently acquired Covington bank.

Capitalization

The Banco Kentucky Company at the conclusion of outstanding exchange offers will presently have outstanding 1,750,000 shares of $10 par value capital stock. It has no other classes of securities outstanding or authorized. The capital stock is listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange.

Dividends

The Company has recently instituted a regular dividend policy of $.80 per share per annum payable quarterly. Consolidated earnings of the Company show this dividend earned by a wide margin, as is usual in the case of conservative banking institutions.

Trust Funds

The present group of banks, in addition to its total resources, as shown, controls approximately $100,000,000 of trust funds.

Management

The active executive head of The Banco Kentucky Company is Mr. James B. Brown of Louisville. Mr. Brown has been president of the National Bank of Kentucky for a number of years. He is a director of the following nationally known corporations, as well as many local enterprises: Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., Standard Oil Co. of Kentucky, Louisville Gas & Electric Co. and Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co.

confronted with crowds of one thousand or more customers and onlookers demanding immediate payment of their deposits, and stated also, as had the representative in regard to the Cincinnati banks, that it might be necessary to keep a cordon of police constantly on duty to protect the banks from conditions approaching a riot. They asserted that the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky had withdrawn $400,000 (?) and that the School Board, City of Covington and the County of Kenton had all called meetings for the afternoon to take action on withdrawing about $1,000,000, but if the situation could be cleared they would leave their funds.

After consulting with Mr.L.B.Wilson and Mr. John S. Schulte, the Presidents of the banks in Covington, and also with the Cincinnati bankers and Mr. Maurice Calvin, who is a stockholder and director, and talking with Mr.Brown who fully approved, your Committee submitted the following option through Mr.L.B.Wilson to the group of prospective investors of the First National Bank in Cincinnati;

"Cincinnati,Ohio, Nov.18,1930.

The undersigned having been duly appointed at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the BancoKentucky Company a special committee, with full authority to negotiate a sale of the shares of the capital stock now owned by The BancoKentucky Company in The Peoples-Liberty Bank and Trust Company, and of the Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, both of Covington, Ky., hereby offer to sell to L.B.Wilson, or his assigns, sixteen hundred and four (1604) shares of The Peoples-Liberty Bank & Trust Company, for the sum of one hundred ($100.00) dollars per share, and in addition thereto, if authority therefor is obtained from the Comptroller of the Currency or his representative, an additional four hundred and ninety-five (495) shares of the Peoples Liberty Bank and Trust Company, which four hundred and ninety-five (495) shares is now pledged to the National Bank of Kentucky, at the same price, and upon the same terms as hereinafter set out; and also five hundred and forty-eight (548) shares of The Central Savings Bank and Trust Company at the price of two hundred ($200.00) dollars per share. The terms of sale to be cash upon delivery of certificates of stock, and the certificates of stock will be delivered to _____Kincheloe,Manager of the Federal Reserve Branch Bank at Louisville, Ky.,

and the said Kincheloe will be directed, upon receipt of the money for such stock, to forthwith deliver same to you or your assigns, and to expedite and consummate the sale, the money to be paid into the Federal Reserve Branch Bank at Cincinnati, Ohio, to be transmitted to the Federal Reserve Branch Bank at Louisville, Ky., to the credit of The BancoKentucky Company.

This option by the undersigned committee is subject to formal ratification by the Board of Directors of The BancoKentucky Company now convening, or by the delivery of the said stock to the said Kincheloe in confirmation hereof.

In Witness Whereof we have hereunto set our hands this 18th day of November, 1930."

The prospective purchasers declined the offer which had been made and stated they were through, but through the further efforts of Mr. L.R.Wilson and Mr. Maurice Galvin, both interested as stockholders, the above contract was amended by accepting a counter proposition which reduced the prices to $50 per share for the Peoples-Liberty Bank & Trust Company and to $100 per share for the Central Savings Bank & Trust Company. In other words, during final negotiations of approximately one hour and a half, 50% of the originally proposed sale price was lost because it was not certain whether the banks could remain open for the following two hours; and even in that time money had been sent on personal credit to support the banks.

Your committee could not but have in mind three factors; first, that if the banks closed, a double liability assessment would result to The BancoKentucky Company; secondly, the untoward general stock market conditions and bank conditions resulting therefrom; and thirdly, as a result of the foregoing, the condition of frozen assets that could not be realized upon at anything like the estimated values at the time these stocks had been purchased; and your Committee realized that the only thing to do was to save the loss of an assessment and obtain such cash as might be collected, and to restore the banks to local control, for it was perfectly obvious in the newspaper publications and in the local talk that the so-called "outside interests" were being in no way supported.

It may be mentioned that in seven-eights of the front page of The Cincinnati Post, in type larger than the name of the paper, appeared the following headline; "Clearing House Buys Outside Interests in Two Banks."

It might also be mentioned that in discussing the Covington bank situation it was made very clear that none of the local banks were prepared to support the Peoples-Liberty Bank & Trust Company and the Central Savings Bank & Trust Company, owned in part by The BancoKentucky Company, but that the best the Covington banks would do was for each bank individually and for itself, to unite in the following statement;

"Covington Banks
Are Fully Protected, Officers Reassure Public.
The following statement was issued by eight banks of Covington, Ky., to the public Tuesday:
The undersigned banks of Covington, Ky., realizing the depressed conditions and the unrest of our people by reason of the closing of the banks in Kentucky and elsewhere, state that none of the closed banks in Louisville, Ky., or Caldwell & Co. of Nashville, Tenn., are indebted to any of the undersigned banks on any loans or advances; neither are any of the undersigned banks in any way indebted or obligated to the closed banks in Louisville or Caldwell & Co. and we firmly believe that the deposits in all the undersigned banks are safe and protected in every way. This statement is made on behalf of all banks and signed by each bank for itself individually.
The Covington Trust & Banking Co., C.W.Simrall, President.
The Peoples Liberty Bank & Trust Co., L.B.Wilson, President.
First National Bank & Trust Company, E.C.Lee, President.
Central Savings Bank & Trust Co., John H. Schulte, President.
Security Savings Bank, Ed. Zeis, President.
Citizens National Bank, B.J.Linnemann, President.
First National Bank of Latonia, H.C.White, President.
Latonia Deposit Bank & Trust Co., Warren Ellistom, Cashier."

It was utterly impossible either in the time permitted or from the Committee's knowledge of local conditions, to combat and differ from the analyses of the statements of the several banks and the conditions as held forth by apparently, and we believe actually, those best qualified to advise as to local conditions of the respective banks. Your Committee, therefore, deemed it best to accept the utmost it could secure and to have all the funds transmitted directly to the Federal Reserve Agent in Louisville for the account of The Banco-Kentucky Company.

The originals of the contracts are delivered herewith.

This is submitted as a report of the best that we could do under the time limit and circumstances attending on our duties.

Respectfully submitted,

Special Committee (_____)

Bank & Trust Company, of New York, of which Mr. Percy Johnston is President, had given notice that it would sell all stocks of those banks which had been pledged to it by The BancoKentucky Company at 9:00 A. M., November 18, 1930, and that this represented a majority but not the necessary two-thirds interest, and that Mr. Johnston talked with with Mr. Brown the previous week but no progress could be made, when matters were very much less serious; that the clearing house banks were represented by their Presidents, Chairman of the Boards or other officers fully empowered to act, and that irrespective of profit or loss they were willing to make an offer to pay to The BancoKentucky Company the same amount that they had finally agreed to pay to the Chemical Bank & Trust Company of New York, upon its ownership of stock if both sales were made.

At the time of the night or morning at which your Committee went into these negotiations, the only representative of our interests in Cincinnati was the President of the two institutions owned by The BancoKentucky Company, Mr. G. M. Moeler.

The entire time before the proposed meeting of the Clearing House at 8:00 A. M. was taken up with discussing with the Committee its analysis of the bank statements, the prospects of stopping the run upon the institutions, or the institutions surviving the run imminent on the opening on the following morning, or their value if liquidated, as Mr. Moeler stated that the Boards of Directors of neither institution was willing to open or receive deposits for fear of liability for accepting deposits when insolvent, and if the banks were not sold to the Clearing House they would not open but would be immediately put in the hands of the Banking Commissioner.

The analysis presented clearly indicated that the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company was insolvent to the extent of more than $600,000, which meant an assessment on its shares of stock to that amount. The Cincinnati Clearing House Committee clearly stated that in any proposition they made, the two banks which had been unified in interest must be considered together and the prospective loss on the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company must be deducted from any possible saving to be realized from the sale of the Brighton Bank & Trust Company.

The situation was far from clear, though it was intimated and positively stated that the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company had losses sufficient to justify an assessment of $600,000 on its stockholders. It was also stated that the Brighton Bank & Trust Company had sufficient cash and credit to weather any normal or extraordinary demands; but the fact that there had been eight banks closed in Kentucky and many other bank failures, made the losses for the preceding week such as practically to exhaust the resources of both banks, and that on the previous day it had been necessary to have assignments of the police department to control the crowds that had gathered demanding withdrawals.

Every member of your Committee and Mr. Moeler talked with Mr. Brown by long distance telephone for possibly as much as two hours, but could not agree with his optimism that the case could be fought out to any successful conclusion, and were impressed with the fact that the banks could not be opened, and if closed would mean a net loss to The BancoKentucky Company if the stock was held to an amount of from $500,000 to $1,500,000.00.

So far as the Cincinnati banks were concerned, the following agreements and statements were executed:

"November 18, 1930.

The Cincinnati Clearing House Assn.,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

The undersigned duly authorized special committee of the BancoKentucky Company hereby offers to sell to you 23,670 shares of the capital stock of the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Company of Cincinnati and 18,290 shares of the capital stock of the Brighton Bank & Trust Company of Cincinnati, for the sum of $274,380 cash to be paid upon delivery of all of said shares, which we agree to deliver forthwith, and in addition thereto any sum that may be realized by your committee upon complete resale of said shares and/or liquidation of said banks over and above said $274,380, with the understanding, however, that this additional total amount so to be paid to us shall not exceed the sum of $188,900.00.

It is understood that your association will put forth its best effort to have the resale of said shares and/or liquidation of said banks consummated within the period of one year from this date.

Atlas National Bank by C. J. Ziegler, Vice-President.

The statement was issued, it was announced, in order to insure public confidence in the two institutions whose names have been linked with the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky at Louisville, Kentucky".

About the time these negotiations were closed, it appeared that the Chemical Bank & Trust Company, of New York, was withholding a part of the stock covered by a certificate and might claim a lien thereon. Your Committee therefore executed the following order:

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 18, 1930.

The Chemical Bank & Trust Company,
New York, N.Y.

Gentlemen:

Please deliver to the Cincinnati Clearing House Association for our account six thousand (6000) shares Capital Stock of the Brighton Bank & Trust Company of Cincinnati.

The aforesaid 6000 shares are deliverable to our order out of a certain Certificate for 10,000 shares of said Capital stock, which Certificate you now hold.

Yours very truly,

The BancoKentucky Company

By Special Committee (T.K.Helm, C.F.Jones, R.L.Callahan."

It was arranged that the stock in Louisville in these banks should be delivered to Robert D. Kincheloe, Federal Reserve Agent at Louisville, and that he would accept for the account of The Banco-Kentucky Company the proceeds and deliver the stock in The Banco-Kentucky Company's possession. This was carried into effect and the presently due cash was collected and said stock so delivered.

Immediately after the above trade was consummated, and, in fact, before it was completed, Mr. L.B.Wilson, President of the Peoples Bank & Trust Company, Covington, Ky., and Mr. John S. Schulte, President of the Central Savings Bank & Trust Company, Covington, Ky., were making the most serious demands for assistance and representing that their banks had opened, after borrowing to their limit, and were

June 20, 1929.

Mr. James B. Brown,
National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

My dear Mr. Brown:

On investigation this morning with Mr. Andrew Seay of the Louisville Title Company, he tells me that when they organized their trust company all of the shares of stock except the qualifying shares were owned by the Louisville Title Company. It develops that Kentucky has a law which prevents a corporation from owning more than 50% of the stock of a bank, so they accomplished their end by trusteeing the stock of the Louisville Title Company and stock of their Guaranty Trust Company with some trustees. In other words, those two banks have their stock trusteed just like our two banks have it.

Under this law, it looks as if the Kentucky Company may own 50% of the stock in the two banks, and that will serve our purpose very well.

Yours very truly,

Richard Bean

President.

Mr. C. F. Jones,
Vice Pres., National Bank of Kentucky,
Louisville, Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Jones:

Since my return to St. Louis, I have given some attention to the report of your bank. I have not, however, completed the report. I desire to call your attention to the fact that the Statutory "Bad Debts" of your bank aggregate $2,296,351.12. This exceeds slightly surplus and undivided profits of your bank. In view of this fact I thought, perhaps, I had better call to your attention the provisions of Sections 5199 and 5204 R. S. U. S. I suggest that you take immediate steps to renew some of these loans and make them current. For your information will state that there are a number of ~~already~~ loans payable on demand on which no interest has been paid for more than six months. I think, perhaps, a renewal of all the old demand loans would cure the defect.

Another thing I forgot at the directors' meeting was to call attention to the fact that President Brown is a director in three national banks and six state banks, members of the Federal Reserve System, four of which have assets exceeding $5,000,000.00. In this connection your attention is called to Page 7 of the enclosed pamphlet. According to the provision of Section 8, it would seem that he can only be a director in three of the banks whose assets exceed $5,000,000.00 except the Louisville Trust Company whose stock, I believe, is unified with that of the National Bank of Kentucky. If this is true and the Louisville Trust Company is owned solely by the National Bank of Kentucky, it would be exempted. It would seem, therefore, that he would have to resign in all except three of the following banks:

Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co., Cincinnati, Ohio
Brighton Bank & Trust Co., Cincinnati, Ohio

DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF DIRECTORS OF NATIONAL BANKS AND MEMBER BANKS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM.

PROVISIONS OF LAW DEFINING DUTIES OF DIRECTORS AND PRESCRIBING PENALTIES FOR NEGLECT OF SUCH DUTIES.

APPOINTMENT AND POWERS OF DIRECTORS.

(SEC. 5136, U. S. R. S.) Fifth. To elect or appoint directors, and by its board of directors to appoint a president, vice president, cashier, and other officers, define their duties, require bonds of them, and fix the penalty thereof, dismiss such officers or any of them at pleasure, and appoint others to fill their places.

Sixth. To prescribe, by its board of directors, by-laws not inconsistent with law, regulating the manner in which its stock shall be transferred, its directors elected or appointed, its officers appointed, its property transferred, its general business conducted, and the privileges granted to it by law exercised and enjoyed.

Seventh. To exercise by its board of directors, or duly authorized officers or agents, subject to law, all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking; by discounting and negotiating promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt; by receiving deposits; by buying and selling exchange, coin, and bullion; by loaning money on personal security; and by obtaining, issuing, and circulating notes according to the provisions of this title.

NUMBER AND ELECTION OF DIRECTORS—TERM OF OFFICE.

(SEC. 5145, U. S. R. S.) The affairs of each association shall be managed by not less than five directors, who shall be elected by the shareholders at a meeting to be held at any time before the association is authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence the business of banking; and afterward at meetings to be held on such day in January of each year as is specified therefor in the articles of association. The directors shall hold office for one year, and until their successors are elected and have qualified.

QUALIFICATIONS OF DIRECTORS.

(SEC. 5146, U. S. R. S.) Every director must, during his whole term of service, be a citizen of the United States, and at least three-fourths of the directors must have resided in the State, Territory, or District in which the association is located, or within fifty miles of the location of the office of the association, for at least one year immediately preceding their election, and must be residents of such State or within a fifty-mile territory of the location of the association during their continuance in office. Every director must own in his own right at least ten shares of the capital stock of the association of which he is a director, unless the capital of the bank shall not exceed $25,000, in which case he must own in his own right at least five shares of such capital stock. Any director who ceases to be the owner of the required number of shares of the stock, or who becomes in any other manner disqualified, shall thereby vacate his place.

OATH REQUIRED FROM DIRECTORS.

(SEC. 5147, U. S. R. S.) Each director, when appointed or elected, shall take an oath that he will, so far as the duty devolves on him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of such association, and will not knowingly violate, or willingly permit to be violated, any of the provisions of this title, and that he is the owner in good faith, and in his own right, of the number of shares of stock required by this title, subscribed by him, or standing in his name on the books

DEPOSITS WITH NONMEMBER BANKS SUBJECT TO LIMIT (SEC. 19, FEDERAL RESERVE ACT).

No member bank shall keep on deposit with any State bank or trust company which is not a member bank a sum in excess of ten per centum of its own paid-up capital and surplus. No member bank shall act as the medium or agent of a nonmember bank in applying for or receiving discounts from a Federal reserve bank under the provisions of this act, except by permission of the Federal Reserve Board.

DIVIDENDS AND SURPLUS FUND.

(SEC. 5199, U. S. R. S.) The directors of any association may, semiannually, declare a dividend of so much of the net profits of the association as they shall judge expedient; but each association shall, before the declaration of a dividend, carry one-tenth part of its net profits of the preceding half year to its surplus fund until the same shall amount to twenty per centum of its capital stock.

WITHDRAWAL OF CAPITAL PROHIBITED—DIVIDEND NOT TO EXCEED NET PROFITS—BAD DEBTS DEFINED.

(SEC. 5204, U. S. R. S.) No association, or any member thereof, shall, during the time it shall continue its banking operations, withdraw, or permit to be withdrawn, either in the form of dividends or otherwise, any portion of its capital. If losses have at any time been sustained by any such association, equal to or exceeding its undivided profits then on hand, no dividend shall be made; and no dividend shall ever be made by any association, while it continues its banking operations, to an amount greater than its net profits then on hand, deducting therefrom its losses and bad debts. All debts due to any association, on which interest is past due and unpaid for a period of six months, unless the same are well secured, and in process of collection, shall be considered bad debts within the meaning of this section. But nothing in this section shall prevent the reduction of the capital stock of the association under section fifty-one hundred and forty-three.

PENALTY FOR VIOLATION OF PROVISIONS OF THIS TITLE—VIOLATION, HOW DETERMINED—LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS FOR VIOLATION.

(SEC. 5239, U. S. R. S.) If the directors of any national banking association shall knowingly violate, or knowingly permit any of the officers, agents, or servants of the association to violate any of the provisions of this title, all the rights, privileges, and franchises of the association shall be thereby forfeited. Such violation shall, however, be determined and adjudged by a proper circuit, district, or territorial court of the United States, in a suit brought for that purpose by the Comptroller of the Currency, in his own name, before the association shall be declared dissolved. And in cases of such violation, every director who participated in or assented to the same shall be held liable in his personal and individual capacity for all damages which the association, its shareholders, or any other person shall have sustained in consequence of such violation.

PENALTY FOR FALSELY CERTIFYING CHECK.

(SEC. 5208, U. S. R. S.) It shall be unlawful for any officer, director, agent, or employee of any Federal reserve bank, or of any member bank as defined in the act of December twenty-third, nineteen hundred and thirteen, known as the Federal reserve act, to certify any check drawn upon such Federal reserve bank or member bank unless the person, firm, or corporation drawing the check has on deposit with such Federal reserve bank or member bank, at the time such check is certified, an amount of money not less than the amount specified in such check. Any check so certified by a duly authorized officer, director, agent, or employee shall

The consent of the Federal Reserve Board may be procured before the person applying therefor has been elected as a class A director of a Federal reserve bank or as a director of any member bank. * * *

When any person elected or chosen as a director or officer or selected as an employee of any bank or other corporation subject to the provisions of this act is eligible at the time of his election or selection to act for such bank or other corporation in such capacity his eligibility to act in such capacity shall not be affected, and he shall not become or be deemed amenable to any of the provisions hereof by reason of any change in the affairs of such bank or other corporation from whatsoever cause, whether specifically excepted by any of the provisions hereof or not, until the expiration of one year from the date of his election or employment.

Cincinnati Banks Join Middle West Chain; Brighton And Pearl Market In Big Deal Forming Unit In BancoKentucky Group

Assuming the initiative in the development of banking associations on a large scale in the Middle West, The BancoKentucky Company yesterday consummated deals which give it a commanding situation in the Cincinnati banking field. The company, which is headed by James B. Brown, Louisville, Ky., banker and capitalist, arranged to acquire control of the Brighton Bank & Trust Co. and the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co.

Under the plans of Mr. Brown and his associates, the two banks will be merged into one institution, thus becoming one of the larger Cincinnati units, with Gustave M. Mosler, President of the Brighton bank, as head of the combined banks. But beyond the formation of an important unit in Cincinnati, the deal puts behind the Cincinnati institution the great resources of The BancoKentucky Company, which is fast becoming one of the great financial institutions of the country.

Besides aligning Cincinnati and Louisville institutions of great financial strength, the immediate plans call for association with strong banks in Chicago and Indianapolis, forming a network in the East Central States, covering Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and parts of Tennessee and West Virginia. Negotiations are now pending for the acquisition of strong banks in Chicago and Indianapolis and later on, banks in other cities in the states named will be taken into the fold.

The entry of the BancoKentucky into the Cincinnati field, the first outside of its home town, Louisville, is in recognition of the great importance of the commercial and industrial position of the Queen City in the Ohio Valley and the new spirit [illegible] evident in the [illegible] Ohio metropolis.

With the acquisition of the Cincinnati banks, the BancoKentucky Company will have resources of $315,000,000, making it the largest banking group in the Ohio Valley and one of the important banking factors west of New York City.

JAMES B. BROWN

GUSTAVE M. MOSLER

Definite action for the acquisition of the Cincinnati banks was taken yesterday at meetings of Boards of Directors of the two institutions. Directors of the Brighton Bank and later the Board of the Pearl Market Bank acted favorably upon the proposals of Mr. Brown, and recommendations will be made to the stockholders of both institutions for the acceptance of the terms contained in the deal. With the recommendations will go formal offers to the stockholders of the institutions for their stock. The offer to the Brighton Bank stockholders is $900 a share and to the Pearl Market Bank stockholders $750 a share.

Stockholders will have the option of taking cash for their holdings or part cash and part stock in the BancoKentucky Company.

On completion of the merger of the two institutions, the Cincinnati unit will have a capital of $1,000,000, surplus and undivided profits of $1,000,000 and total resources of $30,000,000. Under the plans for the merger Mr. Mosler will become President of the enlarged bank. Other active officers and the entire personnel of both institutions will be retained and all the present banks and branches continued. It is planned to open a downtown office, probably on Fourth Street, and with this, the bank will have eight offices well distributed through Cincinnati. It is possible that another Cincinnati institution will be taken into the fold.

The BancoKentucky Company, organized in the early summer under a Delaware charter, has a capital of $30,000,000 par value, and with the acquisition of the Cincinnati banks will have total resources of more than $315,000,000. The shares of the company are $10 par value and have been sold at $25 a share, which gives the company $50,000,000 in cash for capital. The shares were sold privately over a period of two months without a public offering, a notable result in the realm of Middle West financing.

The company has acquired complete ownership of the National Bank of Kentucky and of the Louisville Trust Company. While these banks have not been merged, membership is represented by joint trustee certificates of the National Bank of Kentucky.

Negotiations for the Cincinnati deal were conducted by Mr. Brown in person. Associated with him were

Charles F. Jones, Cashier of the National Bank of Kentucky, and Maurice L. Galvin, attorney for the Banco-Kentucky. Mr. Mosier conducted the negotiations for the Brighton Bank. Sidney Weil, director in the Pearl Market, and Cincinnati's newest baseball magnate, and Joseph Heimers, Executive Vice President, of the Pearl Market, represented the latter interests in the negotiations.

The entry of Mr. Brown into the Cincinnati banking field brings into the city's financial affairs one of the dynamic personalities of the Blue Grass State. A man of vision and action, he sees a brilliant future for Cincinnati, and expressed himself as profoundly impressed with the recent developments in the city.

Mr. Brown is President of the BancoKentucky Company and the National Bank of Kentucky.

"I believe Cincinnati has a great future before it," Mr. Brown said, in explaining his entry into the Cincinnati field. "I have been wonderfully impressed by the great progress the city has made in the past few years. No city in the country today is going ahead any faster nor is showing finer spirit than Cincinnati. With a continuation of this spirit and this progress the future looks very bright.

"There is a great change coming over the banking situation in the United States and the BancoKentucky Company has been organized to meet this condition. Our plan is to develop an organization that will have the resources necessary to take care of the needs of the territory which we serve without dependence on institutions in other sections of the country.

"By grouping a chain of strong banks in the key cities of the East Central States, we will form an association that will be able to handle the business needs of the communities served. The change is coming in the banking world and we believe we have taken the logical steps to meet it according to the best economic principles.

"Our coming to Cincinnati is due to its great importance in the Ohio Valley and likewise in recognition of its remarkable development in the past few years. By tieing into our group strong Chicago and Indianapolis banks with what we have in Louisville and are acquiring in Cincinnati, we will have a group that will be second to none in this territory. We are friendly neighbors and our aim is to develop the best interests of this section of the country.

"With the large resources that the combination will give, the Cincinnati banks will be in a position to render services that now are impossible to business and industry in the part of the separate institutions.

"The association of the banks will make possible economies in a large way, will give them the advantage of mutual experience and will enable them to finance individual businesses more effectively and handle much larger financial deals."

Mr. Brown has been a banker for 21 years, practically all of his career being spent in Louisville. He is a Kentuckian by birth. He was Cashier, then President of the National Bank of Commerce. In 1919 this bank was merged with the National Bank of Kentucky and he became the head of the merged institution, which position he still holds. Besides his banking connection Mr. Brown is a newspaper owner and publisher, his paper being the Louisville Herald-Post. He is a Director in the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, the Southern Bell Telephone Company, the Louisville Gas & Electric Company. He has numerous other corporate connections and is a Director in the American Turf Association.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Galvin will become directors in the Cincinnati bank and Mr. Brown plans to give much of his personal time and attention to its affairs.

Mr. Mosier, who will head the combined bank, has made his mark as a banker at the head of the Brighton Bank and Trust Company. Under his guidance, the bank has grown consistently, and though it has not acquired a downtown location, is one of the important institutions in the city. Possessed of a striking personality and known for his frankness in his dealings with men, Mr. Mosier has gained an enviable reputation as a banker and financier. The price at which the Brighton Bank stock was sold is evidence enough of the character of its management, it was pointed out. Still a young man, Mr. Mosier is known for his hobbies. He is President of American Philatelic Association, having one of the largest collections of stamps in Ohio. He is also a dog fancier and has won many ribbons at national dog shows with his kennel of beagles.

Regarding the deal Mr. Mosier said: "There is a great change coming in the banking situation in the United States and our action in becoming associated with the Banco-Kentucky Company was taken with this in view. In my opinion it is a big step for Cincinnati, and it gives us a connection with a powerful banking group that has vision and real enterprise. The combined bank will be able to render a great service to Cincinnati business, and with the character of men in control of the holding company, many benefits should accrue to the city.

"There is no question but that banking in the United States is going through a remarkable change, with every prospect of developing into a system similar to that existing in Canada today—that of big banks in central locations with branches throughout the country. At the start this situation in the United States is being met by holding companies, but ultimately an amendment to the Mc-Fadden banking act is inevitable. The amount of available paper for rediscount with the Federal Reserve System has decreased from 43 to 13 per cent. This change has come about through the many new stock issues, the money derived from which has been used to liquidate bank loans. The Federal Reserve System soon will have to make important changes to conform to existing conditions, in the opinion of leading bankers.

"In agreeing to head the Cincinnati unit of this system I was influenced by the wonderful progress that has been made in our city and the importance of organizing the banking field to meet the situation in the light of the new conditions. I feel that the institution will be fully qualified to do its share in the continued progress and development of Cincinnati."

"Mr. Brown has advised me that the resources and funds of the various institutions in the group are available for any local development that may be presented. In view of his wonderful record of past achievements, I cannot help but feel that we all will benefit by the new connection."

The bank deal serves to bring Mr. Weil into the limelight again, or rather simultaneously. In a week's time this young man has become one of the most-talked-of of personalities in Cincinnati. Last night he announced his acquisition of control of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and in the revelation of the banking merger he was shown to have played an important and determining part through his position and influence as a Director of the Pearl Market Bank.

Plaintiffs,

v.

E. C. SCHAAL, Receiver of the GUARDIAN NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE OF DETROIT, and ALEXANDER J. GROESBECK, Receiver for GUARDIAN DETROIT UNION GROUP, INCORPORATED, et al.,

Defendants.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In view of the numerous corporations involved in this suit and the great group of individuals who are interested directly or indirectly in the various steps in connection with the corporations prior to the levying of the stock assessment, and in order to clarify as far as possible the situation by specific findings of fact, which may or may not be of importance to the various groups of stockholders, the Court makes the following findings of fact:

1. The Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit is a national banking association, organized under the laws of the United States, with an authorized issued and outstanding capital stock of $10,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, with its principal place of business in the City of Detroit, in Wayne County, Southern Division of the Eastern District of Michigan.

2. This bank failed to reopen its doors for the transaction of banking business after the close of business at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, February 11th, 1933. The Governor of the State of Michigan declared a state bank holiday February 14, 1933, which was from time to time extended until the national bank holiday on March 6th declared by the President of the United States. As the result of these bank holidays declared by the Governor of Michigan and by the President of the United States, the bank did not reopen, and on March 15, 1933, the Comptroller of the Currency found that this bank was unable to transact and carry on its ordinary business or to exercise its usual banking functions without prejudicing the rights of depositors and creditors, and pursuant to the act of Congress relating to the appointment of conservators, the Comptroller of the Currency did on March 15th, 1933, appoint B. C. Schram conservator of said bank, who thereupon qualified, took possession and control thereof, and continued in such possession and control until his appointment as receiver thereof on May 11th, 1933.

3. It appearing to the satisfaction of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States on May 11th, 1933, that said Guardian National bank of Commerce of Detroit was insolvent and unable to pay its just and legal debts, after a finding by him of the necessity therefor in accordance with the statutes of the United States, the Comptroller of the Currency appointment B. C. Schram receiver of said bank, with all the powers, duties, and responsibilities given to or imposed upon a receiver under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of the United States. The receiver immediately qualified on May 11th, 1933, and has been and now is the duly appointed, qualified, and acting receiver of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit.

4. On May 15, 1933, the Comptroller of the Currency, in compliance with the laws relating thereto, found and declared that it appeared to his satisfaction that in order to pay the contract debts and engagements of the bank, it was necessary to enforce the individual liability of the stockholders of the bank and did therefore levy and make an assessment and requisition on the shareholders of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit for $10,000,000, and did make demand upon each and every one of said shareholder for the par value of each and every share of the capital stock of said bank held or owned by said shareholders respectively at the time of its failure, and thereupon directed B. C. Schram receiver aforesaid to take the necessary proceedings by suit or otherwise to enforce the individual liability of said shareholders. The date for the payment of the assessment fixed by the Comptroller of the Currency was June 23rd, 1933, but by successive extensions was finally fixed as July 31, 1933.

5. In compliance with the directions of the Comptroller of the Currency, the defendant, B. C. Schram, duly notified all the shareholders of said bank of the fact of the levy of said assessment, and made demand upon each of the shareholders of this bank (including each plaintiff and intervenor in this suit).

6. On July 12th, 1933, the plaintiffs filed their bill of complaint in this cause seeking permanently to enjoin the defendant Schram as receiver of said bank from taking any steps toward collecting said assessment from the plaintiffs and all other stockholders of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., and on said day obtained a temporary restraining order against the defendant Schram preventing him from undertaking to collect the said assessment from plaintiffs and the other stockholders of said company, later obtained an interlocutory injunction continuing in effect the restraining order during the pendency of this cause, and by virtue of this order the defendant Schram was prevented from complying with the instructions of the Comptroller of the Currency relative to the collection of the assessment so far as the shareholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., were concerned.

7. The Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit resulted from the consolidation of the National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, a national banking association, and the Guardian Detroit Bank, a Michigan state bank, on December 31st, 1931. Prior to that time the Griswold First State Bank, another Michigan state bank, consolidated with the National Bank of Commerce of Detroit under the latter name, on February 28th, 1929.

The Comptroller of the Currency, upon proof satisfactory to him, had found that the consolidations were in due and proper form and in compliance with the National Banking Law, and the validity of the consolidations is not open to challenge by the plaintiffs and intervenors, or defendants, in this suit.

8. At the time of the appointment of the receiver of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, all of its capital stock, with the exception of qualifying shares standing in the names of the officers and directors of said bank, were registered upon the stock books of the bank in the name of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. as owner of such stock. The principal controversy arises over the nature of the ownership of such stock by Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., it being the contention of the plaintiffs and intervenors that this corporation was the true, legal and beneficial owner of the stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, and that it alone is responsible to the receiver for the stock assessment. The receiver contends that the corporation held the stock merely as agent or trustee for the benefit of its shareholders, and that its shareholders are the real and beneficial owners of the bank stock and are liable for the assessment by virtue of being the real and beneficial owners of the bank stock, and by reason of the articles of incorporation of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., and the certificates of stock held by the shareholders, all of which makes it necessary for the court to make further findings in regard to the nature, operation and functions of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc.

(a) The Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. is the final corporate form under an original charter of the Guardian Detroit Group, Inc., a corporation organized and existing pursuant to Act. No. 84 of the Public Acts of Michigan for the year 1921, as amended, for the purposes as set forth in its charter (See Exhibit 44, pages 1 to 4 inclusive.)

(b) Article III states its purpose. "The purpose or purposes of this corporation are as follows: To acquire, own, hold, dispose of, and deal in stocks, bonds and other evidences of indebtedness, and securities, including those issued by any corporation, domestic or foreign, and to possess and exercise in respect thereto all the rights, powers and privileges of individual owners thereof, including the right to vote the same and to execute proxies therefor."

(c) The authorized capital was $7,500,000 with $1,000 subscribed and paid in.

(d) Article IX contains the following: "The holders of the stock of this corporation shall be individually and severally liable (in proportion to the number of shares of its stock held by them respectively) for any statutory liability imposed upon this corporation by reason of its ownership of shares of the capital stock of any bank or trust company."

(e) The subscribers were excused by resolution of the board of directors from making payment for the stock.

(f) The articles of incorporation were executed on the 9th day of May, 1929, and duly and legally filed with the Secretary of State for the State of Michigan, and the County Clerk for the County of Wayne, State of Michigan.

(g) On May 15, 1929, the Securities Commission of the State of Michigan validated 100,000 shares of common stock for exchange for 50,000 shares of Guardian Unified Stock, 20,000 shares for exchange for 10,000 shares of Highland Park State bank stock, and 5,000 shares for exchange for 5,000 shares of stock of Highland Park Trust Company, and also listed and authorized for sale 6,000 shares of common stock at the price of $124.50 per share, 15,100 shares at the price of $125 per share, which was amended May 21, 1929, authorizing a validation for the sale of 15,000 shares at the price of $49.80, and 32,750 shares at the price of $90 per share, and permanent validation of 250,000 shares for exchange for 50,000 shares of Guardian unified stock, 50,000 shares for exchange for 10,000 shares of Highland Park State Bank stock, and 12,500 shares in exchange for 5,000 shares of Highland Park Trust Company stock, and thereafter issued its final order of approval dated June 1st, 1929, confirming the foregoing.

(h) The plan and agreement for exchange of unified stock of the Guardian Detroit Bank and Guardian Trust Company of Detroit and Guardian Detroit Company, and similar agreement for exchange of shares of Highland Park State Bank and Highland Park Trust Company, are set forth at length in Exhibit 44, pages 22-a, 22-b and 22-c, which are hereby referred to and made a part of this finding.

(i) In the application to the Securities Commission, the application stated that the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, is a holding company which will hold inter alia over 75 per cent of the capital stock of the following corporations, listing several banks and trust companies and a security company, and it was recited that the proceeds of the issuance of its stock would be used to obtain by exchange the capital stock of the listed companies and to raise the additional capital for the use of certain of such subsidiary companies.

(j) Thereafter the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, by means of exchange of its capital stock, acquired the entire capital stock of the following banks and trust companies:

Guardian Detroit Bank

Guardian Detroit Company

Guardian Trust Company

Highland Park State Bank

Exhibit 211

Highland Park Trust Company

Bank of Dearborn

National Union Bank & Trust Company

Federal Commercial & Savings Bank of Port Huron

First National Trust & Savings Bank of Port Huron

Bank of Detroit

The sole consideration for the deposit of the stocks of the above banks of the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, was the exchange of holding company shares for the shares of the capital stock of the above banks, as provided in the deposit agreements.

(k) On December 16,1929, by formal resolution of the respective boards of directors, ratified and approved by the unanimous vote of their respective stockholders at special stockholders' meetings, held for that purpose, of which due and proper notice was given, of the Union Commerce Corporation and of the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, a plan of consolidation and merger was adopted providing for the exchange of one share of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, stock for each share of Union Commerce Corporation stock. The plan further provided that article IX of the articles of association of Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, should be amended so as to provide a method of enforcing double liability of stockholders with respect to bank and trust company capital stock. Said plan was consummated, and pursuant to the terms of said merger and consolidation, article IX of the articles of association of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, was amended so as to read as follows:

"The holders of stock of this corporation shall be individually and severally liable (in proportion to the number of shares of its stock held by them respectively) for any statutory liability imposed upon this corporation by reason of its ownership of shares of the capital stock of any bank or trust company, and the

"stockholders of this corporation by the acceptance of their certificates of stock of this corporation severally agree that such liability may be enforced in the same manner as statutory liability may now or hereafter be enforced against stockholders of banks or trust companies under the laws of the United States or the State of Michigan. A list of the stockholders of rhis corporation shall be filed with the Banking Commissioner of Michigan and the Comptroller of the Currency whenever requested by either of those officers."

And a copy of the articles of association of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, with the amended Article IX, was filed with the County Clerk of Wayne County, the Secretary of State of the State of Michigan, and with the Securities Commission of the State of Michigan.

L. Subsequent to the above merger, there was deposited with and acquired by Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, by means of the exchange of its shares of stock, all of the capital stock of the following banks and trust companies:

Peoples National Bank, Jackson
Grand Rapids National Bank,
Grand Rapids Trust Company,
Second National Bank & Trust Company, Saginaw
Capital National Bank, Lansing,
First National Bank & Trust Company, Kalamazoo, City National Bank & Trust Company, Niles,
National Bank of Ionia.

9. The Union Commerce Corporation, which merged with the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, under the name of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, by the sale of its assets to the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, in exchange for its certificates of stock, upon which Article IX was printed on the back, and referred to on the face of the certificate, was the first of these so-called holding corporations. It was incorporated under the name of Union Commerce Investment Company (later changed to Union Commerce Corporation), chartered, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware on May 17th, 1928, with an authorized capital stock of $5,000,000, divided into 50,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and its certificate of incorporation was filed in the office of the Secretary of State of Delaware on the 24th day of May, 1928. Said corporation was duly and legally authorized to transact the following, among other business:

"to subscribe for, purchase, acquire, invest in, hold for investment, or otherwise own, trade, generally deal in and to use, sell, assign, transfer, pledge, mortgage, exchange, or otherwise dispose of the stock, bonds, and other evidences of indebtedness of any corporation, domestic or foreign, public, quasi-public, or private, and to possess and exercise in respect thereof all rights, powers, and privileges of individual owners or holders of such stock, including the right to vote thereon and to execute proxies therefor."

(a) Article VIII of the charter contained the following clause: "Private property of stockholders shall not be subject to the payment of corporate debts, except that the holder of each share of the stock of this corporation shall be individually and severally liable for such stockholder's ratable and proportionate part (determined on the basis of their respective stock holdings of the total issued and outstanding stock of this corporation) of any statutory liability which may be determined, imposed upon, or assessed against this corporation;

"(a) By reason of its ownership of any stock in any bank now or hereafter organized and existing under the national banking act of the United States of America, and any amendment thereto, and/or under any present or future law or laws of the United States of America governing and controlling the organization and regulation of capitalized national banks;

"(b) By reason of its ownership of any stock in any trust company, now or hereafter organized and existing under the Trust Deposit and Security Companies act of the State of Michigan, and any amendment thereto, and/or any present or future law or laws of the State of Michigan governing and controlling the organization and regulation of trust companies;

"(d) By reason of its ownership of any stock in any bank now or hereafter organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan authorizing the business of banking and to establish a banking department for the supervision of such business, and any amendment

"thereto, and/or - - under any present or future law or laws of the State of Michigan governing and controlling the organization and regulation of banks."

(b) Thereafter said corporation was duly and legally admitted to do business within the State of Michigan on the 19th day of June, 1928.

(c) Pursuant to deposit authorization providing for deposit with the Union Trust Company as depositary of stock of the National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, Union Trust Company, and Union Company of Detroit, Union Commerce Company acquired a substantial portion of the capital stock of said National Bank of Commerce of Detroit and said Union Trust Company and Union Company of Detroit, and thereafter, to-wit, on or about May 21st, 1929, it acquired by subsequent purchase or transfers to it other shares of stock of said National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, Union Trust Company, and Union Company of Detroit, until it acquired in reality by exchange of its stock all of the shares of the capital stock of those three corporations, except certain shares which were left in the names of the directors and officers to qualify them.

(d) On or about October 31,1928, it entered into negotiations and ultimately acquired by exchange of its stock all of the shares of the Griswold First State Bank, a state bank existing under the laws of the State of Michigan.

(e) Thereafter pursuant to the meeting of the stockholders of the company, duly and legally held on January 29th,1929, the capital stock of said corporation was increased to $10,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, and authorization given to the board of directors to offer not exceeding 25,000 additional shares of said increase to the stockholders for subscription at the price of $300 per share, and thereafter the stockholders took up said stock, producing an additional sum of $7,500,000 of paid in capital of the corporation.

(f) From time to time other shares of stock were arranged to be sold and were sold to the stockholders. The purpose of these sales was to provide funds either to acquire more bank or trust company stock, or affiliates thereof, or to finance the obligations of units whose stock was owned by the holding company.

(g) On August 20th,1929, provision was made for the acquisition of Keane-Higbie & Company stock on the basis of an exchange of one share of Union Commerce Corporation stock for one share of Keane-Higbie & Company stock. Keane-Higbie & Company was a Michigan corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan, engaged in the business of selling stocks, bonds, and corporate securities. It was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan for pecuniary profit.

(h) About the same time the Union Commerce Corporation was engaged in negotiations with the Union State Bank of Dearborn, the Bank of Commerce of Dearborn, the Trenton State Bank of Trenton, Michigan, Jefferson Savings Bank, Grosse Pointe Park, Michigan, all corporations organized under the Michigan banking laws, and also Union Joint Stock Land Bank of Detroit, a Federal land bank agency.

(i) About Sept. 10th,1929, negotiations were commended for the merger of the Union Commerce Corp. with the Guardian Detroit Group, Inc.

(j) The plan of the merger between the Union Commerce Corp. and the Guardian Detroit Group, Inc. contemplated the declaration of a stock dividend of 20 per cent to be taken and paid by Guardian Detroit Company, Inc. to its then stockholders, the provision for the issuance of not to exceed 474,500 additional shares of Guardian Detroit Group, Inc. to carry out the commitments of the corporation with which it was then dealing, the delivery to Union Commerce Corporation of not to exceed 800,000 shares for the acquisition of sundry corporations then under negotiation by Union Commerce Corporation, which agreements had not then been fully consummated.

(k) On Dec. 16,1929, joint meetings of the stockholders of the Union Commerce Corporation and of the Guardian Detroit Group were held and the transaction completed whereby the Union Commerce Corporation executed a bill of sale, as shown by Exhibit 23, Volume 1, page 277, and all the assets of the Union Commerce Corporation pursuant thereto excepting only the sum of $100,000, delivered to Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, for which the Group corporation delivered to Union Commerce Corporation 733,695 shares of the capital stock of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, of the par value of $20 per share.

10. Thereafter in due course the Union Commerce Corporation took steps pursuant to which it was duly and legally dissolved, according to the laws of the State of Delaware, its debts paid, and a liquidating dividend declared by Union Commerce Corporation to all its stockholders at the rate of 5 cents per share in cash, and also a pro rata distribution and liquidation of 633,695 shares of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, to the then stockholders of Union Commerce Corporation, and 100,000 shares of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, to Keane-Higbie & Company in fulfillment of the agreement to acquire all of the shares of the capital stock of Keane-Higbie & Company.

11. Thereafter the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, in addition to the banks which it acquired outright, as hereinbefore set forth, acquired a minority interest in the following corporations:

Thompson Savings Bank of Hudson, Michigan,
State Savings Bank, Vestsburg, Michigan
State Savings Bank, Stanton, Michigan,
State Bank of Six Lakes, Six Lakes, Michigan
State Savings Bank of Reese, Michigan
State Savings Bank, Clinton, Michigan
Blanchard State Bank, Blanchard, Michigan

At the time of the sale of the assets of the Union Commerce Corporation to Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, which included amongst its assets certain of the shares of the National Bank of Commerce, a deposit agreement in pursuance of the plan of merger was executed by substantially all of the stockholders of the Union Commerce Corporation in the form of Exhibit No. 218, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof, and is the only form of deposit agreement signed by any of the stockholders of the Union Commerce Corporation.

12. It was the primary purpose of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, of the Guardian Detroit Group, Incorporated, and of the Union Commerce Corporation to hold the stocks and vote the same in state and national banks and trust companies in such a way as to avoid the destruction of the corporate units, and if and when either of them acquired an interest in another enterprise, whether acquired by exchange of its stock or by the sale of stock and the use of the proceeds, or the purchase thereof, the transaction was merely incidental to its principal plan of holding and controlling stock in the various state and national banks in the state of Michigan, and the evidence disclosed by the various minutes of the directors and stockholders, both as to the holding companies and the various units, shows that this primary plan or purpose of the holding company was executed for the purposes aforesaid.

13. The Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, was the holder of the legal title to all of the capital stock in the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, but it held the same for the real and beneficial use of those who held certificates of stock in the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, and the holders of these certificates of stock are the real and beneficial owners of the capital stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce.

14. The Union Commerce Corporation, the Guardian Detroit Group Incorporated, and the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, were chartered upon articles of association agreed to and subscribed by the principal officers and directors of the banking institutions and trust companies in which the holding companies were organized for the purpose of holding the stock, and these companies as were holding companies for the convenience, profit, and advantage of the shareholders in the various banks and trust companies were merely agents or trustees for the real and beneficial stockholders of the banks, whether state or national banks. The holding companies were not organized by the officers and holders of stock in the various banks for any fraudulent or illegal purposes, or with the intent to avoid or defeat the statutory liability for stock assessment. On the contrary, it was the manifest intention of the incorporators of these groups that their stockholders should be liable for the stock assessment, which their proportionate part of the stock assessment on the capital stock of the standing in the name of the Guardian Detroit Union Group Guardian National Bank of Commerce upon the theory that they are the real, true, and beneficial owners of the stock, and that the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, was merely acting as agent or trustee for the benefit of the real, true and beneficial owners, to-wit, the shareholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated.

A decree will accordingly be entered in conformity with these findings and conclusions.

The statutory liability against stockholders of banks and trust companies imposed by the state and federal law was designed to afford some additional protection to the depositors and creditors of such institutions. The real and beneficial owners of such stock can not defeat the provisions of these statutes by the creation of a so-called holding company, by transferring their stock to it. A court of equity should look through such devices and discover and hold accountable the real and beneficial owners of such stock.

The legal question here involved is novel. An appellate court has held that a stockholder can not escape the liability by the creation of a corporation to whom he transfers his stock for the purpose of avoiding the assessment. If this is law, then a shareholder, who conveys his stock to a holding corporation under an express agreement to remain liable for the assessment, in all conscience ought to make good that obligation.

Moreover, as a matter of sound public policy, a holding company of bank stock, whose chief functions and assets consist of such stockholding, should be declared a mere trustee for its shareholders who must respond to the statutory assessment.

The situation is simple if we could assume all the stockholders of Guardian National Bank of Commerce organized a holding corporation for the purpose of conveying their stock to it. Given a subsequent insolvency of the bank, I take it to be conceded, in such a case, the stockholders would be liable for the assessment. The same result should then follow if the holding company, under like conditions, obtains all the stock in several banks. The contention that its ownership of stock in other banks constitutes assets is more fiction than fact. If one of its units becomes insolvent, in practice the chain fails by the breaking of the link. Therefore, I conclude that a corporation for holding bank stock, under the conditions as shown here, is a mere agent or trustee for the real owners of bank stock, and that this device should not shield them from the statutory assessment.

should be enforced in the same manner as against stockholders in state or national banks, as the case might be, and the stockholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, by the acceptance of their certificates of stock, which referred upon the face of the certificate to Article X and incorporated the same in the back of the certificate, assented to the arrangement to be primarily liable to the bank for a stock assessment in the event one were levied in the proportion that his share of stock in the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, bore to the total amount of outstanding stock of the Group for any stock assessment on the Guardian National Bank of Commerce stock.

15. The Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, was the owner of all the stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, although it caused to be issued and permitted to remain in the name of the officers and directors of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce a sufficient amount of stock to qualify the directors and officers to act in their various capacities. [The arrangement by which this was accomplished was this: The directors surrendered a certain number of shares of their stock in the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, for the ostensible purpose of creating the earmarks of a sale, and thereupon caused to be issued to the directors ten shares of the capital stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce] but the director was required to execute an assignment to the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, of the ten shares of stock, as well as any dividends that might accrue thereon, and deposit the same together with the certificate with the depositary who had the irrevocable right to transfer this bankstock of stock if and when the director ceased to be a director, and to complete the circuitous journey the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, having cancelled the director's fifty shares of stock, issued a new certificate in his name and deposited this certificate in trust with the depositary so that it could be returned to the director if and when he ceased to be a director, but it entered into a solemn contract to pay the director the dividends on the fifty shares of stock in the same manner as if he had not surrendered his stock. But in fairness to the directors, I find that they were advised that this was legal, and that this advice was furnished by reputable members of the Bar in the City of Detroit. While some of the directors hesitated to take the oath required of directors, after being assured that the scheme was legal, they continued to act in the capacity of director. There is no evidence to show that the directors at any time acted for their own personal profit or advantage, or that they were actuated by any improper or fraudulent motives, but the evidence does show that the Guardian Detroit Union Group, incorporated, through its directors, virtually nominated and elected the directors in the various units, and that through this arrangement many things were done for the promotion of the general interests of the Group, which, in my opinion, would not have been done if the Group had not been in virtual control of the banks. While I recognize that there was a transfer of assets and shifting of credits for the benefit of some of the weaker units by the stronger units of the Group, yet it is merely problematical whether these things would not have been done if there had not been a holding group. In other words, there did prevail throughout the entire country a belief that the failure of a bank had a bad psychological effect upon other banks and would hasten runs thereon, with the consequent result that many banking institutions in utmost good faith extended credits which were not perfectly sound, but in the honest belief that it was for the ultimate best interests of their depositors and stockholders.

16. The shareholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, by filing their articles of incorporation as a public record in the office of the Secretary of State at Lansing and in the office of the Clerk of the County of Wayne at Detroit, Michigan, and by published statements, represented to the public that they were liable for the payment of any assessment that might be levied by state or national law upon any bank of the Group in the same manner as if they were the record holders of the banks' stocks. The depositors of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit relied upon such representations in making deposits in said bank and in keeping their deposits in said bank, and have been injured thereby, and said shareholders are now estopped to deny such liability.

17. The shareholders of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, exercised all the rights of shareholders of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit through their agency, the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, secured and retained for their own use and enrichment the advantages and benefits of shareholders of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, and used the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, as a mere instrumentality or agency by which their purpose to unify the control, operation and ownership of a large number of national and state banks in the State of Michigan and elsewhere could be carried out.

18. A voluntary petition for dissolution of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, was filed in the Circuit Court for the County of Wayne, on March 29th, 1933, and a temporary receiver appointed. Thereafter an order of dissolution was entered and a permanent receiver appointed. The liabilities of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, exceed the value of its assets.

19. At the request of the agent and representative of the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, on the 26th day of March, 1933, delivered to the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, through his agent and representative, a certified list of the stockholders of record of said Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, ~~in compliance with article II of the articles of association of said company~~.

20. There was issued and outstanding at the time of the failure of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit 1,544,088 shares of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, stock. The holders of said shares were the owners of 100,000 shares of the capital stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, less the shares in the names of the directors and officers, against whom the receiver is entitled to collect the assessment by virtue of the fact that they are the registered owners of said stock, and each of said so-called Group shareholders was the owner of the number of shares of Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit stock in the percentage and fraction that his holdings of said Group stock bore to the total number of said Group shares outstanding. Each share of said so-called Group stock outstanding represented the ownership of .06436± shares of Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit stock, and consequently the assessment levied by the Comptroller of the Currency upon the shareholders of Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit is equal to the sum of $6.4362 upon each share of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, stock outstanding.

21. At the time of the levy of said assessment and requisition of the Comptroller of the Currency, the plaintiffs and intervening petitioners were the owners of record of the number of shares of capital stock of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, set opposite their respective names on a schedule and a list hereto attached and marked Exhibit A, the proportionate part of said assessment against each of the plaintiffs and intervening petitioners being in the amount set opposite their respective names on said Exhibit A in the column thereof designated "Amount of assessment."

22. The obligation of the shareholder in Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated, referred to as Article IA never was signed by the shareholder or by any agent thereunto by him lawfully authorized.

23. The obligation by such shareholder was for the primary benefit of the depositors and creditors of the bank and not merely to indemnify the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Incorporated. The certificate of incorporation and the privilege to issue stock granted by the Michigan Securities Commission were granted upon the express condition of the assumption of this obligation by the stockholder for the benefit of the bank and to secure its creditors and depositors and this fact was made known by the Attorney General of the state, by the Banking Department, and by the Securities Commission to the officers and stockholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. so that the very issuance of the certificates of stock to entitle the holders thereof to participate in the dividends and profits to be derived by virtue of the investment in bank stock was conditioned upon his assumption of the stockholders' liability in the bank. His acceptance of the stock under such circumstances created a binding direct obligation on his part to the bank to pay his pro rata part of the assessment.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

1. The plaintiffs and intervening petitioners, as the holders of stock in the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. are not entitled to enjoin the receiver of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce from the collection of the stock assessment.

2. Being the real and beneficial owners of the stock, they are liable for the payment of the assessment in the proportion that the number of shares of stock held by them bear to the total outstanding shares of stock of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. on such of the stock assessment as could be levied by the receiver against the Guardian Detroit Union Group on account of its being the registered owner of the stock, the proportion being set forth in the findings of fact.

3. The acceptance by the plaintiffs and intervening petitioners of the shares of stock of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. with Article IX thereon constituted a binding obligation on the part of each holder of the shares of stock of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., to pay to the Guardian National Bank of Commerce their proportionate share of the stock assessment which was levied against that portion standing in the name of Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc.

4. Their promise is not one to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another and the statute of frauds has no application.

5. The plaintiffs and interveners, and the receiver, are alike bound by the finding of the Comptroller of the Currency as to the compliance with the law in regard to the incorporation and various consolidations of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, and no party to this suit can challenge in this cause the legality of the consolidations leading up to and culminating in the final consolidation of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit.

6. The receiver, by suing four of the directors who appeared of record as the stockholders of Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit, is not estopped thereby in this proceeding to show that the shareholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. are the real, true, and beneficial owners of the stock of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, nor in any wise estop the receiver in this suit from establishing the true relationship existing between the shareholders of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce.

7. Plaintiffs and intervening petitioners have represented to the depositors and creditors of the bank that they were liable and would pay said assessment, and credit having been extended to the bank by reason thereof, they are now estopped to deny said liability in this cause.

8. The receiver of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. had no beneficial interest in the recovery against these shareholders, since the corporation of which he is receiver was a mere agent or trustee for the real and beneficial owners of the stock, and the assessment liability, being primarily for the benefit of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, should be recovered by the receiver of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce in the same manner and to the same extent as if the real and beneficial owners of the stock had been the registered owners thereof, and the receiver, having been made a party to this suit by leave of the court of competent jurisdiction which appointed him, and having become such a party and filed an answer in this cause, is bound by the decree entered herein and cannot withdraw from the case or limit the effect of the decree entered herein.

9. The receiver of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit is entitled to recover of the plaintiffs and intervening petitioners

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM 1942

A. M. ANDERSON, RECEIVER OF NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY, OF LOUISVILLE, Petitioner,

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, ADMINISTRATRIX WITH THE WILL ANNEXED, OF THE ESTATE OF DAVID J. ABBOTT, DECEASED, ET AL.,

Respondents.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SIXTH CIRCUIT

To the Honorable the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

A. M. Anderson, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, of Louisville, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the decree, entered May 4, 1942, and the order denying petitioner's motion for a rehearing thereof, entered June 5, 1942, in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. The decree and order affirmed a judgment of the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, which finally dismissed petitioner's Bill of Complaint. The Bill sought to recover, from the respondents, for the benefit of the unpaid depositors of the insolvent National Bank of Kentucky, their proportionate part of the statutory individual liability amounting to Four Million Dollars, assessed against several thousand shareholders thereof by the Comptroller of the Currency.

SUMMARY STATEMENT

National Bank of Kentucky, located at Louisville, was the largest bank in the South. Its capital was four million dollars; deposits about forty million. It failed November 16, 1930; closed by voluntary resolution of its Board of Directors. The National Bank Examiners' reports, for three full years before its failure clearly indicated its eventual collapse unless a sound house-cleaning was put into effect. (Ex. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, pp. 224, 314, 407, 486, 572.)* Copies of these Bank Examiners' reports, two each year, were sent to the Bank as provided by law; so its failing condition was known to its officers, and should have been known by all its directors. (Ex. 31-1 to 33-25 inclusive, pp. 1275-1305.) The non-officer directors, however, disclaimed knowledge of the conditions; said they had complete confidence in James M. Brown, President; said they did not see the examiners' reports, and did not know of the Bank's failing condition.

Brown was the dominant figure. His authority was supreme and unquestioned. It is admitted that he knew the Bank's true condition. He was personally involved and seemed unable to furnish the sound financial leadership necessary to avert the inevitable failure. Instead, with full co-operation of the directors and stockholders, he resorted to grandiose financial schemes leading eventually to a large chain of banks operated through a bank-stock holding company, BancoKentucky Company.

In 1927, National Bank of Kentucky and a large State bank, Louisville Trust Company, were "unified"; substantially all the stock of both banks being transferred to trustees who issued Trustees Participation Certificates therefor. (Ex. 7, p. 115; Ex. 10, p. 152.) Thereafter these two banks were operated through identical Boards of Directors. (Ex. 77, p. 1753.) Extensive publicity attended this "unification" but publicity alone would not cure the financial ills of National Bank of Kentucky. The National Bank Examiners' criticisms continued and became more insistent. Large charge-offs were suggested. Deposits were shrinking. Serious difficulty was experienced in maintaining legal reserve requirements. Brown evolved one scheme after another to escape the crash. He tried to denationalize the Bank by consolidating it with Louisville Trust Company as a State Bank; thus to escape national supervision. (R. III, p. 20.) This failed because of four million dollars in "substandard" assets. (Ex. 54, pp. 1479, 1481.)

Finally, in June, 1929, while the Bank Examiners were in the bank making an examination Brown proposed the organization of a big bank stock holding company, Banco-Kentucky Company, with "twenty million" dollars capital; and upon the promise that the holding company would be promptly organized and would "acquire" and "work out" the Bank's criticized assets the "matter of charge-off was dropped" by the National Bank Examiners. (Ex. 17, p. 612.)

BancoKentucky Company, conceived to bolster up a failing National Bank, was incorporated on July 19, 1929, under the laws of Delaware. (R. II, p. 81.) It was authorized to issue two million shares at ten dollars each. Its prospectus, signed by the two banks and their identical Boards of Directors, was sent to each shareholder of the "unified" National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company. It stated that (Ex. 24-3, p. 1140.)

> "the two banks, and the business conducted by them, should be reorganized by adding to this group a third corporation, which will make the operation of these banking institutions more profitable, expand their facilities, and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections."

And provided that:

> "It is an essential part of this reorganization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks.

It was also a prerequisite part of the plan that Banco hold at least a majority of the Bank stock.

This prospectus offered the "entire capital stock" of BancoKentucky to the shareholders of the two banks; two shares for each Trustees' Participation Certificate and the remainder at twenty-five dollars per share. Substantially all the certificate holders made the exchange. (R. II, pp. 93, 97.) The plan was so arranged that no tax liability would be imposed on the exchange. The creation of the holding company was described as a "reorganization" (Ex. 24-3, p. 1140). It was "at once seen that the taxable gain would be very large" (Ex. 25, p. 1145) unless this was so, and the organizers took every step so that the exchange of bank stock for holding company stock would be "made to appear (so far as the bank stockholders are concerned) as a mere receipt of the same property in another form, and not as a closed transaction wherein they part with one species of property in exchange for an entirely different species of property." (Ex. 25-5, p. 1157.) The Court of Appeals held that an out and out exchange of assessable stock for non-assessable stock was made but the trading of bank stock for holding company stock simply cannot be a "reorganization" to escape taxes, and a sale, to escape assessment.

A great many certificate holders in addition to making the exchange, and in response to a regular promotion campaign put on by the banks and aided by loans made by the National Bank of Kentucky amounting to more than Five Million Dollars on the security of BancoKentucky stock, subscribed for additional shares. (Ex. 134-5, p. 1934.) Some subscriptions were accepted from non-certificate holders. Nearly ten million dollars in cash thus came into the treasury of BancoKentucky Company. Instead of utilizing this new money to clean up the National Bank of Kentucky, as promised to the Bank Examiners, it was paid out almost immediately to purchase the controlling stock in a number of other banks, some of which was paid for in cash and some in BancoKentucky stock. (R. II, pp. 1195-97.) Banco promoters represented to the stock exchange "it is the intention of the management to employ its cash for acquiring additional banks." (Ex. 74, p. 1723.)

The following pertinent facts about BancoKentucky Company appear in the record. It was incorporated in Delaware July 19, 1929. Its President and Secretary-Treasurer were President and Cashier respectively of National Bank of Kentucky. (Ex. 23, pp. 1063, 1099.) Its directorate and the unified banks' directorate were identical. (Ex. 23, pp. 1055, 1056.) It had no employees; paid no salaries or wages; had no office, office furniture or equipment. It did not even have a telephone. (R. II, pp. 102, 122, 280.) It had only three small record books: cash journal, ledger, and security record (Ex. 65, 65A, 65B, pp. 1496, 1575, 1621A), and these were all kept by and in the desk of the Cashier of the bank. (R. II, p. 282.) It did not have a correspondence file. It never even qualified to do business in Kentucky. Ky. Stat. Sec. 571. (R. II, pp. 102, 103.) It is significant that notwithstanding his annual oath to the contrary, as required by law (12 U. S. C. 73), not a single director of National Bank of Kentucky was a "good faith" owner of a single share of its stock.*

Banco began its actual business existence in October, 1929. It failed ingloriously in November, 1930, with no substantial assets except bank stocks; and most of these banks became insolvent at the same time. (Ex. 23, p. 1120; Ex. 179, p. 2099.) During the short period that it was in existence it acquired the following bank stocks through exchange of its stock and for cash:

Number of Bank Shares Held by Banco			Name of Bank	Percentage of Stock Held by Banco
38,000	out of	40,000	National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville	95%
16,625	"	17,500	Louisville Trust Co.	95%
47,854	"	60,000	Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co., Cinti., O.	80%
44,290	"	50,000	Brighton Bk. & Trust Co.	89%
548	"	600	Central Sav. Bk., Cov., Ky.	91%+
2,099	"	6,500	Peoples Liberty Bk. & Tr. Co., Covington, Ky.	32%+
6,925	"	7,500	First National Bank, Paducah, Ky.	92%+
7,125	"	8,000	Ashland National Bk., Ashland, Ky.	89%+
2,713	"	3,000	Security Bank, Louisville, Ky.	90%+
575	"	1,000	Mechanic's Tr. & Sav. Bk., Paducah, Ky.	58%—

The above bank stocks together with "an infinitesimal amount" (R. III, p. 167) of Insurance Stock and a concealed unauthorized note of the President Brown (infra, p. 7) were the entire portfolio of Banco.

* (R. II, p. 247; Exhibits 23, 92-95, 81-85, 90-2, 90-5, 90-7 to 90-12, 91, 94, pp. 1099, 1822-25, 1797-1801, 1809, 1812, 1814-1819, 1820, 1824.)

BancoKentucky Company, as its name significantly indicates, was a bank-stock holding company pure and simple. It was so listed on all the stock exchanges. (Ex. 98, p. 1829; Ex. 74, pp. 1717, 1723; Ex. 73, p. 1713; Ex. 71, p. 1695.) All the newspapers carried its market quotations under the heading of Bank stocks. (Ex. 26, pp. 1181, 1183, 1189.) The prospectus announced that Banco was organized after study of "the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business" and "in line with the trend of business and finance in this country" (Ex. 24-3, p. 1140). The "trend" was to organize holding companies. See "Hearings on Branch, Chain and Group Banking" under H. R. 141, 71st Cong., 2nd Sess. "At the end of June 1929 . . . there were in existence . . . 230 group systems in the United States which embraced about two thousand banks." (Vol. 1, Part 1, p. 43, Record of Hearings.)

During its whole existence it engaged in no business outside of acquiring and holding bank stocks except for these three simple transactions: It invested $25,000.00, less than 1/10 of 1% of its total assets (Ex. 76, p. 1739), in Union Central Life Insurance Company stock. It made an unauthorized personal loan to its President Brown. (R. II, p. 98.) The loan was concealed from the Directors of the Company. (R. II, pp. 63, 64.) At the last minute in a futile effort to save the bank it purchased some of the bank's worthless investments. (R. II, p. 97.) This last transaction, involving only one and a half per cent of its total assets, was never brought before the directors, and was rescinded by the courts after the collapse. BancoKentucky Company's Receiver v. National Bank of Kentucky's Receiver, 281 Ky. 784, 137 S. W. (2d) 357. A belated scheme to go into partnership with the insolvent Caldwell & Co., which controlled a chain of 66 banks (see table compiled from Federal Reserve Board data by Cartinhour—Branch Group and Chain Banking, p. 66; see also Ex. 103, p. 1840; Ex. 26, pp. 1207, 1212; R. II, pp. 105, 302), was never consummated. (R. I, p. 262.) It was an effort to avert failure; trying to make a good financial omelet out of two bad eggs.

National Bank of Kentucky paid dividends of $160,000.00 each quarter, equal to $16.00 per share per year on its capital stock, to BancoKentucky which distributed the exact amount to its shareholders on the very same day it was received from the bank. (R. II, p. 101.) From its organization until its failure, little more than a year, BancoKentucky's only income, except a small interest earning on deposit balances, was from dividends on bank stock. (R. II, p. 122.) During its existence it collected $1,180,858.50 dividends from its bank stocks and paid $1,253,513.00 to its stockholders. The money to pay the deficit was met by overdraft on the National Bank of Kentucky. (R. II, p. 122.)

National Bank of Kentucky failed November 17, 1930. One week later a petition for receiver was filed for Banco-Kentucky Company. (Ex. 66, p. 1676.) On February 20, 1931, the Comptroller of the Currency under Sections 64, 191, and 192 U. S. Code Title 12, then in effect made an assessment upon the shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky of four million dollars, and directed the Receiver to collect the same. (R. II, p. 76; Ex. 5, p. 6.) Shortly thereafter the Receiver notified the stockholders of Banco-Kentucky Company of his intention to proceed against them for the collection of said assessment to the extent that he was unable to collect the same from the Receiver of the BancoKentucky Company. (R. I, p. 70; R. II, p. 76.) The Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky was able to collect only a small part of said assessment from the Receiver of BancoKentucky Company because of its hopeless insolvency. (R. I, p. 71; R. II, p. 106.) It had no assets except bank stocks and these had become liabilities by the collapse. He therefore brought this suit against the stockholders residing in the Western District of Kentucky to recover from each their proportionate part of said assessment ($2.305 on a share of Banco, Ex. 120, p. 1871; R. II, p. 124). The depositors of the bank have received dividends to date of 77%. The assessment involved in this and kindred cases pending in other districts (D. C. Ala.; E. D. Kentucky; D. C. Mass.; E. D. Mich.; D. C. New York; S. D. Ohio; E. D. Pa.; M. D. Tenn.; S. D. Ind.; N. D. Ill.; D. C. Va.; D. C. W. Va.) would, if collected, provide a ten per cent additional dividend.

OPINIONS BELOW

The District Court for the Western District of Kentucky filed two opinions. An opinion overruling defendants' motion to dismiss was filed April 15, 1936, and is reported in 23 F. Supp. 265. (R. I, p. 144.) The opinion on the merits dismissing the Bill of Complaint was filed March 23, 1940, and is reported in 32 F. Supp. 328. (R. I, p. 288.) Similar suits were filed and are now pending against shareholders residing in other States. A motion to dismiss the Bill of Complaint filed in the Northern District of Illinois was denied by the District Court of that State in an opinion filed February 14, 1938. Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853.

On May 4, 1942, the Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, affirmed the judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. This opinion is reported at 127 F. (2d) 696. (R. III, p. 312.) The petitioner's application for rehearing (R. III, p. 327) was denied on June 5, 1942, without written opinion. (R. III, p. 355.)

JURISDICTION

Jurisdiction is conferred on this Court to review this cause by writ of certiorari by Section 240a of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925. (United States Code, Title 28, Section 347.) On August 26, 1942, an order was entered in this Court extending the time for the filing of this petition for writ of certiorari until November 1, 1942. (R. III, p. 357.)

THE QUESTION PRESENTED

The legal question presented here is: Are the owners of an insolvent national bank relieved from individual liability or "double assessment," under the then existing Federal statute because, shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares?

Contrary to a long list of Federal and State Supreme Court decisions, none contra, the Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, affirming the District Court, held that the owners were not liable notwithstanding the fact that after the exchange the same shareholders using the holding company as an instrumentality

(1) continued in the management, operation, and control of the bank through the same officers and an identical Board of Directors, and

(2) continued to receive the dividends declared by the bank in exactly the same amount and on the very same day.

This Court has never passed directly on the question presented by this petition. It did, however, deny certiorari in the Detroit Bank-Stock Holding Company cases, where the holding company shareholders were held liable, on a factual situation strikingly parallel if not exactly identical to this case. Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510, cert. den. 300 U. S. 670 (1937); Ullrich v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 678 (1936), cert. den., 301 U. S. 692 (1937).

The underlying problems presented by this case are not confined to banking or to stock assessment. The case squarely presents the question whether the holding company can be used to limit or circumvent the protection afforded to the general public by statutes enacted by Congress.

REASONS RELIED ON FOR ALLOWANCE OF WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The specific matter presents an important question of Federal law which has not been heretofore directly determined by this Court, and should now be determined.

The matters and issues involved are of general public interest and come within the class of cases indicated by the Rules to be appropriate for review.

It is also submitted that the case presents matters of substantial public interest to the community of Louisville, in that it vitally affects the welfare of thousands of depositors of National Bank of Kentucky to the extent of potential dividends in the amount of nearly Four Million Dollars. While it is recognized that the amount involved does not of itself constitute a valid ground for review it is submitted that the interest of thousands of depositors in the outcome presents more the aspects of public welfare than private or individual controversy.

Cases involving numerous defendant stockholders are pending in district courts in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 7th Circuits. The present decision is not binding on any of those courts. In order that an authoritative decision may be rendered which will control all of the pending cases and thereby avoid the possibility of conflict, this case should be reviewed.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, holding that the owners of a failing national bank can organize a holding corporation such as BancoKentucky, acquire virtually all the capital stock by exchange of its stock for bank stock, continue to control the bank and get all its profits and dividends and, at the same time, shake off a statutory double liability, is in conflict with the decisions of this Court holding that corporate identity must be disregarded when the corporation becomes an instrument to circumvent and avoid the effect of a statute. Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197; United States v. Lehigh Valley Railway Co., 220 U. S. 257; United States v. Delaware L. & W. Railway Co., 238 U. S. 516; C. M. & St. P. Railway Co. v. Minneapolis Civic & Commerce Association, 247 U. S. 490. The Trustees Participation Certificates were held under an agreement incorporated therein that "each owner shall be subject to the same liability thereon as he would have been subject to in case he had been the owner of record" of his proportion of bank stock. (Ex. 7, pp. 8, 28, 29.) Having avoided tax liability on the exchange of Trust Certificate for holding company certificate, supra, p. 4, because the same property was retained and having contracted to pay the assessment in addition to assuming statutory liability, it would appear evident that the transformation of the form of their certificates should not have relieved the defendants from liability.

The importance of the case is not lessened by the fact that the individual or double liability statute has since been limited, 12 U. S. C. 64a. Such a liability still remains on Federal Farm Loan Banks, 12 U. S. C. 872. The Circuit Court of Appeals (2d Circuit) has held that shareholders of such banks do not "evade their statutory stockholders' liability by organizing a corporation and transferring their shares for the holding company's shares." Brusselback v. Cago Corp., 85 F. (2d) 20, cert. den. 299 U. S. 586. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case would, on principle, permit the bank to make loans upon the sole security of the holding company stock, in violation of the statute forbidding the bank to loan upon the security of its own shares, 12 U. S. C. 83. It would permit a bank stock holding company to carry on branch and chain banking in violation of the entire spirit of the National Bank Act, 12 U. S. C. 36. It would permit interlocking directorates in violation of 15 U. S. C. 19. It would permit the shareholders to use the bank funds through the holding company to engage in many business enterprises which banks are forbidden to do. It would create additional problems of the examination and regulation of the subsidiary and parent corporation—a problem already presented to the lower courts in a controversy between a bank holding company and the Securities and Exchange Commission. Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Savings Association v. Douglas et al., 105 F. (2d) 100 (C. C. A.—Dist. Col.). The problem of the bank holding company and its effect on stock assessment is recognized as a vital one by text writers on the subject. Cartinhour—Branch Group and Chain Banking, p. 245; Bonbright and Means —The Holding Company, pp. 319, 330.

The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is in direct conflict with a long line of federal and state court decisions which have uniformly ruled that the real owners of a national bank, that is, those who run the bank and get the dividends and profits, are liable for an assessment whether the stock stands in their names or not; and that such real owners cannot escape this liability by interposing a holding corporation as a shield to protect them from such liability. Corker v. Soper, 53 F. (2d) 190, cert. den., 285 U. S. 540 (1931); Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 F. (2d) 263 (1935); Harris Investment Company v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936); Fors v. Farrell, 271 Mich. 358, 260 N. W. 886 (1935); Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42 (C. C. The leading case, holding that the stockholders of a bank stock holding company are liable for an assessment on the bank, arose out of the Detroit bank failures, where two great bank stock holding companies, Detroit Bankers Company and Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., dominated nearly all the banks in Michigan. The stockholders of these two great holding companies were held liable for the assessments ($35,000,000) levied on the banks by the United States District Court, 7 F. Supp. 271, by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 86 F. (2d) 510, 86 F. (2d) 678, and in which cases this Court twice denied certiorari, 300 U. S. 670, 301 U. S. 692. The decision in this case has been cited frequently with approval. Adams v. Nagle, 303 U. S. 532 (1938); Munro v. Post, 102 F. (2d) 686 (C. C. A. 2, 1939); Erickson v. Richardson, 86 F. (2d) 305 (1939); Smith v. Witherow, 102 F. (2d) 638 (C. C. A. 3, 1939); Geber v. Gossweyler, 18 F. Supp. 925 (D. C. N. Y., 1937); Powell v. Malone, 22 F. Supp. 300 (D. C. N. Car., 1938); Staudenmaier v. Johnson, 30 F. Supp. 341 (D. C. Wis., 1939). See also: Church v. Hubbard, 91 F. (2d) 406 (C. C. A. 6, 1936); Moss v. Furlong, 93 F. (2d) 182 (C. C. A. 6, 1937); Comm. of Internal Revenue v. Carey-Reed Co., 101 F. (2d) 602 (C. C. A. 6, 1939). It has been favorably commented on in numerous law review articles. The opinion is reprinted in Dodd and Baker's "Cases On Business Organization," used as a textbook at Harvard Law School.

The importance of this case is not affected by the fact that the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky also undertook to collect the assessment from Banco-Kentucky Company. BancoKentucky was the record owner of the bank stock. It is sought in this case to establish that the stockholders of Banco were in fact the real and beneficial owners. The Receiver's suit against Banco was for the benefit of Banco's stockholders and the amount recovered by the Receiver was credited to them. (R. I, p. 178.) Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42; Continental Nat. Bank and Trust Co. v. O'Neil, 82 F. (2d) 650; Ericson v. Slomer, 94 F. (2d) 437.

The liability of the Banco stockholders is not affected by the fact that they wrote into their Articles of Incorporation a section exempting their personal property from liability, and wrote on their certificates of stock that it was "fully paid and non-assessable." The real and beneficial owner cannot evade the liability in this manner.

This court will note the extent to which the same question presented here was before this Court in the suit brought by the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky against the Directors of that bank for losses due to their alleged negligence and statutory violations of duty. One of the claims of the Receiver in that case was that the directors had violated Section 83 of Title 12 of the United States Code, which provides that no national bank may make loans upon the security of its own capital stock. The loans in question were loans upon the security of BancoKentucky stock. The District Court held that loans made by the National Bank of Kentucky upon the security of BancoKentucky stock "was, in truth and in fact, making loans on the security of the shares of its own capital stock in violation of this statute." Anderson v. Akers, 7 F. Supp. 924, 951. The Court said:

> "The Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky caused to be organized this holding company, to which was given the suggestive name of BancoKentucky Company, which was, indeed, intended to be, and was, in many important respects and in a very real sense, as the record abundantly shows, the National Bank of Kentucky." Anderson v. Akers, 7 F. Supp. 924, 950.

The District Court opinion referred to above was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, Atherton v. Anderson, 86 F. (2d) 518. This Court granted certiorari, 300 U. S. 652, and upon a partial hearing and without a full review, remanded the case for reconsideration by the Circuit Court of Appeals as to the question of common law negligence, a point not decided below, 302 U. S. 643 (1937). The Circuit Court of Appeals, upon rehearing, decided against the directors on the question of negligence, awarded the Receiver a very large judgment, but adhered to its former opinion with relation to the loans made on the security of BancoKentucky stock, 99 F. (2d) 883. The case was then settled and the question of the directors' liability, arising from loans made upon the security of BancoKentucky stock and arising out of the relationship and identity of the bank and holding company stock, thus escaped decision by this Court. However, the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Directors' Suit, which through settlement was not reviewed by this Court, is cited by the Circuit Court of Appeals as the principal authority for the decision in this case.

Since all the facts pertinent to the determination of this case by the Circuit Court of Appeals were undisputed written records, or were the subject of findings, the determination of this case presents only the question of law.

For all the foregoing reasons, it is respectfully submitted that this petition should be granted.

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

OPINIONS BELOW

Opinions below have been referred to in the petition for writ of certiorari under this same caption.

JURISDICTION

The statement as to jurisdiction has been set forth in the petition.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The facts have been stated in the petition.

SPECIFICATIONS OF ERROR

1. The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in affirming the decision of the District Court.

2. The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in holding that the respondents could shield themselves behind the corporate entity of BancoKentucky and avoid stock assessment in this matter.

ARGUMENT

The idea of a bank-stock holding company originated, or at least assumed serious proportions, in the high finance days of 1911. It was then proposed in New York to form a giant bank-stock holding company to buy up, through exchange of holding company shares for bank shares, a great many banks, national and state, throughout the nation. Had the effort received governmental sanction, and succeeded, a few great holding companies might soon have controlled all the banks in the United States. The President saw the danger and called upon the Solicitor General for an opinion on the matter. In the opinion, Solicitor General Lehmann said:

"If many enterprises and many banks are brought and bound together in the nexus of a great holding corporation, the failure of one may involve all in a common disaster."

And he concluded that a holding company

"in its holdings of National Bank stock is in usurpation of Federal authority and in violation of the Federal law." Congressional Record, May 10, 1932, page 102-12.

What the Solicitor General prophesied came true at Louisville with its BancoKentucky; in Michigan with its Detroit Bankers Company and its Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. Fortunately for the nation, it did not happen in the northwest with its Northwest Bank Corporation, or in the far west with its giant Bank America Corporation.

Banco, just like Detroit Bankers and Guardian Detroit Group, was a promotion by the owners of the bank. It was promoted, not to let them go out of the banking business, but to continue and enlarge their investment therein, and increase their opportunity to profit thereby. They "distinctly provided" in the articles of incorporation of Banco and on its certificates of stock that it was "fully paid and non-assessable." What did they intend by this except to escape the assessment liability? The answer to the question will be found in the letter of Bean, President of the Trust Company, to Brown, President of the bank, written July 26, 1929 (Ex. 27, p. 1262), which states:

"Does the 'double liability' apply to BancoKentucky Company stock as it does to stock in the banks? NO; one of the advantages of transferring your bank stock for BancoKentucky Company stock is that you are relieved of the double liability clause which applies under the Kentucky law."

This court has consistently held that:

> ". . . they (owners of national bank stock) cannot enjoy the benefits accruing to shareholders and escape liability for the contracts, debts and engagements of the bank." (Parenthetical addition ours.) Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 229.

The decisions from the earliest cases involving stock assessment liability adhere to and extend the principle that technicalities and subterfuges will be disregarded to discover the real, true and beneficial owners of the shares of the insolvent bank in order that such owners may be held liable to assessment.

> "As to such owners (real owners) the law looks through subterfuges and apparent ownership and fastens the liability upon the shareholders to whom the shares really belong." (Parenthetical addition ours.) Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, Receiver, 204 U. S. 162, 168.

The transferor has been held to be liable as actual owner where transfer of stock was made to a financially irresponsible person for the purpose of evading assessment and where the transferor continued to be the true owner. National Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628 (1878). The same rule was followed in Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251 (1882), amplified in Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1 (1897); McDonald v. Dewey, 202 U. S. 510 (1906); Pauly v. State Loan, 165 U. S. 606 (1897); Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162 (1907).

Where the stock was transferred to a minor child who could not respond to assessment, this Court has held the transferor liable. Early v. Richardson, 280 U. S. 496 (1930).

In cases where the stock was transferred to a trustee for the purpose of taking advantage of the statute which provides that the trustee shall only be liable to the extent of trust assets in his possession, 12 U. S. C. 66, it was held that the beneficial and real owner would be liable. English v. Gamble, 26 F. (2d) 28 (C. C. A. 8, 1928); O'Keefe v. Pearson, 73 F. (2d) 673 (C. C. A. 1, 1934); Schlener v. Davis, 75 F. (2d) 371 (C. C. A. 5, 1935).

A state court decision which sums up the law is Fors v. Farrell, 271 Mich. 358, 260 N. W. 886 (1935):

> "That neither an individual nor a corporation can, through a trust arrangement, or by other indirect means or circumlocution, possess as an owner and enjoy the beneficial interest in bank stock without assuming the contingent liability of a stockholder's assessment imposed by law. To hold otherwise would be to nullify the protection given the bank creditors by the statute imposing double liability." (P. 891.)

In more recent cases involving the use of a holding corporation as a bulwark against stock assessment, the courts have constantly held that the shareholders of the holding company are liable for assessment. Corker v. Soper, 53 F. (2d) 190 (C. C. A. 5, 1931); Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 F. (2d) 263 (C. C. A. 8, 1935). The corporate fiction of the holding company was disregarded. Durrance v. Collier, 81 F. (2d) 4 (C. C. A. 5, 1936); Fors v. Farrell, supra; Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936); Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937); Brusselback v. Cago Corp., 85 F. (2d) 20 (Cert. denied, 299 U. S. 586); Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42; Hansen v. Agnew, 195 Wash. 354, 80 P. (2d) 845.

The Supreme Court of Michigan has said:

> "In a proceeding to enforce stockholders' liability, it is of little or no importance as to how many paper ownerships or holdings in trust may intervene between the bank that issued the stock and the ultimate or actual owner thereof. The beneficial owner is liable for stock assessment. . . . Surely it was never intended that this wholesome statutory provision (for double assessment) should be nullified by resort to indirect corporate holdings of such stock."

". . . its corporate structure cannot be used as a shield behind which an actual and beneficial owner of such stock may escape the statutory liability to insolvent bank's creditors." Fors v. Farrell, supra. (Pp. 889, 890.)

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has held shareholders of a holding company liable for an assessment levied on one of the subsidiary banks and in that case this Court has denied certiorari. Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510 (Cert. denied, 300 U. S. 670); Ullrich v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 678 (Cert. denied, 301 U. S. 692). The corporate entity will be disregarded when necessary to avoid a fraud or to prevent an evasion of a statute. Wormser, "The Disregard of Corporate Fiction," pp. 36, 44, 51, 59.

This rule has been followed by this Court when to give sanctity to the corporate entity would result in circumventing a statute enacted for the protection afforded to the public by statute. Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197; United States v. Lehigh Valley Railway Co., 220 U. S. 257; United States v. Delaware L. & W. Railway Co., 238 U. S. 516.

In C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, 247 U. S. 490 (at 501), this Court said:

". . . the courts will not permit themselves to be blinded or deceived by mere forms of law, but, regardless of fictions, will deal with the substance of the transaction involved as if the corporate agency did not exist and as the justice of the case may require."

COURT OF APPEALS OPINION

The opinion of the Court of Appeals is analyzed in detail in the "Petition for Rehearing" found in the Record, Volume 3, page 327.

The Court of Appeals correctly concluded that the trust certificates, for which the bank stock was exchanged in the so-called "unification" of National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company in 1927, was "the equivalent of bank stock" and that the holders thereof were "the real, beneficial shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky." It based this conclusion upon the fact that the owners of the bank stock "carefully provided" that they should continue to be liable for any assessment. The Court then concludes that since they made no such careful provision for liability when they exchanged for Banco-Kentucky stock, they had, therefore, successfully evaded the statutory liability, and particularly so because they wrote a non-assessment section in the Articles of Incorporation and carried it on the stock certificates. It is submitted that a bank stockholder cannot so easily excuse himself from liability. The only transfer of bank stock which releases the shareholder from this statutory liability is an "out and out" transfer, whereby the shareholder completely severs himself from his stock interest in the bank and completely divests himself of his opportunity of having a voice in its control, or the receipt of any of its earnings. This Court long ago said in National Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628 (632, 633):

> "It is not every transfer that releases a stockholder from his responsibility as such. . . . (Liability continues if) the 'privileges and possible benefits of ownership continue.'" (Parenthetical insertion ours.)

Notwithstanding the fact that the bank examiners' reports for three full years had indicated that the bank was in financial straits, the appellate court said that "no probability of assessment" appeared when bank shares were exchanged for Banco shares. Liability does not depend upon pending insolvency. It arises by virtue of statute and depends upon ownership. The owner is the one who enjoys the "privileges and possible benefits" of the bank. National Bank v. Case, supra. What privilege or benefit did the owners of National Bank of Kentucky give up when they exchanged for Banco shares? In the words of their own lawyer, they kept "the same property in another form." Louisville Trust Company said it "was in its essence a mere continuation and retention of the ownership of Trustees Participation shares," which were conceded to be the equivalent of bank stock. Exhibit 122, pages 1886, 1887, 1890. See also Exhibit 123, p. 1896.

The Court of Appeals concluded that BancoKentucky was not organized for the primary purpose of escaping double liability. It is not necessary to quarrel with this conclusion. BancoKentucky was promoted by the owners of the bank to enable them to continue in the banking business, not for the purpose of getting out of the banking business. As an incident, they provided as best they could that the Banco shares should not be assessable and by the language of their charter and the words on their stock certificates, as evidenced by Bean's letter to Brown, infra, page 18, they knew very well that they were attempting to escape this liability.

The Court of Appeals, in its opinion, makes a great deal out of the fact that three million dollars of the cash raised by Banco was not invested in bank stocks. This statement is completely answered by the fact that five million dollars of Banco's cash assets came out of the National Bank of Kentucky upon loans made solely upon the security of Banco stock and that over two million of said amount was lost by the National Bank of Kentucky. And in any event, the three million dollars was not "invested" by Banco. Twenty-five thousand dollars was invested in Union Central Life Insurance Company stock. Brown took two million dollars of the invested three million dollars without asking anybody about it, substituted his note therefor and no one knew that Banco had Brown's note until after the failure. The remainder of the "invested" three million dollars went to lift worthless assets out of the National Bank of Kentucky on the eve of its failure. This transaction was rescinded by the courts. The Caldwell deal was never consummated. Therefore, it is undisputed in the record that all of BancoKentucky's cash was invested in bank stocks except the twenty-five thousand dollars in Union Central shares.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, therefore, it is submitted that the Record undisputably shows that BancoKentucky Company was organized to support a failing national bank; organized by its owners in order that they might continue in the banking business on a grander scale; and organized for the purpose of holding double liability bank stocks. Its doing business in Kentucky was unlawful because it never qualified to do business there. (Ky. Stat. 571.) Its ownership of all the stock of Louisville Trust Company and several other Kentucky state banks was expressly forbidden by Kentucky law. (Ky. Stat. 581, 609.) Except for a few days in October, 1929, when it first started business, all of its assets were in bank stocks and it never thereafter had any assets with which to pay an assessment upon these bank stocks. It was never anything more than a corporate instrumentality of the shareholders in order that they might continue in the banking business, get all possible benefits therefrom and at the same time escape a statutory assessment in the event that one should be levied.

APPENDIX

COPY OF STATUTES INVOLVED—ALL FROM UNITED STATES CODE, TITLE 12, BANKS & BANKING

§ 64. Individual liability of shareholders; transfer of shares.

The stockholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, each to the amount of his stock therein, at the par value thereof in addition to the amount invested in such stock. The stockholders in any national banking association who shall have transferred their shares or registered the transfer thereof within sixty days next before the date of the failure of such association to meet its obligations, or with knowledge of such impending failure, shall be liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee fails to meet such liability; but this provision shall not be construed to affect in any way any recourse which such shareholders might otherwise have against those in whose names such shares are registered at the time of such failure. (Dec. 23, 1913, c. 6, § 23, 38 Stat. 273.)

§ 191. General grounds for appointment of receiver.

Whenever any national banking association shall be dissolved and its rights, privileges, and franchises declared forfeited, as prescribed in section 93, or whenever any creditor of any national banking association shall have obtained a judgment against it in any court of record, and made application, accompanied by a certificate from the clerk of the court stating that such judgment has been rendered and has remained unpaid for the space of thirty days, or whenever the comptroller shall become satisfied of the insolvency of a national banking association, he may, after due examination of its affairs, in either case, appoint a receiver who shall proceed to close up such association, and enforce the personal liability of the shareholders, as provided in section 192. (June 30, 1876, c. 156, § 1, 19 Stat. 63.)

§ 192. Default in payment of circulating notes.

On becoming satisfied, as specified in sections 131 and 132 of this title, that any association has refused to pay its circulating notes as therein mentioned, and is in default, the Comptroller of the Currency may forthwith appoint a receiver, and require of him such bond and security as he deems proper. Such receiver, under the direction of the comptroller, shall take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of such association, collect all debts, dues, and claims belonging to it, and, upon the order of a court of record of competent jurisdiction, may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and, on a like order, may sell all the real and personal property of such association, on such terms as the court shall direct; and may, if necessary to pay the debts of such association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders. Such receiver shall pay over all money so made to the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the comptroller, and also make report to the comptroller of all his acts and proceedings.

PROVIDED, That the comptroller may, if he deems proper, deposit any of the money so made in any regular Government depositary, or in any State or national bank either of the city or town in which the insolvent bank was located, or of a city or town as adjacent thereto as practicable; if such deposit is made he shall require the depositary to deposit United States bonds or other satisfactory securities with the Treasurer of the United States for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the money so deposited:

PROVIDED, That no security in the form of deposit of United States bonds, or otherwise, shall be required in the case of such parts of the deposits as are insured under section 264 of this title. Such depositary shall pay upon such money interest at such rate as the comptroller may prescribe, not less, however, than 2 per centum per annum upon the average monthly amount of such deposits. (R. S. § 5234; May 15, 1916, c. 121, 39 Stat. 121; Aug. 23, 1935, c. 614, § 339, 49 Stat. 721.)

No. 497

A. M. ANDERSON, RECEIVER OF NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY, OF LOUISVILLE, Petitioner,

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, ADMINISTRATRIX WITH THE WILL ANNEXED, OF THE ESTATE OF DAVID J. ABBOTT, DECEASED, ET AL.,

Respondents.

REPLY BRIEF

Respondents in their brief do not challenge, in any respect, the accuracy of petitioner's "Summary Statement." (See petition, pp. 2-8.) They do not claim that petitioner has unfairly stated "The Question Presented." (See petition, pp. 9, 10.) They do not contradict our statement that this Court has never directly passed on the question and their argument is not addressed to the question, which is:

> "Are the owners of an insolvent national bank relieved from individual liability or 'double assessment,' under the then existing Federal statute because, shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares?"

They do, however, set forth, unsupported by record references, except in one instance, their own so-called "Summary Statement of Facts." This statement makes no pretense of being complete. It omits all reference to many of the crucial undisputed facts. It redounds with irrelevant and misleading statements and erroneous conclusions not justified on the record,—a record, by the way, almost exclusively documentary and indisputable.

They say (respondent's brief, p. 1) that the National Bank of Kentucky had "an honorable career." Irrelevant though this statement is, we challenge it. [See Bank Examiners' Reports, R. 1275 to 1305; and the history of the Kentucky Jockey Club and Wakefield loans, and Kentucky Wagon overdrafts in the suits against directors for neglect and misfeasance; Anderson v. Akers, 7 F. Supp. 924; Atherton v. Anderson, 86 F. (2d) 518, cert. granted, 300 U. S. 652, and upon rehearing, 99 F. (2d) 883; see also the fraud and rescission suit, BancoKentucky Receiver v. National Bank Receiver, 281 Ky. 784, 137 S. W. (2d) 357; also observe record fact that dividends of only seventy-seven (77%) per cent have been paid to depositors.]

They stress (p. 2) the "declared" purposes of Banco-Kentucky, and make no reference whatever to the real purposes of Banco. They do this to create the impression that Banco was a great general business corporation and that its holding of bank stocks was an incidental part of its "declared" purposes. They try to augment this impression by saying (p. 3) that Banco "acquired various assets." It did not "acquire various assets." It acquired assessable bank stock. Banco was not a general business corporation. It was nothing but a holding company for bank stocks (see petitioner's unchallenged summary statement with record references, petition, pp. 2 to 8, particularly pp. 6 and 7).

Respondents argue (p. 3) that because the stockholders and directors increased their investment when Banco was formed, in an amount beyond what their assessment would then have been, no liability exists. With this added investment they acquired an added interest in a whole chain of banks. To use their own words (Ex. 24-3, p. 1140) they made the added investment in order to get "new and profitable financial opportunities and connections." This correspondingly increased their contingent assessment liability. They also state on page 3 that over nine million dollars of new money was paid into Banco. They omit to state that over five million dollars of this amount came out of National Bank of Kentucky on loans made on the sole security of Banco stock and that over two million dollars of this amount was lost by the bank. They omit to state the significant fact that substantially all of this money went immediately to acquire other bank stocks.

In the first paragraph (p. 4) respondents seek to create the impression that the stock market crash of October, 1929, the depression which followed, and the Caldwell deal of 1930, coupled with "some unfavorable newspaper publicity" caused withdrawals and closed the bank. This is not correct. The Bank Examiners' reports for years had pointed out the precarious condition of the bank with reference to long-standing loans and overdrafts. These loans and overdrafts caused the bank's failure. The stock market crash had nothing to do with it. The Caldwell deal was never even consummated. The directors of the bank claimed that they never read the Bank Examiners' reports. If this be true their neglect of duty had a lot to do with the bank's failure. In any event this is all irrelevant because the statutory assessment liability is not conditioned upon what caused the bank's failure.

Respondents at page 6 state the issue in this case as follows:

> "Whether the BancoKentucky Company was organized and carried on in good faith for the purposes declared in its charter and was not a mere holding company nor organized as an agency of its stockholders or for the purpose of shielding its stockholders from the double liability imposed by the Bank Act."

The facts are undisputed. Though Banco was authorized in its corporate charter to engage in all kinds of business it never engaged in any such business. The only business it engaged in was the acquisition of assessable bank shares. It was the merest shell of a corporation. Its officers were the bank officers (Ex. 23, pp. 1063-1099). Its directorate was the bank directorate (Ex. 23, pp. 1055-1056). It had no office employees and only three record books. (See petition for certiorari, p. 6.) It was "a mere holding company" and nothing else. One of its purposes was "shielding its stockholders from the double liability imposed by the Bank Act." Otherwise, why stamp the stock certificates "fully paid and non-assessable" and insert in the Articles of Incorporation a provision that the stockholders should not be liable for such an assessment? That this was intentional is evidenced by the letter of the President of the bank. (See petition, p. 18, for quotation printed in full, Ex. 27, p. 1262.) It is urged at page 9 of the respondent's brief that:

> "On two other occasions the petitioner obtained an adjudication that the BancoKentucky Company was the real and beneficial owner of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky."

This is an argument to the effect that since the petitioner recovered a judgment from Banco he is precluded from doing so here; in other words, that the petitioner has made an election. Banco was the record owner of the bank stock. The respondents are the real or beneficial owners. This defense was disposed of by two different District Courts in favor of the petitioner: Anderson v. Abbott, 23 F. Supp. 265; Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853. From neither of these decisions did the respondents appeal. When the assessment was levied the Receiver, for the benefit of the respondents, undertook to collect as much of the assessment out of the meager assets of BancoKentucky as possible, on the theory that it was the record owner of the bank stock. But before doing so he wrote to each and every one of the respondents the following letter and sent it out by registered mail:

"Office of The Receiver
THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY
Louisville, Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., March 20, 1931

As a stockholder in The BancoKentucky Company, you will please take notice, that the Comptroller of the Currency has on February 20, 1931, levied an assessment upon the stockholders of The National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville, Ky., on the par value of each and every share, payable at the Office of the Receiver, on or before April 1, 1931. A notice of such assessment and a demand for payment of the same has been served upon the receiver of the BancoKentucky Company as the holder of 540,484 trustees' participation certificates, issued under a certain trust agreement of April 22, 1927, which trustees' participation certificates represent the ownership of 37,721.624 shares of stock in The National Bank of Kentucky. You will, therefore, take notice that it is the intention of the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, to proceed against you for the collection of the aforesaid assessment liability represented by the said trustees' participation certificates held by said BancoKentucky Company, to the extent that the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, is unable to collect said assessment from The Banco-Kentucky Company or its receiver.

PAUL C. KEYES,
Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky
Louisville, Kentucky

Registered Letter
Return Receipt Requested" (R. I, p. 70.)

Thus, from the outset, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Receiver considered both the holding company and its shareholders liable for the assessment, the one as the record holder, the other as the actual or beneficial owner. In this the Comptroller and Receiver were supported by plenty of authority: Metropolitan Holding Company v. Snyder, 79 Fed. (2d) 263 (C. C. A. 8, 1935); Corker v. Soper, 53 Fed. (2d) 190 (C. C. A. 5, 1931), cert. denied, 285 U. S. 540 (1932); Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936); Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937); Nettles v. Rhett, 94 Fed. (2d) 42 (C. C. A. 4, 1938); Flanagan v. Madison Square State Bank, 302 Ill. App. 468, 24 N. E. (2d) 202 (1939); Galinski v. Adler, 302 Ill. App. 474, 24 N. E. (2d) 205 (1939).

Respondents' argument is predicated on their failure to recognize that both the holding company and its shareholders are liable and that the liability is not in the alternative. Where both are liable suit and judgment against one, in the absence of satisfaction, does not affect the right to proceed against the other. Respondents' whole contention is well answered in Ericson v. Slomer, 94 Fed. (2d) 437 (C. C. A. 7, 1938):

"It is our conclusion that the receiver of a national bank has a right to proceed against both the record and actual owner of the shares of stock in an attempt to collect the liability thereupon imposed. It seems both logical and reasonable that such procedure should be permissible. Under well-established law, both are liable. As to who shall carry the burden as between them is a matter with which we are not here concerned. Why should the receiver, at his peril, be required to select the one against whom he is to proceed and why should a proceeding against one be a bar to a proceeding against the other? He should not be so required and neither should either of the parties whom the law makes liable be permitted to shield himself from such liability by asserting an unsatisfied judgment has been obtained against the other. To hold otherwise is to lay down the bars so that fraud may be committed upon the creditors of the bank. There can be required only one satisfaction of the stock liability. A judgment against either and a satisfaction, of course, would constitute a bar to a judgment against the other. A partial satisfaction would constitute a bar pro tanto." [94 Fed. (2d) 437, 441.]

For reasons set forth here and in the petition for writ of certiorari it is respectfully submitted that the petition should be granted.

BRIEF FOR PETITIONER

OPINIONS BELOW

The District Court filed two opinions, one overruling defendants' motion to dismiss reported in 23 F. Supp. 265. This opinion is in the Record, Vol. 1, p. 144. The second opinion of the District Court, dismissing the Bill of Complaint on the merits, was filed March 23, 1940, and is reported in 32 F. Supp. 328, and will be found in the Record, Vol. 1, p. 288. Similar suits were filed, and are now pending, against other shareholders residing in other states. A motion to dismiss the Bill of Complaint, filed in the Northern District of Illinois, was also denied, in an opinion filed February 14, 1938. Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853.

On May 4, 1942, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed the judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. This opinion is reported in 127 F. (2d) 696 and will be found in the Record, Vol. 3, p. 312. The petitioner's application for rehearing (R. 3, p. 327) was denied on June 5, 1942, without written opinion (R. 3, p. 355).

JURISDICTION

Jurisdiction is conferred on this Court to review this cause by writ of certiorari by Section 240A of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925 (United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 347). On August 26, 1942, this Court extended the time for filing a petition for writ of certiorari until November 24, 1942. On December 7, 1942, this Court granted the petition for writ of certiorari.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville failed November 16, 1930, closed by voluntary resolution of its Board of Directors (Ex. V. 1, p. 1). It was a bad failure; dividends to depositors have been only 77 per cent. The amount sought in this and similar suits would produce another 10 per cent. On November 17, 1930, the Comptroller of the Currency being satisfied that it was "insolvent and unable to pay its just and legal debts" appointed a Receiver therefor (Ex. V. 1, p. 3). On February 20, 1931, upon an "accounting" and a "valuation of the uncollected assets" the Comptroller of the Currency found that in order to pay the debts of the bank it was necessary to "enforce the individual liability of the stockholders" (Sec. 5151, Sec. 5234, R. S., 12 U. S. C. 63, 192). He thereupon made "an assessment and requisition upon the shareholders" in the amount of $4,000,000, for the par value of each and every share of the capital stock and directed the Receiver "to take all necessary proceedings, by suit or otherwise, to enforce" the same (Ex. V. 1, p. 6).

As will be explained later herein, substantially all the stock of National Bank of Kentucky, at the time of its failure, was held of record in the name of a bank stock holding corporation, known as BancoKentucky Company, of Delaware, having been transferred to the holding company in exchange for holding company stock one year before, at a time when National Bank of Kentucky was in a precarious financial position. BancoKentucky and the bank failed at the same time. Its only assets consisted of assessable bank stocks. Its chain of banks also collapsed at the same time.

It became apparent to the Receiver of National Bank of Kentucky, shortly after the assessment was levied, that the assets of BancoKentucky would be wholly inadequate to meet this statutory liability. Its ordinary liabilities had been more than doubled by bank assessments. He realized, however, the duty to proceed against BancoKentucky as the "record" owner of the bank stock and to realize for his depositors, from that source, as much of the assessment as he would be lawfully entitled to. He would have been remiss in his duty had he not done so. It was all to the advantage of the "real" stockholders, shareholders of BancoKentucky, respondents, because whatever he collected from Banco reduced the amount to be collected from them. But before he proceeded against Banco he was quite careful to notify each stockholder of Banco, by registered mail, of his intention to proceed against them, as the "real" shareholders of National Bank of Kentucky, to the extent that he failed to collect from Banco. Not a single stockholder complained. His notice reads:

> "As a stockholder in The BancoKentucky Company, you will please take notice, that the Comptroller of the Currency has on February 20, 1931, levied an assessment upon the stockholders of The National Bank of Kentucky, Louisville, Ky., on the par value of each and every share, payable at the office of the Receiver, on or before April 1, 1931. A notice of such assessment and a demand for payment of the same has been served upon the Receiver of The BancoKentucky Company as the holder of 540,484 trustees' participation certificates, issued under a certain trust agreement of April 22, 1927, which trustees' participation certificates represent the ownership of 37,721.624 shares of stock in The National Bank of Kentucky. You will, therefore, take notice that it is the intention of the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, to proceed against you for the collection of the aforesaid assessment liability represented by the said trustees' participation certificates held by said BancoKentucky Company, to the extent that the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, is unable to collect said assessment from The BancoKentucky Company or its Receiver" (Ex. V. 1, p. 7).

As explained later, the "trustees' participation certificates," referred to in the notice above, represented the ownership of Louisville Trust Company as well as National Bank of Kentucky stock under a trust agreement "unifying" ownership of both banks in one certificate. A certificate represented approximately 70% National Bank and 30% Louisville Trust stock (R. 2, p. 244).

Subsequently the Receiver recovered a judgment against the Receiver of BancoKentucky Company for the entire amount of the assessment ($3,772,162.14). Because of its hopeless insolvency he was able to collect but a small part ($90,745.17) of the judgment (Ex. V. 4, p. 1871). He thereupon brought this suit against the defendant stockholders of BancoKentucky, residing in the Western District of Kentucky, in which he seeks to recover from each his or her proportionate part of the balance of said assessment. Similar suits against other stockholders residing in the Eastern District of Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia, and West Virginia, were filed in the appropriate Federal District Courts of said several states and are now pending, awaiting the final decision in this case.

The District Court in the instant case in an opinion overruled the defendants' motion to dismiss; but later upon a trial on the merits entered judgment for the defendants. An appeal was taken by the Receiver to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and upon a hearing the judgment of the District Court was affirmed.

The legal question presented is:

> "Are the owners of an insolvent National Bank relieved from individual liability or 'double assessment' under the applicable Federal statute, because shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares?"

The District Court, upon the trial of the facts on the merits, answered the question in the affirmative; holding in effect that the stockholders, in creating Banco and exchanging for its stock, had found a method of retaining all the advantages of ownership of National Bank stock without the concomitant statutory liability for assessment. This decision was affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, which subsequently denied a petition for rehearing. This review is presented to reverse said judgment.

The Bill of Complaint was based upon the alternative theories that the entire plan of the bank stockholders to form Banco, exchange bank stock for Banco stock, and thus through the holding company, as their agent and instrumentality, to continue in the banking business by owning and operating a chain of state and national banks, was in and of itself unlawful; that notwithstanding the transfer of bank shares for Banco shares, the defendants continued in law to be the actual, real and beneficial bank stockholders by retaining control of the bank and continuing to receive all the dividends and benefits incident to ownership; that when the stockholders of the failing National Bank, knowing that their bank stock was subject to assessment, evolved the scheme and plan to exchange National Bank stock for Banco stock and attempt to make the Banco stock nonassessable by providing in the Articles of Incorporation and on the stock certificates that it should be "nonassessable," they were plainly and intentionally attempting to evade Sections 5151 and 5234 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, 12 U. S. C. 63, 192 (Sec. 1c 156, Act June 30, 1876, as amended); that by reason of all the foregoing they were not entitled, in equity and good conscience, thus to shield themselves from assessment liability as national bank stockholders by interposing the corporate entity of their creature, Banco Kentucky, between them and the assessment liability; and that they continued until the failure, to remain the real, true and beneficial bank shareholders, liable for the assessment, and estopped to say otherwise.

FACTS OF THE CASE

National Bank of Kentucky was in an unhealthy condition for three full years before it failed on November 16, 1930. Its financial condition grew worse gradually and was very bad in June, 1929, when BancoKentucky was organized, and even worse in October, 1929, when the bank shareholders exchanged their bank stock for BancoKentucky stock. It failed, and so did Banco, exactly thirteen months and sixteen days after the exchange was made.

The above general statement is not argumentative. It is supported by actual and uncontradicted written records of the National Bank of Kentucky introduced in evidence in this case and appearing in great detail in the record before this Court.

1. National Bank of Kentucky's Financial Condition Unhealthy on April 23, 1927

National Bank of Kentucky was examined by the National Bank Examiners on April 23, 1927, which was more than three years before the failure. The examination was concluded on May 12, 1927. The Examiners' report was lodged with the Comptroller of the Currency. A copy of the report, as is customary, was promptly sent to the Board of Directors of the bank. The full report of the examination is in the record (Ex. V. 1, pp. 224 to 313).

A few facts taken from the report are sufficient: the bank's President, James B. Brown, owed $261,523.01 on direct obligations and was liable as surety for $519,107.11 additional (Ex. V. 1, p. 226). Officers and directors owed $1,019,210.46, of which $727,064.00 was unsecured by collateral (Ex. V. 1, p. 225). Corporations, in which officers and directors were largely interested, owed $2,307,902.72, of which over two million was unsecured (Ex. V. 1, p. 225). Its credit files were "incomplete" (Ex. V. 1, p. 308). It had statutory "bad debts as defined" in Sec. 5204, Revised Statutes, amounting to $968,658.12, and "other overdue paper" of $1,204,169.36 (Ex. V. 1, p. 236). In the preceding six months it had charged off $171,473.46 on bad notes (Ex. V. 1, p. 304), and was required to charge off an additional $137,775.39 as a result of this examination (Ex. V. 1, p. 306). Its deposits had shrunk from $56,700,000.00 at February 11, 1927, to $49,400,000.00 at the date of this examination (Ex. V. 1, pp. 179, 224). Its "overdrafts" amounted to $438,960.96 (Ex. V. 1, p. 224). The deposit accounts of Brown, the President, had been overdrawn $30,993.44 for five months, and his newspaper, Herald Post, $74,917.82 for four months. Overdrafts of these two accounts were termed by the Examiner as "habitual" (Ex. V. 1, p. 298). It had "excessive loans," that is, loans made in violation of Federal Statutes, of $2,427,310.83 (Ex. V. 1, p. 272). Its "criticized" loans were classified by the Examiner as follows:

"Overdue Class B"	1,204,169.36
"Slow"	5,000,160.12
"Doubtful"	567,353.47
"Loss"	137,175.16

(Ex. V. 1, p. 270.)

The "attention" of the Board of Directors was promptly "directed to the criticisms of the Examiner" by the Comptroller of the Currency by letter, in which they were requested, after the next meeting of the Board, to reply advising "as to the action taken or to be taken in regard to these matters." In part, the Comptroller said:

> "The report of an examination of your bank completed on May 12, has been received and your attention is directed to the criticisms of the Examiner on Pages 11-1 and 11-2.

"In addition to the estimated losses of $137,775, which it is understood are to be charged off on June 30, the bank is carrying an excessive amount of slow and doubtful assets amounting to $5,820,271, and $601,818, respectively, which have been steadily increasing, in spite of the fact that a substantial amount of losses has been charged off following each examination in the past two years. Overdue paper is also excessive in amount, the aggregate being $2,172,827, and includes statutory bad debts of $968,658. The Examiner has listed on the sheets following Page 6, a long list of large lines and other loans especially mentioned, which in his opinion require reduction, security, or supporting credit information. He has also listed several loans in excess of the legal limit, and a number of unwarranted overdrafts and cash items.

"It is evident that these matters have not been receiving sufficient attention, and it is urged that you review the report at your next board meeting, and take the necessary remedial measures.

"It is noted that the excessive loans to the Kentucky Jockey Club and the Consolidated Realty Company were to be reduced to the legal limit within a reasonable time; but that exception was taken to the classification of Wakefield & Company's loan as excessive. It is evident from the statement of the Examiner on Page 5-1 that the loans of the individuals included in this line were for the accommodation of Wakefield & Company, and should, therefore, be included with its direct liability and the line reduced to the 10% limit.

"Attention is directed to the Examiner's comment in regard to the credit files, and loans sold to country banks, which should receive proper attention.

"It is noted that $100,000 of the Kentucky Wagon Company line was included in the losses to be charged off, and it is believed that further substantial charge-offs should be made periodically until the line is reduced to a conservative figure" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1275).

No reply was given to the above letter and again on September 7, 1927, the Comptroller wrote:

> "... please advise, over the signatures of the available directors, whether the excessive loans have been reduced to the legal limit; the total collections obtained in the overdue and slow paper and the reduction or improvement made in each of the doubtful loans as well as in the large lines and other loans especially mentioned" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1277).

In spite of this unhealthy condition, or better perhaps because of it, National Bank of Kentucky, right at this time, went into a sort of partnership with Louisville Trust Company, a large state bank. Louisville Trust Company failed the same day National Bank of Kentucky failed, so it was a case of two weak brothers leaning on each other for support. Big publicity attended this "unification" or "merger," as it was called (Ex. V. 1, p. 156). National Bank of Kentucky increased its capital one and one-half million to four million by an entry transferring credit from its bookkeeping surplus and undivided profits (Ex. V. 1, p. 159). A mere gesture since its capital structure remained the same. No new money was invested. There was no legal merger however. The national and state banks continued their separate existence but with the same stockholders and identical Boards of Directors. The stock certificates of the two banks were deposited with Trustees who issued, in lieu thereof, what was called a Trustees' Participation Certificate, representing an undivided interest in both National Bank and Louisville Trust stock (Ex. V. 1, pp. 152, 153). The trust agreement, under which the bank stocks were deposited and trust certificates issued, in part provided:

> "(3) Each owner of a Trustees' Participation Certificate issued hereunder shall be subject to the same liability thereon as he would have been subject to in case he had been the owner of record of such proportionate part of the shares held by the Trustees in any corporation as the number of shares called for by his Trustees' Participation Certificate bears to the whole number of shares covered by all outstanding Trustees' Participation Certificates; and to such extent he shall indemnify and hold harmless the Trustees owning such stock from any loss or liability on account of being the holders or owners thereof. The measure of liability assumed hereunder shall be the same as that provided by law with reference to the holders of stock in any particular corporation in which the Trustees may hold stock as is provided by law with reference to the holders of such stock, and no more" (Ex. V. 1, p. 29).

2. No Improvement in Its Condition During Next Six Months

The Bank Examiner's report of October 14, 1927 (Ex. V. 1, pp. 315 to 406), shows that the unhealthy condition existing six months previous (see pp. 7 to 10, infra) had not improved, notwithstanding "unification" with Louisville Trust Company and the publicity attending the same. It requires substance to clean up a failing national bank.

At this date, three years before the bank failed, and two years before the stockholders exchanged bank stock for holding company stock, its deposits had declined another million dollars, a total of seven million from February 11, 1927 (Ex. V. 1, p. 315). Its borrowed money or "bills payable" at Federal Reserve went up $3,050,000.00 since the last examination. In addition, it owed $200,000.00 on a repurchase agreement obligation (Ex. V. 1, p. 396). Overdrafts were $342,797.38; down a little bit because notes were taken from some of the overdraft obligors (Ex. V. 1, p. 315).

It was deficient in its legal reserve requirements in the amount of $153,988.00 (Ex. V. 1, p. 393). This condition as to legal reserve was chronic, not casual. The legal reserve deficit was $160,930.00 on August 11; $257,580.00 on September 11; and $450,720.00 on October 11, 1927 (Ex. V. 1, pp. 191, 193, 195). Loans to officers and directors increased to $1,184,248.53 (Ex. V. 1, p. 316). Loans to corporations in which officers and directors were largely interested, increased to $2,733,583.89, an increase of over $400,000.00 (Ex. V. 1, p. 316). President Brown's debts were about $700,000.00, a slight improvement over the previous examination. The Herald Post loan, Brown's newspaper, was $400,000.00 (Ex. V. 1, pp. 319, 322). The race track loans, Kentucky Jockey Club and Lincoln Fields, at Chicago, were $739,980.00 and $350,000.00 respectively, a total increase of $350,000.00 (Ex. V. 1, p. 380). The bank still had illegal or excessive loans of $1,674,980.00 and "overdue" loans of $1,867,725.36 (Ex. V. 1, pp. 373, 331). It had charged off on bad loans since the last examination $138,980.20 (Ex. V. 1, p. 398). Two very large loans, known as the Campbell and Kentucky Wagon Lines, were severely criticized by the Examiner. As to the Campbell loan, $2,092,956.24, the Examiner said in his report:

> "Your examiner cannot escape the conviction that this line as described, is a source of potential danger to the bank" (Ex. V. 1, p. 405).

As to the Kentucky Wagon loan, $1,001,150.33, he said:

> "The only safe course for the management of the bank is to continue making periodical charges to Profit and Loss until the property can be sold. At least $100,000 should be charged off each six months until the plant can be sold or the carrying value reduced to at least $600,000" (Ex. V. 1, p. 353).

Its "criticized" loans were classified by the Examiner as follows:

"Overdue Class A"	$1,303,239.12
"Overdue Class B"	564,486.24
"Slow"	5,675,509.87
"Doubtful"	795,530.33
"Loss"	150,886.05

(Ex. V. 1, p. 371.)

The Comptroller of the Currency wrote to the Board of Directors as to this examination, in which, among other things, he said that it > ". . . shows a most unsatisfactory condition which seems to be growing worse, and requires your close attention and more conservative policy in making loans and investments, and more vigorous action in liquidating or improving the condition of those which are subject to criticism.

> "Although losses in substantial amounts have been charged off in the past few years, the bank continues to be burdened with a large accumulation of slow and doubtful assets which are largely represented in the large concentrations of credit and 'other loans especially mentioned' in Pages 6-1 to 6-12 of the report, and in the schedule of bonds, securities, etc. As a result of the recent affiliation with the Louisville Trust Company and an increase in the capital stock and dividend requirements, the ability of the bank to absorb its losses out of current earnings has been decreased, and if it is necessary to continue charging off losses in a substantial amount, as seems probable, the condition will be reflected in the bank's published statements. Overdrafts in excessive amounts have been repeatedly shown in reports of examination and in published reports of conditions, and accommodations of this character should be restricted."

The Comptroller also said:

> "The bank has been subject to repeated criticism for granting excessive loans, and it is requested that the Wakefield & Co. loans be reduced to the legal limit without further delay, and that the requirements of the law be strictly observed in the future" (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1278, 1279).

3. National Bank of Kentucky's Condition at March 9, 1928, Shows That It Was Getting Worse

The Bank Examiner's report of the bank examination of March 9, 1928, showed a further decline in its financial position (Ex. V. 1, pp. 408 to 485). Its deposits went down another $5,000,000.00, a total of $13,000,000.00 since February 11, 1927 (Ex. V. 1, p. 408). Its borrowed money at that particular day was only $200,000.00, but the report showed that its average borrowings since the last examination amounted to $2,400,000.00 (Ex. V. 1, p. 474). Its officers' and directors' loans, direct and indirect, remained at $2,732,207.03 (Ex. V. 1, p. 409). Corporation loans, in which officers and directors were largely interested, were $2,591,103.18, nearly $2,000,000.00 of which was still unsecured (Ex. V. 1, p. 409). President Brown's loans, direct and indirect, were fairly constant at $684,830.72 (Ex. V. 1, p. 410). It was deficient in legal reserve in the amount of $671,364.61, an increase from the last examination of $500,000.00 (Ex. V. 1, p. 471). Overdrafts were "habitual" (Ex. V. 1, p. 471). Statutory bad debts were $1,451,360.06; other overdue loans were $414,341.76, a total of $1,865,701.82 (Ex. V. 1, p. 422). Another $151,382.05 was charged off on bad notes since the last examination (Ex. V. 1, p. 476). Illegal or excessive loans of Kentucky Jockey Club, $610,200.00, and Wakefield and Company, $736,960.00, were listed (Ex. V. 1, p. 455). Again the Kentucky Wagon loan, $1,015,461.06, and Campbell loan, $1,801,268.20, were criticized (Ex. V. 1, pp. 458, 461). In spite of previous criticisms of Kentucky Wagon, its loans were increased $114,330.73 since the last examination (Ex. V. 1, p. 436). As to these loans the Examiner stated in his report:

> "Your examiner is of the opinion that the assets of this bank which require the most serious attention of the management are included in large lines as listed on page 6 and supplemental pages. They total quite large sums and are thought to be potential sources of large losses. The most careful and active attention should be given, as well as to other substandard assets listed in this report" (Ex. V. 1, p. 479).

As to the Campbell loans, the Examiner stated:

> "Such a situation cannot be considered as a banking proposition. To say the least, it is a very undesirable condition for a national bank to have interest in such a matter, and with the additional criticism of the matter of adequate security, it behooves the management of this bank to give the above line its most careful and active attention" (Ex. V. 1, p. 461).

In this report, the bank loans criticized by the Examiner were classified as follows:

"Overdue Class A"	$1,451,560.08
"Overdue Class B"	414,341.74
"Slow"	4,640,344.25
"Doubtful"	703,186.31
"Loss"	151,266.58

(Ex. V. 1, pp. 422, 478.)

As was done following the previous examinations, the Comptroller of the Currency again wrote the Board of Directors of the bank, in which, among other things, he said as to the Campbell line:

> "This line is entirely unwarranted in size and, from a credit standpoint, is considered to be a real danger to the bank" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1283).

The Comptroller also said:

> "Other matters shown by the report requiring your particular attention are the statutory bad debts aggregating $1,451,560, slow and doubtful assets aggregating $5,210,863 and $868,154 respectively and other loans especially mentioned."

The Comptroller also called attention to non-conforming real estate loans, deficiencies in reserves, illegal cash items and overdrafts. He referred specifically to President Brown's habitual overdrafts, and further stated:

> "The condition of the bank warrants the attention of every member of the board, and you are reminded of your oaths of office and your responsibility to the shareholders for the safe management and proper conduct of its affairs. It is your duty to see that the bank is properly and lawfully conducted and no officer should be permitted to dominate the policies to the extent of jeopardizing the best interest of the bank or violating the requirements of the law and good banking" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1284).

4. Bank's Condition Was Very Bad at October 13, 1928

A regular national bank examination was again held on October 13, 1928 (Ex. V. 2, pp. 486 to 571). This date is a little more than six months before BancoKentucky was organized and just about a year before the exchange of bank stock for Banco stock. This examination discloses that: Its deposits had declined two and one-half million dollars more since the last examination in April, 1928, a total decline since February 11, 1927, of over fifteen million dollars (Ex. V. 2, p. 486). Its borrowed money, "bills payable," and rediscounts had gone up to $5,666,301.96, an enormous increase (Ex. V. 2, p. 561). Its overdrafts amounted to $243,322.58 and were considered "habitual" (Ex. V. 2, p. 558). President Brown's loans remained stationary at $679,321.06 (Ex. V. 2, p. 488). Officers' and directors' loans, direct and indirect, jumped to $3,145,002.50; and loans of corporations, in which officers and directors were principally interested, jumped to $3,025,891.98 (Ex. V. 2, p. 487). Its legal reserve was deficient in the amount of $142,682.00 (Ex. V. 2, p. 558). The large Kentucky Wagon line was again criticized. Notwithstanding the fact that $100,000.00 of this line had been charged off as loss at the time of the previous examination, the bank had extended further credit to it in the amount of approximately $167,000.00 (Ex. V. 2, p. 518). The large Campbell line was also again criticized (Ex. V. 2, p. 545). As to overdrafts the Examiner's report stated:

> "The last published report of condition of this bank showed overdrafts aggregating $271,502.88. This is the largest amount of published overdrafts that has ever come to the attention of your Examiner. It is the subject of comments by other bankers, and has in a degree embarrassed examiners. Of course the effect cannot be favorable to the bank" (Ex. V. 2, p. 567).

The bank's loans, criticized by the Examiner, were classified as follows:

"Overdue Class A"	$1,200,857.75
"Overdue Class B"	567,254.83
"Slow"	5,108,832.50
"Doubtful"	909,949.27
"Loss"	80,185.16

(Ex. V. 2, p. 540.)

The Comptroller of the Currency also wrote the Board of Directors as to this examination, in which he stated:

> "Its condition is becoming more unsatisfactory, with slow and doubtful assets and losses sufficient in amount to threaten an impairment of the surplus fund.
> "It appears from the report that the greater part of the slow and doubtful assets is represented in the large lines of the Kentucky Wagon Company, Campbell, and Consolidated Realty Company. . . . It is hoped that the plans for refinancing these companies will be carried to a successful conclusion, but if they are not you should make some arrangement to eliminate these large lines from the bank's assets for they are a source of danger and embarrassment to it" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1288).

5. When BancoKentucky Was Promoted and Organized, National Bank of Kentucky Was in a Precarious Condition

A regular examination of the National Bank of Kentucky began on May 25, 1929, and consumed twenty-two days. This examination was conducted by the Chief National Bank Examiner (Ex. V. 2, pp. 572 to 652). During this examination the Chief Examiner discussed at length with the President and other officers the unsatisfactory condition of the bank (Ex. V. 2, p. 650). As a result of these conferences it was promised to the Examiner that a holding company would be formed, with new capital, and that the criticized assets would be taken out of the bank.

National Bank of Kentucky at this time was in a deplorable condition, as its own records plainly show. Its condition at that time might well be said to be desperate. Its deposits had dropped over six million dollars since the last examination, made about six months before (Ex. V. 2, p. 572). This was the fulfillment of the Examiner's prophecy in the previous report when he said that "other bankers" had commented on its large "published overdraft" position which "embarrassed the Examiners" and that "the effect cannot be favorable to the bank" (Ex. V. 2, p. 567). This was a total deposit loss of twenty-one million dollars in the two-year period from February 11, 1927, to May 25, 1929 (Ex. V. 1, p. 179; Ex. V. 2, p. 572). A deposit shrinkage from $56,700,000.00 to $35,099,000.00, or over 38%. The deposit withdrawals alone would be a very serious matter, but, coupled with the financial inability of the bank to rid itself of enormous bad loans, made the situation precarious indeed.

Borrowed money in this period had reached staggering proportions and amounted to $14,131,945.19. At this time the bank owned $9,580,800.00 in Government securities, of which all but $547,100.00 were pledged. It owed the Federal Reserve Bank $11,464,190.41; Guaranty Trust of New York, $907,000.00; National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, $500,000.00; Bank of America of New York, $1,060,754.78. In addition to all this it owed to the Stewart Dry Goods Company of Louisville, a department store, $200,000.00 for bonds borrowed. Its total borrowings amounted to over 40% of its deposits (Ex. V. 2, p. 647).

It was not deficient in legal reserve at the date of the examination, May 25, 1929, but it had been deficient in legal reserve on the day previous in the amount of $412,360.00. It had a deficiency in legal reserve for nine of the days in which the examination was taking place. The deficiency on May 31, 1929, was $1,096,760.00, and two days after the Bank Examiner left the bank, June 17, 1929, the deficiency in legal reserve jumped to $1,367,220.00, and on the following day it increased to $1,972,385.00 (Ex. V. 4, p. 1868).

It still had overdrafts of $154,268.70. Of this, $125,282.03 was the insolvent and habitually overdrawn Kentucky Wagon Company (Ex. V. 2, p. 641).

Loans, direct and indirect, to officers and directors amounted to $3,269,707.43. Loans to corporations in which officers and directors were largely interested amounted to $3,029,964.16 (Ex. V. 2, p. 573). President Brown's loans remained static at $657,294.24 (Ex. V. 2, p. 574). Its statutory bad debts amounted to $1,469,771.83. Other overdue loans amounted to $753,042.28 (Ex. V. 2, p. 592). It also had "loans exceeding the limit prescribed by Section 5200 of the Revised Statutes" amounting to $1,190,000.00, of which all except $20,000.00 were "inadequately secured" (Ex. V. 2, p. 629). Its desperate condition was reflected in the fact, as shown in the report, that it had sold to small country banks eight loans criticized by the Examiner in his previous report (Ex. V. 2, pp. 585, 586). The large credit lines extended to Kentucky Wagon, $1,340,474.38, and Campbell, $1,073,166.57, and Murray Rubber, $1,101,719.96, criticized in many previous examinations, were again adversely commented on by the Examiner. As to these loans the Examiner stated:

> "A grave potential danger lies in these large concentrations of credit" (Ex. V. 2, pp. 631, 632, 650).

With reference to Murray Rubber the report stated:

> "In general the statement shows an indebtedness of $2,049,884.00 against a net worth of $862,582. In other words, the debt of the company is two and one-half times its net worth. . . . It is evident that the company could not continue to operate long without a radical change in the result of its operations. The operating loss for April was $29,883.00. A few more months with such results would surely lead to insolvency" (Ex. V. 2, p. 617).

As to the E. B. Norman & Company loan of $552,871.25 the report stated:

> "It will be a great relief, if, and when, this large indebtedness of the company to the bank can be liquidated. It is a particularly heavy burden for the bank to bear during a time when it is having to use liberally the rediscount privileges of the Federal Reserve Bank" (Ex. V. 2, p. 620).

As to the Campbell loan the report states that the line is "thoroughly undesirable" (Ex. V. 2, p. 595).

The Kentucky Wagon loan, then amounting to $1,340,474.38, was severely criticized. As to this loan the report says:

> "Since last examination this line has increased $257,932.07. One of the disturbing facts in connection with this asset is the progressive increase in amount that has been shown. The first examination made of this bank by your Examiner was in November 1925. The aggregate amount of the loan at that time was $1,039,000.00. Since that time, there has been charged to Profit and Loss $650,000.00. The line is now $301,474.38 greater than it was at that time" (Ex. V. 2, pp. 611, 612).

This Kentucky Wagon Company loan was at this time a very serious matter. The bank only had $368,588.83 in undivided profits at this time (Ex. V. 2, p. 572). The requirement of a substantial charge-off on Kentucky Wagon would have depleted the undivided profits and presented a bank statement with an impaired capital structure. The practice, which the bank had persisted in, in spite of the Bank Examiners' warnings, of charging off $100,000.00 in a six months' period and in the same period making additional loans of more than $200,000.00, was really hard to believe. The Bank Examiner discussed this and all other criticized assets with the officers of the bank. To save the situation the bank officials told the Examiner that, if he would waive the required and necessary charge-offs at this examination, a great holding company with new capital would be immediately organized to take Kentucky Wagon and all the other dead wood out of the bank. It is all in writing in the National Bank Examiner's May 25, 1929, report, wherein it is stated:

> "Your examiner feels that the realizable value of this asset is so uncertain that the management of the bank should continue to make some substantial charges

Profit and Loss on account of it. The matter was discussed at some length at an officers' meeting. Your examiner was advised that a plan is in contemplation whereby a sort of a finance and holding company will be organized with a large capital stock, say twenty million dollars.

"The holding company will hold, among other things, the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and its affiliated bank through a surrender and exchange of stock of the bank for stock of the company on some satisfactory basis. It is also contemplated that the holding company will acquire, and through a term of years work out, certain assets of the bank, among others probably Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company. In view of the contemplated organization of the holding company, your examiner was requested to waive any charge to Profit and Loss at this time on account of the Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company loan. Your examiner suggested that the matter might be deferred until the next examination, provided the management of the bank would agree that if the Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company loan is not removed from the bank by the time of the next examination, a charge of $200,000.00 to Profit and Loss would be made on the loan. It later developed that the proposed plan of consolidation is likely to be consummated at an early date, hence the matter of charge off was dropped" (Ex. V. 2, p. 612).

As to losses generally the report states:

"The matter was discussed in meeting of officers. It was also discussed in a conference with President Brown. It is expected that the bank will be functioning as a State institution within ninety days. In view of this fact, the management requested that the matter of 'charging off' losses be waived" (Ex. V. 2, p. 650).

The examination was completed June 15, 1929.

The minutes of the Board of Directors of the bank of June 7, 1929, recite:

> "Mr. Brown's proposition to form a new Company with a proposed capital of $20,000,000 organized to own stock of other corporations, all, or any part, buy and sell securities, original and refinancing, etc., was submitted to the Board of Directors and the Board expressed themselves as favorable and on motion duly seconded and unanimously carried the President was authorized to proceed along the lines outlined" (Ex. V. 2, p. 992).

After the Bank Examiner left the bank, the Board of Directors on June 21, 1929, adopted the following resolution:

> "RESOLVED, that it is the sense of this Board that a corporation of the character as outlined by the President at this meeting be formed.
> "RESOLVED, further, that the President be and he is hereby requested to report to the Board such details as may be necessary in connection with the organization of said corporation, together with his recommendations in regard to all matters connected therewith" (Ex. V. 2, p. 994).

At the examination completed six days before this resolution was adopted, the "criticized" loans were classified by the Examiner, as follows:

"Overdue Class A"	$1,469,771.83
"Overdue Class B"	753,042.28
"Slow"	5,119,417.92
"Doubtful"	742,521.00
"Loss"	43,276.91

(Ex. V. 2, p. 628.)

6. BancoKentucky Organized in July, 1929

During the national bank examination, May 25th to June 15th, 1929, it became obvious to the officers and directors of the National Bank of Kentucky that its collapse was inevitable unless drastic measures were immediately taken. Its undivided profits were not sufficient to absorb the charge-offs which good banking dictated. It could not collect the criticized bad loans. Brown, the President, was insolvent, as evidenced by his subsequent voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

Kentucky Wagon was a hopeless mess, the bank losing eventually $2,330,204.02, thereon; of which $650,000.00 had been "charged off." $339,729.64 was loaned after the examination under discussion (Ex. V. 5, p. 2127). At the same time that the bank was charging off as bad a part of the Kentucky Wagon loan, it was also making new advances. Murray Rubber loans were proportionately bad; the bank taking a loss of $1,352,976.51 thereon (Ex. V. 5, pp. 2127, 2135). The ultimate losses on other large criticized assets were: Campbell, $842,216.06; Consolidated Realty, $419,043.70; E. B. Norman, $706,709.36. The total amount of losses which the bank suffered as the result of the loans specifically criticized by the bank examiners in the May 25, 1929, examination alone amounted to $7,620,967.92 (Ex. V. 5, pp. 2122 to 2136).

The officers of the bank certainly knew these conditions. If the directors did not know, it was their duty to know. The public evidently sensed the situation. Otherwise, why the enormous decline in deposits? During the same period there was a marked increase in deposits in the other banks in Louisville (R. 3, p. 113).

Knowing the precarious condition of the National Bank of Kentucky as well as, or better than, the Bank Examiner knew it; realizing that the bank was doomed unless a radical change could be brought about in its affairs, the officers, directors, and stockholders of the bank agreed to organize a great holding company, with new capital, and promised with such new capital to take Kentucky Wagon and other criticized assets out of the bank on condition that the Bank Examiner would not require any further charge-offs at that time. And thus BancoKentucky Company, at a directors' meeting of the National Bank of Kentucky as set forth in their minutes, was first promoted.

So, therefore, even before the Bank Examiner had left the bank the organization of Banco was set afoot. There was no other alternative because the Examiner had warned that unless the Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Company loan was removed from the bank by the time of the next examination, a charge of $200,000.00 to profit and loss would be made on the loan (Ex. V. 2, p. 612). If such a charge-off had been made at that time, the bank would have been virtually without an undivided profit account.

The organization of BancoKentucky Company followed very quickly. It was incorporated in Delaware on July 16th, 1929, authorized to issue two million shares at ten dollars each (Ex. V. 3, p. 1051). Its prospectus, signed by National Bank of Kentucky, and its "unified" state bank, Louisville Trust Company, and their identical directors, was sent to each shareholder of the unified banks (Ex. V. 3, p. 1139). For convenience this prospectus is reprinted in full as an appendix to this brief. It stated that:

> "the two banks, and the business conducted by them, should be reorganized by adding to this group a third corporation, which will make the operation of these banking institutions more profitable, expand their facilities, and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections."

And provided that:

> "It is an essential part of this reorganization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Board of Directors and the officers of the two banks" (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1140-1141).

The "two banks" referred to were National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company.

It was also a prerequisite part of the plan that Banco-Kentucky hold at least a majority of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company.

This prospectus offered the "entire capital stock" of BancoKentucky to the shareholders of the two banks; two shares for each Trustees' Participation Certificate, and the remainder at twenty-five dollars per share. Substantially all the certificate holders made the exchange (R. 2, p. 93). The plan was so arranged that no tax liability would be imposed on the exchange. The creation of the holding company was described as a "reorganization" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1140). It was "at once seen that the taxable gain would be very large" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1145) unless this was so, and the organizers took every step so that the exchange of bank stock for holding company stock would be "made to appear (so far as the Bank's stockholders are concerned) as a mere receipt of the same property in another form, and not as a closed transaction wherein they part with one species of property in exchange for an entirely different species of property" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1157).

The organizers "distinctly provided" in the Articles of Incorporation of BancoKentucky Company and on its certificates of stock that it was fully paid and non-assessable (Ex. V. 4, p. 1703; Ex. V. 3, p. 1449). A letter from Bean, President of the Louisville Trust Company, to Brown, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, written July 26, 1929 (Ex. V. 3, p. 1264), explains what the scheme was by this. It states:

> "Does the 'double liability' apply to BancoKentucky stock as it does to stock in the banks? NO; one of the advantages of transferring your bank stock for > BancoKentucky Company stock is that you are relieved of the double liability clause which applies under the Kentucky law."

Hayes, a vice-president of the National Bank, in urging stockholders to exchange bank stock for Banco stock, stated:

> ". . . our new money is to be used chiefly for buying controlling interest in banks. . . . The new stock will be in just as safe a position, as I see it, as the old, and without double liability . . ." (Ex. V. 3, p. 1398).

and again:

> ". . . it does not have the double liability to the holders as bank shares have" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1400).

Substantially all the bank stockholders exchanged for BancoKentucky stock (Ex. V. 4, p. 1942). A great many, also, in response to a regular promotion campaign put on by the banks and aided by loans made by the National Bank of Kentucky amounting to more than five million dollars on the sole security of BancoKentucky stock, subscribed for additional shares (Ex. V. 4, p. 1934). Although the prospectus provided that the BancoKentucky Company "offers to the Trustees' Participation shareholders . . . its entire capital stock" some subscriptions were accepted from non-stockholders. Subscriptions were called for payment on October 1st, at which time nearly ten million dollars in cash came into the treasury of BancoKentucky Company (Ex. V. 3, p. 1144; Ex. V. 4, p. 1934). However, instead of utilizing this new money to clean up the National Bank of Kentucky, as promised to the Bank Examiners, it was paid out almost immediately to purchase the controlling stock in banks (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1073-1075). During the short period that Banco was in existence it acquired the following bank stocks through exchange of its stock and for cash (Ex. V. 4, p. 1914).

In exactly thirty-five days after it commenced business its available cash was gone and it was borrowing money (Ex. V. 3, p. 1553).

BancoKentucky Company began its actual business existence in October, 1929. It failed ingloriously in November, 1930, with no substantial assets except bank stock and most of these banks became insolvent at the same time (Ex. V. 5, pp. 2099 to 2108). BancoKentucky, as its name significantly indicates, was a bank stock holding company pure and simple. It was a creature born out of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky (Ex. V. 2, p. 994).

Its President, and Secretary-Treasurer, were President and Cashier respectively of the National Bank of Kentucky (R. 2, p. 238). Its directors and National Bank of Kentucky's directors were the same individuals, who were also the directors of the Louisville Trust Company (R. 2, p. 238). The same group of men, acting as directors of the two banks and the holding company consistently had three board meetings all at the same time (R. 2, pp. 251, 252).

[1] Over 50 per cent and therefore "an act in violation of the prohibitory provision in Section 609" (Ky. Stat.) BancoKentucky's Receiver v. Louisville Trust Co.'s Receiver, 263 Ky. 155, 92 S. W. (2d) 19 (1936). Attorney-director Helm testified "The Newport and Covington, Kentucky, banks were both state banks. We were counting on non-action by the State Banking Commissioner and the Attorney General to enforce this provision (Ky. Stat. 609)." (R. 3, p. 92.)

BancoKentucky Company did not have a single paid employee at any time. It never paid a dollar in salary or wages to anyone. It had no office, office furniture or equipment. It did not even have a telephone (R. 2, pp. 237, 280, 281, 282; R. 3, p. 155). It only had three small record books: cash journal, ledger, and security record (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1497 to 1574; V. 4, pp. 1575 to 1675), and these were all kept by and in the desk of the Cashier of the bank (R. 2, p. 282). It did not have a correspondence file. Letters sent and received by it were commingled in the files of National Bank of Kentucky. Though it was a Delaware corporation it never qualified to do business in Kentucky (Ky. Stat. Sec. 571), (Ex. V. 4, p. 1694; R. 2, pp. 52, 102).

BancoKentucky was listed on all the stock exchanges as a bank stock holding company (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1695, 1713, 1717, 1723, 1829). All the newspapers carried its market quotations under the heading of Bank stock (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1181, 1183, 1189).

7. Business Conducted by Banco Exclusively a Holding Company Business

It has been previously stated that BancoKentucky only had three small record books. All the entries in these books have been reproduced in full as exhibits in this case (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1497 to 1574; V. 4, pp. 1575 to 1675). It is not a tedious task to examine and analyze every different business transaction undertaken by Banco during the short year of its existence. These business transactions, and there were no others, were as follows:

(1) It exchanged its shares for National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company shares.

(2) It sold its own shares for cash, $9,869,650.00. Over $7,000,000.00 of this came out of the "unified" banks on loans made on the security of Banco stock.

(3) For cash and exchange of its stock it acquired the controlling stock interest in seven other banks in Kentucky and Ohio; and a minority stock interest in another bank.

(4) It collected dividends, $1,180,858.50, on its bank stocks and paid out, on the same day, dividends ($1,253,513.00) on its own stock. The deficit was met by overdraft at National Bank of Kentucky.

(5) It invested $25,000.00 in 625 shares of Union Central Life Insurance Company stock.

(6) In a vain attempt to peg the stock market on Banco-Kentucky stock it repurchased and cancelled 106,000 shares of its own shares at a cost of $2,374,137.50.

(7) It collected a small amount of interest on its bank deposit.

(8) Brown, President of the Bank and Banco, without authority or knowledge of the Board of Directors, borrowed (?) two million dollars of its funds and substituted his note for that amount therefor.

(9) Shortly before its failure Brown made an unauthorized deal for a sort of a partnership with Caldwell & Company, which was never consummated.

(10) Less than thirty days before the bank's failure Banco purchased, out of the portfolio of the National Bank of Kentucky, the worthless Murray Rubber Company notes of $580,000.00 and the $20,000.00 note of Lewis C. Humphrey. This was done in a futile last-minute attempt to clean up the National Bank of Kentucky and avert its collapse. This transaction was later rescinded by the courts.

(11) It borrowed from Chemical National of New York $1,000,000.00, pledging some of its bank stocks as collateral, at a time when it was using its funds to support the market on its own stock.

(12) It borrowed another $600,000.00 from Chemical shortly before the failure, the proceeds from which were used to purchase the worthless Murray Rubber and Humphrey notes from the National Bank of Kentucky.

Aside from such inconsequential business transactions as paying its organization, printing, and other similar expenses, stock listing and transfer fees, postage, income tax, and the like, the above mentioned matters comprise every business transaction ever conducted by Banco-Kentucky Company up to the time of its failure (Ex. V. 4, p. 1914).

Every one of the above mentioned transactions were connected directly with and in furtherance of its interest in the stocks which it held in the National Bank of Kentucky, and the other nine banks, except the purchase of "an infinitesimal amount" of stock (R. 3, p. 167) in the Union Central Life Insurance Company for $25,000.00. This represented less than one-tenth of one percent of its total investments (Ex. V. 4, p. 1739). It is not difficult to surmise that this was done to attract bank deposits; and if so, even it was in furtherance of the bank stock holding company business.

The appropriation by Brown of two million dollars of Banco's funds, and the substitution of his note therefor, was unauthorized and therefore not a business transaction of Banco. If it be considered a transaction of Banco, it was done in furtherance of the interest of the bank because the funds in part went immediately to reduce the much criticized Brown and Wakefield notes in the National Bank of Kentucky.

The Caldwell transaction above was never consummated (R. 1, p. 262). It amounted to an attempt only, was not consummated, and cannot be considered a transaction at all. The Caldwell deal was clearly a last-minute attempt to rescue the fast sinking National Bank of Kentucky, and extend the bank-stock holding company business.

The Murray Rubber and the Humphrey transactions were later rescinded by the courts. BancoKentucky Company's Receiver v. National Bank of Kentucky's Receiver, 281 Ky. 784, 137 S. W. (2nd) 357. The transaction was a direct attempt to aid National Bank of Kentucky and protect the stockholders' keystone bank.

The "declared" purposes of BancoKentucky, set forth in its articles of incorporation, undoubtedly permitted it to engage in a wide variety of business enterprises aside from the holding of the bank stocks. It engaged, however, only in the business of holding bank stocks. The written record makes this all crystal clear. The President and Secretary of BancoKentucky Company certainly knew what the real purpose and business of BancoKentucky Company was. On September 26, 1929, just as the company was starting business, it made application to list its shares on the Chicago Stock Exchange. As is customary, it filed a sworn written application. This application states that Banco was incorporated "for the purpose of owning controlling interest in state and national banks located primarily in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana." And "it is the intent of the management to employ its cash for acquiring additional banks" (Ex. V. 4, p. 1723). A letter of the Secretary of Banco, addressed to the Chicago Stock Exchange, March 19, 1930 (Ex. V. 4, p. 1711) reads in part:

> "This is to state that the BancoKentucky Company is a holding company for capital stock of banks and trust companies, of which it owns a majority of stock or a controlling interest."

And in a questionnaire filed with the Chicago Stock Exchange, signed by the Secretary of Banco, it is stated (Ex. V. 4, p. 1713):

> "(b) Primary Purpose: To acquire, control and operate banks and trust companies.
> "(c) Nature of Business: This company has not engaged in the business of investing and reinvesting in a diversified list of securities of other corporations for revenue and profit, but has limited its activities to acquiring control of banks and trust companies and the operation of same."

8. Banco One of Many Plans Suggested as a Means of Avoiding Charge-Off of Bad Loans

The condition of National Bank of Kentucky was precarious when BancoKentucky was formed. Its condition gradually became worse after Banco was organized. We have heretofore shown in detail, at periods prior to the organization of Banco and from the Bank's own records, the conditions which brought about its eventual collapse. Details such as declining deposits, failure to maintain its legal reserve requirements, heavy borrowings, excessive overdrafts, illegal loans, large charge-offs and millions of sub-standard assets classed as slow and doubtful, alone tell the story. But if one examines more deeply into the details of the record before this Court, he comes to the inevitable conclusion that "unification" with Lonisville Trust and the organization of Banco were simply two of several schemes to clean up National Bank of Kentucky and to restore it to a position of confidence in the community. It could not charge down the Kentucky Wagon, Murray Rubber, Wakefield, Campbell, and Herald Post loans to their real values without a serious impairment of its capital structure.

Its officers made promises of every kind to the bank examiners as to these loans in order that it would not be required to make the necessary charge-offs. In 1928 they said they were going to sell Kentucky Wagon to the French Government at a price that would pay off the loan (Ex. V. 2, p. 518). In the following year to prevent a charge-off on Kentucky Wagon, they promised the examiner that they would form the holding company, Banco, and that Banco would take Kentucky Wagon and other bad loans out of the Bank (Ex. V. 2, p. 612).

In the year in which Banco was formed they again escaped a charge-off on Kentucky Wagon upon the promise that they intended to denationalize the National Bank of Kentucky and make it a state bank (Ex. V. 2, p. 650). They actually went so far as to incorporate a state bank with the name "Bank of Kentucky" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1187), but found that they could not denationalize; the Federal Reserve Bank would not admit the proposed new state bank to membership because it had about four million dollars in sub-standard loans (Ex. V. 3, p. 1479).

At the time of the spring examination in 1930 they worked up a scheme to go into partnership with Caldwell & Company and its chain of banks. A few months after this deal was contemplated, Caldwell failed for untold millions and his creditors received about one-half of one per cent in dividends—two broken financial houses going into partnership to restore themselves to solvency.

These stockholders did have one chance to save National Bank of Kentucky and that was by complying with the promise that they made to the bank examiner when Banco was organized; that they would put new money into Banco, and that they would take this new money and clean up the National Bank of Kentucky, but instead of doing this they resorted to the grandiose scheme of acquiring a whole chain of banks on both sides of the Ohio River.

Each time the national bank examiner came into the National Bank of Kentucky they had a new scheme, always in futuro, to take the dead wood out of National Bank of Kentucky. Even at the time of the last examination of National Bank of Kentucky, September 17 to October 24, 1930, less than a month before the failure, they had new proposals as shown in a letter, signed by the directors, to the Comptroller of the Currency. These never materialized. (See letter dated October 24, 1930, Ex. V. 2, pp. 985, 986.)

The inevitable end of the road came in November, 1930. Caldwell's failure, a few days before, did not cause the failure of National Bank of Kentucky. Its stockholders and their agents, the officers and directors, are responsible. Its failure certainly cannot be laid on the doorstep of the depositors.

9. Bank Shareholders Continued to Manage Bank After the Exchange, and Received the Same Dividends

The prospectus provided:

> "It is an essential part of this organization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks."

The plan was not only conditioned "upon the acquisition by the trustees participation shareholders . . . of at least a majority of the shares of the BancoKentucky Company" but it was "further conditioned upon the acquisition by the BancoKentucky Company of . . . a majority of the trustees participation shares" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1140A). This plan was carried into effect. During Banco's entire existence its directorate and the unified banks' directorates were identical (R. 2, p. 238). Although Banco acquired other banks, no representative of those banks was admitted to Banco's board. Control over the holding company was vested from the start and continuously in the respondents (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1917 to 1920). On the other hand, Banco placed its representatives on the boards of the various outlying banks which it acquired. Consequently, the respondents continued their control over the National Bank of Kentucky and added to this a control over other banks. Brown was elected director of all the banks which were acquired (Ex. V. 4, p. 1858), a situation which was criticized by the Bank Examiners as being in violation of law (Ex. V. 2, p. 870). Qualifying shares of the stock in the acquired banks were furnished to those of the directors of the acquired banks who, in addition to Brown, were to represent Banco (Ex. V. 3, p. 1099; Ex. V. 4, pp. 1797, 1798, 1822-1825). Dividends on qualifying shares were returned to Banco. Directors so qualified endorsed their qualifying shares and returned them to Banco (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1799, 1801, 1809, 1812-1824).

The original shareholders of the Bank continued their control of the Bank and of the holding company not only through the same Board, but through the holding company's officers. Banco's president and secretary-treasurer were president and cashier, respectively, of National Bank of Kentucky (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1063, 1099). Substantially all of the shareholders of the Bank became shareholders of Banco (Ex. V. 4, p. 1942). Banco, in turn, acquired ninety-five per cent of the Bank stock (R. 2, p. 94). All persons recognized that neither the control nor interest of the Bank shareholders was changing and in order to avoid a taxable gain the plans were made so that those exchanging would merely be accepting "receipt of the same property in another form" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1157).

At the time both the Bank and Banco failed sixty-seven (66.68%) per cent (Ex. V. 5, p. 2152) of all of Banco's outstanding stock was held by individuals who had been shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky. The original arrangement that a substantial majority of the stock of the holding company "be owned by the trustees participation shareholders" was continued to the end. Actually, at the time of failure almost ninety (88.71%) per cent of Banco's shareholders were persons who had acquired Banco stock by exchange of trustees' participation certificates or interim receipts, which represented trustees' participation certificates, by subscription to the "plan of reorganization" which set out the fact that under the plan trustees' participation shareholders should manage the holding company, or by exchange of shares of the other banks which Banco acquired (R. 2, pp. 127, 128).

Not only did the shareholders of the Bank continue their control, they continued to receive exactly the same dividends which they had received before the exchange. The amount received and the date on which the dividend was received was exactly the same as though the respondents had continued in the original arrangement and had not organized the holding company (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1692, 1917 to 1920).

National Bank of Kentucky paid dividends of $160,000.00 each quarter, equal to $16.00 per share per year on its capital stock, to BancoKentucky which distributed the exact amount to its shareholders on the very same day it was received from the bank (R. 2, p. 101). From its organization until its failure, little more than a year, Banco-Kentucky's only income, except for $3,457.40, was from its controlled banks (Ex. V. 4, p. 1689). During its existence it collected $1,180,858.50 dividends from its bank stocks and paid $1,253,513.00 to its stockholders. The money to pay the deficit was met by overdraft on the National Bank of Kentucky (R. 2, p. 122).

SPECIFICATIONS OF ERROR

1. The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in affirming the decision of the District Court.

2. The Circuit Court of Appeals erred in holding that the respondents could shield themselves behind the corporate entity of BancoKentucky and avoid stock assessment in this matter.

ARGUMENT

Regardless of "Record" Ownership, the "Real" or "Beneficial" Owner Is Liable for Assessment

The idea of a bank-stock holding company originated, or at least assumed serious proportions, in the high finance days of 1911. It was then proposed in New York to form a giant bank-stock holding company to buy up, through exchange of holding company shares for bank shares, a great many banks, national and state, throughout the nation. Had the effort received governmental sanction, and succeeded, a few great holding companies might soon have controlled all the banks in the United States. The President saw the danger and called upon the Solicitor General for an opinion on the matter. In the opinion, Solicitor General Lehmann said:

> "If many enterprises and many banks are brought and bound together in the nexus of a great holding corporation, the failure of one may involve all in a common disaster."

And he concluded that a holding company

> "in its holdings of National Bank stock is in usurpation of Federal authority and in violation of the Federal law." Congressional Record, May 10, 1932, page 10212. 9899-9904.

What the Solicitor General prophesied came true at Louisville with its BancoKentucky; in Michigan with its Detroit Bankers Company and its Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. The stockholders of these Detroit bank-stock holding companies were held liable for the national bank assessments. Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510; cert. den. 300 U. S. 670. Fortunately for the nation, it did not happen in the northwest with its Northwest Bank Corporation, or in the far west with its giant Bank America Corporation.

Banco, just like Detroit Bankers and Guardian Detroit Group, was a promotion by the owners of the bank. It was promoted, not to let them go out of the banking business, but to continue and enlarge their investment therein, and increase their opportunity to profit thereby. They "distinctly provided" in the articles of incorporation of Banco and on its certificates of stock that it was "fully paid and non-assessable." What did they intend by this except to escape the assessment liability? The answer to the question will be found in the letter of Bean, President of the Trust Company, to Brown, President of the bank, written July 26, 1929 (Ex. 27, p. 1262), which states:

> "Does the 'double liability' apply to BancoKentucky Company stock as it does to stock in the banks? NO; one of the advantages of transferring your bank stock for BancoKentucky Company stock is that you are relieved of the double liability clause which applies under the Kentucky law."

Title 12 U. S. C. 63 provides:

> "The shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. . . ."

This Court has consistently held that:

> ". . . they (owners of national bank stock) cannot enjoy the benefits accruing to shareholders, and escape liability for the contracts, debts and engagements of the bank." (Parenthetical addition ours.) Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 229 (1906).

The decisions from the earliest cases involving stock assessment liability adhere to and extend the principle that technicalities, subterfuges, record ownerships, and transfers will be disregarded in order to discover the real, true and beneficial owner of the bank shares and hold him liable for the assessment.

> "As to such owners (real owners) the law looks through subterfuges and apparent ownership and fastens the liability upon the shareholder to whom the shares really belong." (Parenthetical addition ours.) Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, Receiver, 204 U. S. 162, 168 (1907).

The transferor has been held to be liable as actual owner where transfer of stock was made to a financially irresponsible person for the purpose of evading assessment and where the transferor continued to be the true owner. National Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628 (1878). The same rule was followed in Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251 (1882), and amplified in Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1 (1897); McDonald v. Dewey, 202 U. S. 510 (1906); Pauly v. State Loan, 165 U. S. 606 (1897); Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162 (1907).

Where the stock was transferred to a minor child who could not respond to assessment, this Court has held the transferor liable. Early v. Richardson, 280 U. S. 496 (1930).

In cases where the stock was transferred to a trustee for the purpose of taking advantage of the statute which provides that the trustee shall only be liable to the extent of trust assets in his possession, 12 U. S. C. 66, it was held that the beneficial and real owner would be liable. English v. Gamble, 26 F. (2d) 28 (C. C. A. 8, 1928); O'Keefe v.

Pearson, 73 F. (2d) 673 (C. C. A. 1, 1934); Schlener v. Davis, 75 F. (2d) 371 (C. C. A. 5, 1935).

In more recent cases involving the use of a holding corporation as a bulwark against stock assessment, the courts have constantly held that the shareholders of the holding company are liable for assessment. Corker v. Soper, 53 F. (2d) 190 (C. C. A. 5, 1931), cert. den. Corker v. Howard, 285 U. S. 540; Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 F. (2d) 263 (C. C. A. 8, 1935). The corporate fiction of the holding company was disregarded. Durrance v. Collier, 81 F. (2d) 4 (C. C. A. 5, 1936); Brusselback v. Cago Corp., 85 F. (2d) 20 (C. C. A. 2, 1936), cert. den., 299 U. S. 586; Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42 (C. C. A. 4, 1938); Fors v. Farrell, 271 Mich. 358, 260 N. W. 886 (1935); Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936); Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937); Hansen v. Agnew, 195 Wash. 354, 80 P. (2d) 845 (1938).

In every case before this Court since the statute was adopted the rule expressed in Pauly v. State Loan and Trust Co., 165 U. S. 606 (1897), has been followed. That rule is:

> "That the real owner of the shares of the capital stock of a national banking association may, in every case, be treated as a shareholder within the meaning of section 5151 (165 U. S. 619).
> "The courts will look at the relations of parties as they actually are, or as, by reason of their conduct, they must be assumed to be for the protection of creditors. Congress did not say that those only should be regarded as shareholders, liable for the contracts, debts and engagements of the banking association, whose names appear on the stock list distinctly as shareholders. . . . As already indicated, those may be treated as shareholders, within the meaning of section 5151, who are the real owners of the stock, or who hold > themselves out, or allow themselves to be held out, as owners in such way and under such circumstances, as, upon principles of fair dealing, will estop them, as against creditors, from claiming that they were not, in fact, owners." (165 U. S. 623.)

In Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162 (1907), this Court restated the rule.

> ". . . the law looks through subterfuges and apparent ownerships and fastens the liability upon the shareholder to whom the shares really belong." (204 U. S. 168.)

A corporate entity will be disregarded when necessary to avoid a fraud or to prevent an evasion of a statute. Wormser, "The Disregard of Corporate Fiction," pp. 36, 44, 51, 59.

This rule has been followed by this Court when to give sanctity to the corporate entity would result in circumventing a statute enacted for the protection of the public. Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197 (1904); United States v. Lehigh Valley Railway Co., 220 U. S. 257 (1911); United States v. Delaware L. & W. Railway Co., 238 U. S. 516 (1915).

In C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, 247 U. S. 490 (1918), this Court said:

> ". . . the courts will not permit themselves to be blinded or deceived by mere forms of law but, regardless of fictions, will deal with the substance of the transaction involved as if the corporate agency did not exist and as the justice of the case may require." (247 U. S. 501.)

"A dominant or controlling stockholder or group of stockholders" has been recognized as a fiduciary for creditors of the corporation. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 306 (1939). In that case the Court pointed to the fact that:

> "The relations of a stockholder to a corporation and to the public require good faith and fair dealing in every transaction between the stockholder and the corporation which may injuriously affect the rights of creditors and the general public, and a careful examination will be made into all such transactions in the interests of creditors." 308 U. S. 309 (footnote 19 quoting from In re Burntside Lodge, Inc., 7 F. Supp. 785).

The respondents organized Banco for the purpose of continuing and extending their interest and control in banks. However, they sought to retain this advantage and at the same time escape the concomitant liability imposed by the assessment statutes. The respondents continued to remain the shareholders of National Bank for the purpose of the statute. Banco was nothing more than "a corporate pocket" (308 U. S. 309) of the bank stockholders.

In giving the transaction the special scrutiny necessary to protect the interests of creditors, it would seem that the form should be disregarded and effect should be given to the spirit of the law. This is especially so because Banco was organized at a time when the Bank's condition was precarious.

Respondents refer to Banco's unlimited powers, as set out in its purpose clause, as a defense to the present claim. Banco's actual purpose, however, was reported to the state of its incorporation in its annual report. The nature of Banco's business was there described:

> "TO ACQUIRE, CONTROL AND OPERATE BANKS AND/OR TRUST COMPANIES" (Ex. V. 4, p. 1921-a).

In other public announcements such as the application for stock listing with the Chicago Exchange (Ex. V. 4, p. 1717); the application for listing on the Louisville Exchange (Ex. V. 4, p. 1695); brokerage circulars (Ex. V. 5, pp. 2087-2090); correspondence (Ex. V. 4, p. 1711) and general publicity it was so described.

In Central Life Securities Co. v. Smith, 236 Fed. 170, C. C. A. 7 (1916), the Court pointed out:

> "While the Central Life Securities Co. was authorized to conduct various kinds of business, its chief business, as advertised and as actually conducted, was to secure control of the Republic Life Insurance Company, and thereby indirectly engage in the life insurance business."

The Court held that the corporation was acting unlawfully and was not troubled in arriving at that conclusion by the broad purpose clause.

Nor can the fact that Banco was a Delaware corporation affect the situation. The mere fact that there was incorporated in the charter and in the certificates which Banco issued a phrase that its shares should be non-assessable does not leave the Federal Government without remedy when the receiver of a national bank, an officer of the United States, attempts to enforce a Federal law. Such a contention was disapproved by this Court in the Northern Securities case. The Court said:

> "Underlying the argument in behalf of the defendants is the idea that as the Northern Securities Company is a state corporation, and as its acquisition of the stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies is not inconsistent with the powers conferred by its charter, the enforcement of the act of Congress, as against those corporations, will be an unauthorized interference by the national government with the internal commerce of the States creating those corporations. This suggestion does not at all impress us." 193 U. S. 197, 332.

And again:

> "No State can, by merely creating a corporation, or in any other mode, project its authority into other states, and across the continent, so as to prevent Congress from exerting the power it possesses under the Constitution. . . ." Ibid., p. 345.

BANK STOCK HOLDING COMPANY CASES

With respect to the Federal Bank Assessment statute, under consideration here, and with respect to similar statutes as to state banks, the courts have been uniform in holding that the stockholder of the bank stock holding company is in law the real stockholder of the bank. Decisions to this effect are found in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Eighth Circuits, and similar decisions have been handed down by the Supreme Courts of several states.

In Nettles, Recr., v. Rhett, 94 Fed. (2) 42 (C. C. A. 4), (1938), the court stated the rule as follows (p. 47):

> "Even in the absence of a prohibitory statute, it has been quite generally held in recent bank cases under varying circumstances that the stockholder in a company, which holds for them the stock of a bank, are the real beneficial owners of the stock, and, as such, are subject to the assessment when the bank fails, notwithstanding the record ownership or title. This is merely an application of the rule which, before the adoption of the holding company device in banking circles, had announced the liability of the real owner of bank stock, although not registered as such on the bank's books. Pauly v. State Loan & Trust Co., 165 U. S. 606; Ohio Valley National Bank v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162; and the rule has been recently applied, not only in cases in which an actual intent on the part of the organizers of the holding company to evade an impending statutory liability has been found to exist, as in Corker v. Soper, 53 F. (2d) 190; Durrance v. Collier, 81 F. (2d) 4; Brusselbach v. Cago Corp., 85 F. (2d) 20; Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25, but also where the holding company was formed for the bona fide purpose of saving the bank or bringing about and controlling an expansion of its business. Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 F. (2d) 263; Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510; Fors v. Farrell, 271 Mich. 358, 260 N. W. 886."

Banco was organized to "expand" the bank's "facilities." The organizers, however, took care that the former shareholders should control this "expansion of its business."

In setting out the rule of liability of the shareholders of the holding company the Court in the Nettles case said:

> "Some of the cases reach this result by resort to the theory that the circumstances justify the ignoring of the corporate entity; but there seems to be no necessity to adopt this view. The holding company may be frankly recognized as a convenient instrumentality adopted by the stockholders for legitimate ends (in the absence of a prohibitory statute) without affecting their liability in the case of insolvency to pay again the face value of their stock, just as if it were being held for them by a natural person."

In Corker v. Soper, 53 Fed. (2d) 190 (C. C. A. 5), cert. denied 285 U. S. 540 (1931), Corker was held liable for stock assessment though he attempted to continue his ownership in the bank by insulating himself from liability by means of placing his stock in Laurens Company. The decision of the District Court, holding Corker liable, was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. That court said (p. 192):

> "Appellant devotes a large portion of his brief to the contention that the Laurens Company was a real corporation, validly organized and validly existing, and that, in view of the frankness with which the purpose to avoid liability was avowed, and the things to accomplish that purpose done, there is no warrant here for disregarding the corporate character of the Laurens Company in order to hold its incorporators liable.

"Appellant's troubles do not arise from the fact that the corporate entity of the Laurens Company has been disregarded. The judgment of the court below fully recognized and gave effect to that entity. It found that, though it did in fact exist, it existed as a mere creature organized and maintained for the purpose of holding, not really, but as agent for appellant, the stock which he caused to be put in its name, that appellant at all times remained the real owner of the shares, and that the law will look through the subterfuge of pretended ownership to fasten liability upon the shareholder to whom, in fact, the shares belong."

The only difference between the Corker case and the present suit is the fact that there the holding company only held the stock of one bank and here Banco held the stock of several. This does not serve as a basis for distinction, however. Banco had no substantial assets other than assessable bank stocks. These could not be relied on for the protection of the depositors since failure of one bank would bring and did bring common disaster.

It is true that Banco received $9,800,000.00 in cash ($7,100,000.00 borrowed from bank-trust company) but that cash was used principally to purchase stocks of other banks. Before that cash was received by Banco contracts had been executed to buy two Cincinnati banks.

In Durrance v. Collier, 81 Fed. (2d) 4 (1936), the Court of Appeals for the same circuit reached the same conclusion.

In Barbour v. Thomas, 86 Fed. (2d) 510 (1936), cert. denied, 300 U. S. 670 (1937), the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit laid down the rule which we believe should have been adopted in the instant case. The Court said:

> "Since the holding company had no substantial assets except the stock of its units, it was manifest that the creditors and depositors of the component banks were offered no real protection either under the federal statute providing for double liability of shareholders (Section 63, Title 12, U. S. C.), or under a statute of the State of Michigan with similar provisions." [86 F. (2d) 513.]
> "The stockholders of the banks had no intention of retiring from the banking business. They organized the holding company for the protection and promotion of their common interests. . . . Their primary purpose was to centralize the control and operation of the five unit banks and from time to time acquire control of additional ones by the exchange of holding company stock for other stocks. They were careful to provide that the holding company should be under the exclusive control of officers and agents of the component banks at least until December 31, 1934." [86 F. (2d) 517.]

In attempting to distinguish the present situation from the Detroit case the Court of Appeals commented that in that case

> "The only assets of the holding company upon its organization were the bank stocks transferred to it by constituent units, in exchange for its stock, and '$1200 received from 120 "trustee shares" of no par value' . . ." (R. 319).

This statement only serves as a distinction in the amount of cash held by the two holding companies at the time of their organization. This difference is an illusory one. Banco's cash came from the Bank and the Trust Company as a result of loans made by those two institutions to individuals who were buying Banco stock. That cash when paid into Banco was dedicated to the purpose of acquisition of additional banks. The subscribers for Banco stock.

were not required to pay their subscriptions until October 1, 1929 (Ex. V. 3, p. 1144). Prior to that time, on September 25, 1929, Banco had made a contract to purchase stocks of other banks which would use up practically all of that cash, and plans were under discussion for the purchase of banking institutions in addition to those already contracted for (Ex. V. 3, pp. 1073 to 1075).

It is submitted that there is no distinction between the instant case and the Detroit case. Both of the holding companies "possessed no substantial assets, except the stock of its component banks" (R. 320). In such a situation the Court of Appeals recognized that

> "Creditors and depositors . . . were afforded no real protection . . . under the federal statute imposing double liability." (R. 320.)

In attempting to base a distinction between the present case and the Barbour case on the amount of cash paid into the holding company "upon its organization," it is submitted that the Court of Appeals overlooked certain factors which were present in the Detroit bank assessment cases. Deming v. Schram, 7 F. Supp. 271, was a companion suit to Barbour v. Thomas. There the stockholders of the holding company, held liable for the assessment, paid in cash in excess of $7,500,000 for the purchase of additional shares of the holding company (Ex. V. 5, p. 2181). Paying cash for stock of the holding company did not relieve the stockholders of The Peoples Investment Corporation or other bank holding companies. As the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit said:

> "It is of no moment that some of the preferred stockholders acquired their shares for cash and did not previously own stock of the bank. They became none the less the real parties in interest in the Peoples State Bank. . . ." Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42, 49.

It is further submitted that the Court of Appeals overlooked factors involved in the Barbour case, itself, in attempting to base a distinction on this ground between the present suit and the Barbour case. In the Barbour case the Court pointed out that,

> "Ninety-one and three-tenths per cent of appellants were . . . owners of their holding company stock by original exchange, one-half of one per cent obtained their stock in exchange for the stock of others of subsequently acquired institutions. The remainder obtained their certificates in other ways." Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510, 516.

The Detroit holding company stock was listed on the stock exchange and some of the 8% above mentioned acquired their stock through the exchange for cash (Ex. 126, record Barbour v. Thomas, No. 718, October Term, 1936, on file with the Clerk of this Court). This did not prevent them from being held liable as the real and actual shareholders of the First National Bank-Detroit.

The Court of Appeals also points out that the Detroit shareholders "assumed its statutory liability as record holder of the bank stocks" (R. 320). However, the Court itself states that this point "while being worthy of evaluation was not considered controlling." It was laid "to one side" in the decision holding the Detroit shareholders liable. It cannot serve as a distinguishing point. This is particularly so when the condition of the Bank as of the time the clause was written into Banco's charter is borne in mind.

Neither the fact that some of Banco's stock was sold to the general public nor the illusory accumulation of cash, nor the placing of the statement of limitation on liability in the charter can serve to distinguish the present case from the action holding the Detroit shareholders liable. Nor can Banco's purchase of stock in an insurance company

(one-tenth of one per cent of its total assets), nor its belated acquisition of the Murray Rubber and Lewis Humphrey obligations [amounting to one and one-half per cent of its total assets, never brought before its Board of Directors and rescinded by the Court after its collapse—BancoKentucky's Receiver v. National Bank of Kentucky's Receiver, 281 Ky. 784, 137 S. W. (2d) 357 (1939); nor the unauthorized personal loan to Brown; nor the unconsummated Caldwell transaction, serve to distinguish the present case from that in Detroit. It is submitted that the Court of Appeals should have applied the rule it laid down in the Barbour case.

In Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 Fed. (2d) 263 (C. C. A. 8, 1935), the Court said (p. 268):

> "The incorporators of the holding company may have acted in good faith according to their standards of right, but under the facts in this case, as disclosed by the record, they must be judged by the legal effect of what they deliberately did. If they were the beneficial owners of the shares in question and the corporation was merely an instrumentality set up for their own convenience in holding the title to the shares, then in equity it matters not what design, good or evil, prompted their actions; from either source, the effects of their actions—the avoidance of a statutory liability—are the same."

The claim was made that the holding company became the actual owner of the bank stock and that the defendants were only its stockholders. The Court said that the provision of the National Bank Act for assessment liability was (page 266):

> ". . . enacted primarily for the benefit of the creditors of national banking associations. The so-called double liability of shares of national bank stock prompts the public to select banks of this character with which to do business in preference to other institutions which do not have this additional stock liability. If the contentions of the appellants are correct, then the organization of this holding company had the effect of circumventing Section 5151, Rev. St. The ownership of this 720 shares of stock carried with it the responsibility of this additional liability, and to say that the individual appellants by their own initiative could take the title to this block of stock from the Vandeventer Securities Company and practically suspend this statutory liability by placing title in a corporation, the only asset of which, at the time, or ever to be, was this block of stock, would be to render the provisions of this statute a complete nullity for all practical purposes. To deprive the creditors of a national bank of their statutory protection by such a method is wrong and the courts will not countenance the interposition of a mere corporate shadow to conceal who are the actual and beneficial owners of bank shares. To permit individuals to circumvent the contingent liability under this statute by simply organizing a corporation for the purpose of holding shares would set up a device against which the statute would ever afterwards be ineffective."

In Brusselback v. Cago Corporation, 85 Fed. (2d) 20—cert. denied, 299 U. S. 586 (1936), the Court held (p. 23):

"Appellee Fox is the president of Cago Corporation, Spielberg is one of the incorporators, and Michael J. Devlet is alleged to be among those who caused the incorporation of the Cago Corporation for purposes of evading liability imposed by the Federal Farm Loan Act. The bill pleads that the corporation has never had any substantial assets, and that it 'is the mere agency and instrumentality of the persons aforesaid who caused it to be organized, or of other persons, some of whom are unknown to complainants, who are the real owners of said shares of stock and for whom the said Cago Corporation is a mere sham owner and shield. Such persons aforesaid are in fact the owners > within the meaning of the aforesaid Act of Congress' of those shares of stock of which the corporation is the record owner. If the appellants are able to establish at the trial that any or all of these three appellees are beneficial owners of any of the stock held in the name of the Cago Corporation, they will be liable for the assessment herein sought to be collected."

District Court rulings arrive at the same conclusion that the shareholders of the holding company are liable for the assessment, Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853 (District Court, Illinois, 1938), involving the same assessment. Partridge v. Ainley, 28 F. Supp. 472 (District Court, New York, 1939), involved a joint stock land bank. In that case the Court said (p. 475):

> "I find that this was not a case of a bona fide sale of the bank stock but was another instance—whereof there are many in the books—e. g. Barbour v. Thomas, 6 Cir., 86 F. (2d) 510, 517; Ullrich v. Thomas, 6 Cir., 86 F. (2d) 678, 679; Metropolitan Holding Company v. Snyder, 8 Cir., 79 F. (2d) 263, 266-268, 103 A. L. R. 912; Brusselback v. Cago Corporation et al., D. C., 24 F. Supp. 524, 529, 530; Holmberg v. Anchell et al., D. C., 24 F. Supp. 594, 599, wherein a holding company without double liability on its stockholders was formed to hold bank stock, and possibly also (although that matter not) to unify the control of the bank as much as might be, looking to its reorganization."

Since the original plan in the instant case contemplated that the shareholders of the bank would incur no income tax liability on the exchange and would merely receive "the same property in another form" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1157), it cannot be claimed by the respondents that there was a bona file sale here.

The District Judge in the Partridge case held that the holding company did not constitute "a 'nonconductor' of the double liability of the stockholders of the bank." 28

F. Supp. 472, 475. It is submitted Banco cannot be an insulator here.

In state courts where the question has arisen the courts have uniformly held the shareholders of the holding company liable for the assessment. In Fors v. Farrell, 271 Mich. 358, 260 N. W. 886 (1935), the Court summed up the law as follows:

> "That neither an individual nor a corporation can through a trust arrangement or by other indirect means or circumlocution possess as an owner and enjoy the beneficial interest in bank stock without assuming the contingent liability of a stockholder's assessment imposed by law. To hold otherwise would be to nullify the protection given the bank creditors by the statute imposing double liability" (P. 891).
>
> "In a proceeding to enforce stockholders' liability it is of little or no importance as to how many paper ownerships or holdings in trust may intervene between the bank that issued the stock and the ultimate or actual owner thereof. The beneficial owner is liable for the stock assessment. . . .
> "Surely it was never intended that this wholesome statutory provision (for double assessment) should be nullified by resort to indirect corporate holdings of such stock."
>
> ". . . its corporate structure cannot be used as a shield behind which an actual and beneficial owner of such stock may escape the statutory liability to insolvent bank's creditors" (Pp. 889, 890).

In Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937), the Supreme Court of South Carolina held (p. 803):

> "'Where the corporate form of organization is adopted or a corporate entity is asserted in an endeavor to evade a statute or to modify its intent, courts will disregard the corporation or its entity and look to the substance or reality of the matter.'"

In Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936), the Supreme Court of Florida held (p. 30):

> "The allegations of the bill of complaint are sufficient to show that the entire transaction was for the purpose of creating a corporate entity to be controlled entirely by the bank stockholders who transferred and assigned their bank stock to the corporation, so that, if the bank stock proved a good investment and paid dividends, their corporation would likewise pay those dividends on to the stockholders in that corporation, while, if the bank became insolvent and it became necessary to levy a capital stock assessment, there would be no assets available to the bank or the receiver on these particular shares of capital stock. If a transaction of this sort is to be countenanced by the courts, then designing stockholders may at any time avoid all statutory liability for stock assessments by the very simple practice of organizing a corporation with capital stock equivalent only to that of the bank stock to be transferred to it, assign the bank stock to such corporation, and leave the other stockholders, as well as depositors and other creditors of the bank, without that protection and security which is provided by the statute authorizing stock assessments such as that under consideration here."

In Hansen v. Agnew, 195 Wash. 354, 80 P. (2d) 845 (1938), the Supreme Court of Washington adopted a lower court finding that the plan for the organization of the holding company was entered into in good faith, but reversed the lower court and held that the holding company stockholders were the real and beneficial owners of the stocks of the banks which it had acquired. In so ruling the Court said:

> "In our opinion, the question of motive is entirely immaterial; nor is it necessary, in order to permit a recovery in this case, to disregard the corporate entity of the holding company, or to invoke the com- > paratively modern concept of alter ego, or even to fall back upon considerations of public policy; for the statute contemplates that the superadded liability shall be that of the real and beneficial owner of the stock." [80 P. (2d) 845, 851.]

Other State Court decisions are White v. Aaronson, 169 Misc. 593, 7 N. Y. S. (2d) 901 (1938); Bacon v. Barbour, 110 Vt. 280, 6 A. ANALYSIS AND CRITICISM OF OPINIONS BELOW

Anderson v. Abbott, 127 F. (2d) 696, 32 F. Supp. 328

The District Court, in its opinion, Anderson v. Abbott (32 F. Supp. 328), gave full recognition to the fact that the officers and directors of the "unified" National Bank and Louisville Trust "caused" the organization of Banco, and that "the stockholders of the bank exchanged 95% of the stock of the bank for the stock of Banco." It stated that plaintiff contended that "Banco was organized as a holding company for the stock of the bank," and that Banco stockholders are "in reality" stockholders of the bank and "subject to double liability." It stated the defendants' position as follows (p. 329):

> "The defendants contend that Banco was not a holding company but an operating corporation organized to engage in extensive business enterprises and that while the buying and holding of bank stock was to be one of its functions that was only incidental."

The Court then said (p. 329):

> "The proof must establish that Banco was a holding company for the bank stock of the National Bank of Kentucky. Whether it was such a holding company by reason of a fraudulent design to avoid a stock assessment or was organized with the purest of motives is of no consequence. The question is was it a holding company for this particular bank stock?"

Again at p. 333 the Court said:

"The liability of the defendants is entirely statutory. They must be stockholders in the bank. If they are stockholders in reality, regardless of an intermediate corporation, they are subject to the assessment. They are not stockholders in the bank if Banco was an operating company and not merely a holding company."

In its conclusion that Banco was an "operating" company and not a "holding" company the Court erred, we respectfully submit, because it accepted the broad charter powers of Banco and the matter in the stock selling prospectus of July 19, 1929, copied as an exhibit at the end of this brief, as the "avowed purposes" of Banco, and disregarded entirely the "real" purposes of Banco. To determine in law whether Banco was an "operating" or a "holding" company one must certainly look beyond its corporate purpose clause and the stock selling letter of its promoters. One would want to know, it seems, what it actually did as an "operating" company and what it actually did as a "holding" company.

How it could be an "operating" company without an office or place of business; without an employee; without a telephone and with only three little record books, is difficult to understand. It only engaged in twelve business transactions in the entire year of its existence. These transactions are set forth and discussed at page 29 herein. Every one of these transactions directly or indirectly relate to its real business of a bank stock holding company.

It did acquire and hold substantially all the stock of ten banks, including 95% of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky. It held these stocks, collected the dividends on them and paid the dividends out on the same day that they were received. Substantially all of its income came to it as the holder of bank stocks. Everything it did was "incidental" to its business of holding bank stock. Its holding of bank stock was certainly not incidental to its other business because it never had any other business.

The officials of Banco certainly knew whether it was a "holding" or "operating" company. What did they say in this respect? In their application to list the stock with the Louisville Stock Exchange they stated that it was "organized for the purpose of buying and controlling banks" (Ex. V. 5, p. 1695). In its sworn income tax return its business was stated as "holding company" (Ex. V. 5, p. 1846). In its report to the State of Delaware the nature of its business was stated:

> "To acquire control and operate banks and/or trust companies" (Ex. V. 5, p. 1921A).

To the Chicago Stock Exchange in a sworn statement its primary purpose was stated:

> "To acquire control and operate banks and trust companies" (Ex. V. 5, p. 1717).

And it was further stated therein that Banco "has limited its activities to acquiring control of banks and trust companies and the operation of the same" (Ex. V. 5, p. 1713).

The Court finally said that Banco "was not formed as a medium or agency through which to avoid double liability." We have never claimed that the primary purpose of Banco was to avoid this assessment. Our contention has always been that it was organized primarily to hold bank stocks and that while its organizers were getting up the plans they included as an incident thereto an attempt to make the stock non-assessable.

The Circuit Court of Appeals in Anderson v. Abbott, 127 F. (2d) 696, did not base its opinion, as did the District Court, on the erroneous conclusion that Banco was an "operating" company and that its bank stock holdings were simply incidental to its other "extensive business enterprises."

The opinion of the Court of Appeals is analyzed in detail in the "Petition for Rehearing" found in the Record, Volume 3, page 327.

The Court of Appeals correctly concluded that the trust certificates, for which the bank stock was exchanged in the so-called "unification" of National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company in 1927, was "the equivalent of bank stock" and that the holders thereof were "the real, beneficial shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky." It based this conclusion upon the fact that the owners of the bank stock "carefully provided" that they should continue to be liable for any assessment. The Court then erroneously concludes that since they made no such careful provision for liability when they made the second exchange for BancoKentucky stock, they had, therefore, successfully evaded the statutory liability, and particularly so because they wrote a non-assessment section in the Articles of Incorporation and carried it on the stock certificates.

It is submitted that a bank stockholder cannot so easily excuse himself from liability. The only transfer of bank stock which releases the shareholder from this statutory liability is an "out and out" transfer, whereby the shareholder completely severs himself from his stock interest in the bank and completely divests himself of his opportunity of having a voice in its control, or the receipt of any of its earnings. This Court long ago said in National Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628 (631, 633):

> "It is not every transfer that releases a stockholder from his responsibility as such. . . . (Liability continues if) the 'privileges and possible benefits of ownership continue.'" (Parenthetical insertion ours.)

Notwithstanding the fact that the Bank Examiners' reports for three full years had indicated that the bank was in financial straits, the appellate court said that "no probability of assessment" appeared when bank shares were exchanged for Banco shares. Liability does not depend upon pending insolvency. It arises by virtue of statute and depends upon ownership. The owner is the one who enjoys the "privileges and possible benefits" of the bank. National Bank v. Case, supra. What privilege or benefit did the owners of National Bank of Kentucky give up when they exchanged for Banco shares? In the words of their own lawyer, they kept "the same property in another form." Louisville Trust Company said it "was in its essence a mere continuation and retention of the ownership of Trustees' Participation shares," which were conceded to be the equivalent of bank stock (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1886, 1887, 1890, 1896).

Certainly the trading of bank stock for holding company stock simply cannot be a "reorganization" to escape taxes, and at the same time a "sale" to escape assessment.

The Court of Appeals concluded that BancoKentucky was not organized for the primary purpose of escaping double liability. It is not necessary to quarrel with this conclusion. BancoKentucky was promoted by the owners of the bank to enable them to continue in the banking business, not for the purpose of getting out of the banking business. As an incident, they provided as best they could that the Banco shares should not be assessable and by the language of their charter and the words on their stock certificates, as evidenced by Bean's letter to Brown, infra, p. 26, they knew very well that they were attempting to escape this liability.

The Court of Appeals, in its opinion, makes a great deal out of the fact that three million dollars of the cash raised by Banco was not invested in bank stocks. This statement is completely answered by the fact that five million dollars of Banco's cash assets came out of the National Bank of Kentucky upon loans made solely upon the security of Banco stock and that over two million of said amount was lost by the National Bank of Kentucky. And in any event, the three million dollars was not "invested" by Banco. Twenty-five thousand dollars was invested in Union Central Life Insurance Company stock. Brown took two million dollars of the invested three million dollars without asking anybody about it, substituted his note therefor and no one knew that Banco had Brown's note until after the failure (R. 2, pp. 64, 98). The remainder of the "invested" three million dollars went in an attempt to peg the market of its own stock. The Caldwell deal was never consummated. Therefore, it is undisputed in the record that all of BancoKentucky's cash was invested in bank stocks, and in buying its own stock to peg the market, except the twenty-five thousand dollars in Union Central shares (R. 3, p. 322).

The Court of Appeals quoted with approval and adopted the statement from another case involving the bank and Banco:

> "There is nothing in the record to point to it as an instrumentality of the bank."

As to this statement the Court will please note the fact that Banco was created by resolution of the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky on June 21, 1929 (Ex. V. 2, p. 994), and that the Banco prospectus provided > "that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks."

It is therefore submitted that it was a creature of the banks and that for all time it was to "be managed and operated" by the banks.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, therefore, it is submitted that the record indisputably shows that BancoKentucky Company was organized to support a failing national bank; organized by ex-owners of bank stock in order that they might continue in the banking business on a grander scale; and organized for the purpose of holding double liability bank stocks.

> "The Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky caused to be organized this holding company, to which was given the suggestive name of BancoKentucky Company, which was, indeed, intended to be, and was, in many important respects and in a very real sense, as the record abundantly shows, the National Bank of Kentucky." Anderson v. Akers, 7 F. Supp. 924, 950 (1934).

Banco's doing business in Kentucky was unlawful because it never qualified to do business there. (Ky. Stat. 571.) Its ownership of all the stock of Louisville Trust Company and several other Kentucky state banks was expressly forbidden by Kentucky law. (Ky. Stat. 581, 609.) Except for a few days in October, 1929, when it first started business, all of its assets were in bank stocks and it never thereafter had any assets with which to pay an assessment upon these bank stocks. It was never anything more than a corporate instrumentality of the shareholders in order that they might continue in the banking business, get all possible benefits therefrom and at the same time escape a statutory assessment in the event that one should be levied.

Louisville, Ky., July 19, 1929.

To the Holders of Trustees' Participation Shares,
National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company:

1. Your Officers and Directors have studied the rapidly changing conditions in the banking business in America, with a view to preparing the two banking institutions under their management, to meet these changed conditions, and to take early advantage of new opportunities presented thereby.

2. The conclusion unanimously reached, as a result of their deliberations, is that the two banks, and the business conducted by them, should be reorganized by adding to this group a third corporation, which will make the operations of these banking institutions more profitable, expand their facilities, and thus develop for the entire group new and profitable financial opportunities and connections.

3. Such a reorganization is in line with the trend of business and finance in this country; and the strength and influence of the new corporation will not only greatly benefit the two banks and the territory they now serve, but will also be a stabilizing influence in banking circles throughout this section of the country. The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank nor a trust company has authority to exercise, and can take advantage of many sound and profitable financial opportunities, frequently presented in the course of business of the two banks, but not available to them, because of the restrictions upon their powers and activities.

4. The following is the Plan of Reorganization agreed upon by the Officers and Directors of the two banks, and approved by formal Resolutions of the Trustees, under the Trustees' Agreement for the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company.

5. There has been organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, a corporation known as The BancoKentucky Company, with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares, having a par value of Ten ($10.00) Dollars each. The stock will be exchanged or sold, in accordance with this Plan, on the basis of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share, which will give the Company a capital of Twenty Million ($20,000,000.00) Dollars, and a surplus of Thirty Million ($30,000,000.00) Dollars, or a total capital and surplus of Fifty Million ($50,000,000.00) Dollars. No stock will be sold by the Company at less than twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share.

6. The corporation is given broad charter powers, including the right to acquire stocks, bonds and other securities of other corporations, and evidences of indebtedness created or issued by other corporations; the power to underwrite securities and take part in syndicate management, and to charge fees and commissions for its services in connection with the reorganization or refinancing of other corporations; the power to issue bonds and to guarantee the obligations of others and to become surety, guarantor and endorser thereof. The foregoing is merely a brief summary of the broad powers given the corporation; complete details of these powers appear in the Certificate of Incorporation of the Company, copies of which may be examined at the offices of the two banks by any one interested.

7. It is an essential part of this reorganization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks. The BancoKentucky Company, therefore, offers to the Trustees' Participation Shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, through the Trustees as agents in the transaction, its entire capital stock, on the bases and subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter set out:

8. It is an essential part of this plan that:

(a) On or before September 19, 1929, the holders of the Trustees' Participation Shares must deposit their Certificates with the Trustees for exchange into the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and for each Participation Share thus deposited, the Trustees will cause to be issued to the holder thereof, Two (2) shares of the stock of the new corporation. In addition thereto the depositing shareholder will have the right to subscribe for as many additional shares of the stock of the BancoKentucky Company as he may desire at the price of Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars per share subject to allotment ratably if over-subscribed. Trustees' Participation Shareholders who fail to deposit their shares on or before September 19, 1929, will be deemed to have waived their rights to thus exchange their shares and subscribe for stock in the new Company, unless the Trustees shall extend the time for deposit and subscription (as they may do in their discretion), in which event the Trustees' Participation Shareholders will be deemed to have waived their rights, unless their shares are deposited within the extended time.

(b) The entire Plan of Reorganization, and the deposit and subscription privileges and rights hereinabove set out, are all, and each of them is, conditioned expressly upon the acquisition by the Trustees' Participation Shareholders, either by deposit for exchange, or by direct subscription as above, of at least a majority of the shares of The BancoKentucky Company; and further conditioned upon the acquisition by The BancoKentucky Company of at least a majority of the Trustees' Participation Shares issued and outstanding as of September 19, 1929.

9. It is the unanimous recommendation of your Officers, Directors and Trustees of the National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company, that the Trustees' Participation Shareholders immediately deposit their shares under this Reorganization Plan, and that they exercise their right to subscribe to the additional shares of stock of the BancoKentucky Company.

10. There is enclosed herewith a subscription form covering this transaction, which you are asked to sign at your earliest opportunity and deposit with the Trustees, at their office, 421 West Market Street, together with your Certificate or Certificates for Trustees' Participation Shares, endorsed in blank and witnessed. There will be issued to you an Interim Receipt for the shares deposited which, when the Plan has become effective as above set forth, may be presented for exchange for the permanent certificates of the BancoKentucky Company, in accordance with the Plan of Reorganization.

APPENDIX B

§ 63. Individual liability of shareholders.

The shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares; except that shareholders of any banking association existing on June 22, 1874, under State laws, having not less than $5,000,000 of capital actually paid in, and a surplus of 20 per centum on hand, both to be determined by the Comptroller of the Currency, shall be liable only to the amount invested in their shares; and such surplus of 20 per centum shall be kept undiminished, and be in addition to the surplus provided for in this chapter; and if at any time there is a deficiency in such surplus of 20 per centum, such association shall not pay any dividends to its shareholders until the deficiency is made good; and in case of such deficiency, the Comptroller of the Currency may compel the association to close its business and wind up its affairs under the provisions of this chapter relating to dissolution and receivership. (R. S. § 5151; Dec. 23, 1913, c. 6 § 23, 38 Stat. 273.)

§ 64. Individual liability of shareholders; transfer of shares.

The stockholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, each to the amount of his stock therein, at the par value thereof in addition to the amount invested in such stock. The stockholders in any national banking association who shall have transferred their shares or registered the transfer thereof within sixty days next before the date of the failure of such association to meet its obligations, or with knowledge of such impending failure, shall be liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee fails to meet such liability; but this provision shall not be construed to affect in any way any recourse which such shareholders might otherwise have against those in whose names such shares are registered at the time of such failure. (Dec. 23, 1913, c. 6, § 23, 38 Stat. 273.)

§ 191. General grounds for appointment of receiver.

Whenever any national banking association shall be dissolved and its rights, privileges, and franchises declared forfeited, as prescribed in section 93, or whenever any creditor of any national banking association shall have obtained a judgment against it in any court of record, and made application, accompanied by a certificate from the clerk of the court stating that such judgment has been rendered and has remained unpaid for the space of thirty days, or whenever the comptroller shall become satisfied of the insolvency of a national banking association, he may, after due examination of its affairs, in either case, appoint a receiver who shall proceed to close up such association, and enforce the personal liability of the shareholders, as provided in section 192. (June 30, 1876, c. 156, § 1, 19 Stat. 63.)

§ 192. Default in payment of circulating notes.

On becoming satisfied, as specified in sections 131 and 132 of this title, that any association has refused to pay its circulating notes as therein mentioned, and is in default, the Comptroller of the Currency may forthwith appoint a receiver, and require of him such bond and security as he deems proper. Such receiver, under the direction of the comptroller, shall take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of such association, collect all debts, dues, and claims belonging to it, and, upon the order of a court of record of competent jurisdiction, may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and, on a like order, may sell all the real and personal property of such association, on such terms as the court shall direct; and may, if necessary to pay the debts of such association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders. Such receiver shall pay over all money so made to the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the comptroller, and also make report to the comptroller of all his acts and proceedings.

PROVIDED, That the comptroller may, if he deems proper, deposit any of the money so made in any regular Government depositary, or in any State or national bank either of the city or town in which the insolvent bank was located, or of a city or town as adjacent thereto as practicable; if such deposit is made he shall require the depositary to deposit United States bonds or other satisfactory securities with the Treasurer of the United States for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the money so deposited:

PROVIDED, That no security in the form of deposit of United States bonds, or otherwise, shall be required in the case of such parts of the deposits as are insured under section 264 of this title. Such depositary shall pay upon such money interest at such rate as the Comptroller may prescribe, not less, however, than 2 per centum per annum upon the average monthly amount of such deposits. (R. S. § 5234; May 15, 1916, c. 121, 39 Stat. 121; Aug. 23, 1935, c. 614, § 339, 49 Stat. 721.)

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1942

No. 497

A. M. ANDERSON, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, Petitioner,

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, Administratrix of the Estate of David J. Abbott, deceased, et al., Respondents.

REPLY BRIEF FOR PETITIONER.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT.

Respondents' brief does not challenge, in any respect, the "Preliminary Statement", or the "Facts of the Case", set forth (pp. 2-37) in petitioner's brief. It does not claim that the substance of the Bill of Complaint, at page 6 of our brief, is not fairly and accurately stated. It does not challenge a single fact in our brief with respect to the unhealthy financial condition of the National Bank of Kentucky. It asserts four technical defenses, severally dealt with later herein, to the Receiver's claim, viz:

(1) Corporate entity of Banco shields respondents.

(2) Respondents did not transfer with knowledge of impending insolvency.

(3) Laurent v. Anderson is conclusive adjudication that Banco, not the respondents, is the real bank stock holder; and that Receiver, by having sued Banco, is barred, under the doctrine of election, from proceeding here against the respondents.

(4) Atherton v. Anderson is conclusive adjudication of the case as to the bank directors.

Respondents' brief, under the caption "The Nature of Receiver's Claim" (pp. 5-10) seeks to make it appear that during the progress of the case petitioner has been inconsistent in the legal theories upon which he bases his right of recovery. This is not fair and is not correct. The statutory liability of national bank shareholders for what became popularly known as the "double assessment" is set forth in Sections 63 and 64 of Title 12, United States Code.

We have never contended that the respondent stockholders of Banco are the record, as distinguished from the real, owners of the bank shares, or that they are liable because they exchanged bank shares for Banco shares within sixty days of the bank failure. It would have been a simple case indeed had the bank failed within sixty days after Banco started. 12 U. S. C. 64.

The officer and director stockholders of the bank knew, or should have known, at the very time and long before the exchange for Banco shares, that the bank was in trouble and they might well be held liable for the assessment under the "with knowledge of impending failure" provision of Section 64. We do not seek to hold a few of the stockholders on this narrow ground. It would be of little advantage to the depositors who are the real plaintiffs in this case. We seek to hold every respondent because, as we view the law, the stockholders of a tottering national bank cannot escape liability for double assessment by the exchange of their bank shares for their own holding company shares a few months before it fails, all the while retaining every vestige of control, advantage and opportunity for profit out of the operation of the bank.

We have never been "inconsistent" as to the alternative theories of recovery. They are set forth in the Bill of Complaint (R. 1, p. 56) and summarized at page 6 of our original brief. We have never "indignantly disclaimed" a right of recovery under the "with knowledge of impending failure" clause of Section 64 for the reason that we never made such claim in the first place. It is, and always has been, our claim that the respondents never did part with their interests in the bank. They exchanged a certificate evidencing ownership in the bank for another certificate evidencing the same ownership in the same bank. They never sold their bank stock. They were quite careful not to sell it. They would have been subject to a large income tax liability had they sold it. They called the exchange transaction a "re-organization" (Ex. V, 3, p. 1140). As their lawyer stated, they received back "the same property in another form" (Ex. V. 3, p. 1157) and, as their lawyer further stated, they did not "part with one species of property in exchange for an entirely different species of property". If this be true, and it cannot be questioned, it is submitted that there never was a "transfer" within the meaning of Section 64.

We never "abandoned" what respondents at pages 6, 7, of their brief, referred to as our "fifth ground", for the obvious reason that we never saw or heard of that "ground" until it was printed in their brief in this court. Our position, before this court, is exactly the same as it has been from the beginning of the case.

COMMENT ON RESPONDENTS' FACTS.

At page 1 of respondents' brief, BancoKentucky Company is referred to as a "non-banking corporation". This statement, though technically correct, is quite misleading. Banco was not incorporated as a bank. It was, however, created by resolution of the Board of Directors of National Bank of Kentucky. It did not take the significant and similar name "BancoKentucky" in order to disassociate itself from its creator. The very name evidences the fact that the respondents by the exchange were staying in, instead of going out of, the banking business.

At page 2 it is stated that we "alleged" that BancoKentucky "had acquired by purchase" the bank stock. We never made any such allegation. BancoKentucky did not purchase the bank stock. It acquired the certificates under a so-called non-taxable exchange by virtue of which the respondents retained the same interest in the bank and banking business that they had before.

At page 3, it is stated that the District Court "sustained the Receiver's claim" that the holders of the trust certificates were "the actual and real owners of the bank shares" and that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals likewise so held. The Receiver has consistently claimed that the trust certificate holders were the record owners of the bank stock and that the stockholders of BancoKentucky were the real owners. A detailed statement of what was litigated, and what was decided, in the Keyes, (1 F. Supp. 512) and Laurent (70 F. (2d) 819) cases is made elsewhere in this brief.

At page 5, and elsewhere in respondents' brief, it is stated that the double liability section of the National Bank Act was repealed in 1933. Sections 63 and 64 have not been repealed. An additional section, enacted in 1933, known as Section 64a, provides that the additional liability shall not apply with respect to shares issued after June 16, 1933. It further provides that such additional liability shall cease on July 1, 1937 as to any bank open at that date, providing six months' published notice be given. The comptroller's records show that there are over fifty national banks in operation today which still have the double liability. Concededly Sections 63 and 64 are in full force and effect with reference to the respondents. A similar double liability still remains on the stockholders of Federal Farm Loan Banks (12 U. S. C. 872).

At page 15 it is stated that the exchange of bank for Banco stock was upon the "double" condition that the bank shareholders would acquire a majority of Banco and Banco should acquire a majority of the bank. There was a third condition attached to the deal. This provided that Banco "be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks". Respondents did not put the third condition in their brief because to do so would seriously, if not conclusively, destroy their claim that Banco was not a bank stock holding company but was a self-sufficient business or operating corporation. If Banco was the type and kind of independent corporation claimed for it by the respondents, why would it surrender its sovereignty to a Board of Directors or the officers of a national bank? And upon what authority, anyway, can a national bank undertake to manage and operate a BancoKentucky?

At pages 15 and 16 an attempt is made to explain why the exchange of bank stock for Banco was a sale for assessment purposes but not a sale for income tax purposes. In reading this explanation we ask this court to consider something that the respondents carefully omitted. Mr. Vaughan, lawyer and counsel for the bank, who handled the deal, testified that when a bank stockholder exchanged bank stock for Banco, he received back "the same property in another form" (R. 3, p. 15). We submit that the exchange of bank stock for Banco stock simply cannot be a "reorganization" to escape taxes and a sale to escape this assessment.

At page 17, it is correctly stated that over five hundred thousand bank shares were exchanged for over a million Banco shares. They say that the bank shares were selling at $47.00 per share and that the interim receipts in the exchange sold at $50.00 per share. They calculate therefrom that Banco had an "invested capital" of more than $27,000,000.00. To this they add the cash subscriptions and therefore conclude that Banco had an invested capital of $37,000,000.00. They say nothing about Banco rigging the market on its own shares. They say nothing about the fact that nearly all the cash subscriptions came out of the two banks on loans made on the sole security of Banco stock. The statement referred to here that Banco had an invested capital of nearly $37,000,000.00 read as though it came out of "Brewsters Millions". A mere statement of the fact that it all disappeared in one year is sufficient.

Again it is stated at page 17, that the directors subscribed more for additional Banco shares than their assessment would have been on their original bank shares. This statement is quite true. When a stockholder of a bank, whether he be a director or not, enlarges his investment he increases his contingent liability for assessment. But this is not all. He also gets a larger "interest" in the bank.

At pages 17 and 18, it is pointed out that there were shareholders of Banco who never owned stock in the National Bank of Kentucky. This is perfectly true. Some of this class of shareholders purchased their Banco stock in the open market. Others were stockholders of the small banks in the chain. No distinction as to liability can be made between the two classes. The outsider, who purchased Banco shares, knew that Banco was a bank stock holding company; knew that he was buying an interest in a whole chain of banks, because, as stated in our original brief, Banco was publicized far and wide, listed on the stock markets, and quoted in all the newspapers as bank stock.

At page 18 the stock market crash of October 29, 1929 is inserted. This insertion is made no doubt to lead the court to believe that the stock market crash had something to do with the failure of the National Bank of Kentucky. As pointed out in our original brief, the long-standing loans and overdrafts, criticized by the Bank Examiners, caused the bank's failure. Loans made on the security of listed stock market shares had nothing to do with it. Neither did the stock market crash. Likewise the loss of 38 per cent of the Bank's deposits came before the market break.

At page 19 the proposed, but never consummated, deal for Banco to acquire a half interest in the insolvent Caldwell & Company is suggested to this court as a cause of the failure of the bank. As we stated in our original brief, this was a frantic last-minute attempt (R. 3, p. 12) of Brown to save Banco by going into partnership with Caldwell and of Caldwell to save Caldwell & Company by going into partnership with Brown. Upon what other theory, using respondents' own words, would Banco, without an appraisement or audit, rely upon Caldwell's guarantee that he had a net worth of $9,000,000.00? The Caldwell assets were never appraised. The whole Caldwell deal was never consummated and consequently the transaction is not pertinent in any way to this case.

At pp. 20, 21, and the top of 22 there is quoted some articles from the Louisville Courier Journal with reference to rumors about Caldwell & Company and the negotiations between Caldwell and Banco. It is claimed that this publicity brought large withdrawals from the National Bank of Kentucky and caused its failure. In our original brief we pointed out that the withdrawals upon the National Bank of Kentucky began prior to April 23, 1927 and that at the time Banco Kentucky was formed, its deposits had already shrunk from fifty-six to thirty-five million, or over 38 per cent.

At various places in their brief respondents suggest that because the National Bank Examiner or the Comptroller of the Currency did, or did not do, something about the rotten condition of National Bank of Kentucky, that therefore, by some mysterious mental process, they as stockholders of the bank should not be held liable for the assessment. At the bottom of p. 11 of respondents' brief is set out the capital, surplus, and undivided profits of the bank representing a total of $6,442,738.73. At p. 12 they set out the undivided profits at thirteen different quarterly periods from September '27 to September '30. From the statements it is hoped that this court will believe that throughout all this period of time the National Bank of Kentucky was a great big powerful bank. We point out that these figures, as to capital, surplus, and undivided profits, are "book figures", and do not represent actual values.

At various places in their brief respondents say that the Comptroller "approved" a dividend (p. 11); or "congratulated" somebody on the "affiliation" of Louisville Trust with the "splendid" National Bank of Kentucky (p. 11); that dividends were "reported" to the Comptroller of the Currency and that the Bank Examiner "approved the same" (p. 11). They say that such dividends were never "criticized" by the Comptroller (p. 12); that the Comptroller "placed" the bank in receivership (p. 22), omitting any reference to the fact that the directors closed the bank and asked the Comptroller to take charge of it (Ex. V. 1, p. 1); they say that the Bank Examiner "approved" the June, 1930 dividend and that he did not "mention" the September, 1930 dividend (p. 23).

All of these sly suggestions are calculated to lead this court to believe that the "book" statements of the bank were the "true" statements of the bank; and that, because the Comptroller or the Bank Examiner did not make them stop paying dividends, he is in some way responsible for the failure of the bank, and that therefore they are not liable for the assessment which the Comptroller of the Currency subsequently found necessary to levy. The court's attention is directed to the fact, as evidenced by the Bank Examiner's report, that the Comptroller and the Bank Examiner continually called attention to the excessive overdrafts, the illegal loans, the large amount of slow and overdue paper. It is only by ignoring these criticisms, and by considering that all of these criticized loans and overdrafts were worth par, instead of being substantially worthless, that they are able to show that the bank had any surplus or undivided profits at any time throughout the entire period.

Beginning at p. 7 of our original brief, and running through to p. 23 thereof, we have called the attention of the court to the true condition of the bank during this period. Respondents in their brief do not question these facts. They could not do so, because every fact stated therein about the condition of the National Bank of Kentucky rests upon unquestioned written evidence found right in the records of the bank itself. Instead they seek to base their argument on book values as shown in published statements. In criticizing the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Bank Examiner, they forget that the legal responsibility for running a national bank rests upon the stockholders and their agents, the directors. In the period in question the Comptroller of the Currency was much more limited than he is today in his power of supervision. Then he could "criticize" and that is about all that he could do, unless he should make a finding of insolvency and close the bank; a very great responsibility which he should not exercise except when he was absolutely sure of his ground. When the officers of the National Bank of Kentucky assured him that these criticized loans were all right; or that they would in the course of reasonable time be taken care of, he had a right to rely upon their good faith; and give them an opportunity to clean up their bank. A bank should not be closed as long as there is reasonable grounds to believe that it can be saved. And it was the management which induced the Examiners to postpone charge-offs on the promise to clean up the losses by various in futuro plans never carried out.

Respondents' Creature, Banco, Does Not Shield Them from Liability.

In contending that the "corporate entity of Banco is a "non-conductor" respondents' brief (pp. 38-52) takes the position that because Banco was a corporation, this court cannot look beyond it; that since the bank shares were the "property" of Banco and since the respondent shareholders do not have "an interest in its property" therefore no liability attached to the property can be "attributed" to them. If this theory were the law, all the bank-stock holding company cases, cited in our main brief (pp. 45-56) were wrongly decided. This would be putting form before substance, wipe away the rule of "fair play", disregard "standards of common decency and honesty" and make the road wide open to evade numerous statutes by the simple "intervention of a corporate entity" between the real owner and the liability. (Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295.)

Respondents' brief at p. 48 states that there was no "arrangement by which the conduct of the affairs of Banco could be controlled in any degree by any bank whose shares were held by Banco". No record authority is cited for this statement. We challenge the statement because the record does show affirmatively that it was "essential" that Banco be "managed and operated" by the banks (See Prospectus, bottom of p. 64, our original brief).

At p. 49 it is stated that "Banco derived income from other sources than the bank shares held by it." We challenge this statement by saying that Banco's total income was from bank stocks, except $3457.40 which came to it principally as interest on unpaid stock subscription.

On the same page, 49, respondents say "it was only because of Banco's income from other sources that it was able to declare and pay the dividends which it paid to its stockholders". As pointed out at the bottom of p. 37 of our original brief, Banco received $1,180,858.50 in dividends from its bank stocks, paid $1,253,530.00 in dividends to its stockholders, and made up the deficit by an overdraft on the National Bank of Kentucky, which remained in the Bank at the time of its failure.

BancoKentucky was not the type and kind of a corporation referred to in Klein v. Tax Supervisors, 282 U. S. 19, and in Puerto Rico v. Russell, 288 U. S. 476, or in Cannon

v. Cudahy, 267 U. S. 333. BancoKentucky was more like the Northern Securities Company v. U. S. 193 U. S. 197.

Banco was a corporate scheme of Respondents to do indirectly what they could not do directly. National Bank of Kentucky could not lawfully have a branch bank outside of Louisville. 12 U. S. C. 36. It could not even have one in Louisville, without the Comptroller's permission. 12 U. S. C. 36c. It could not lawfully own stock in another bank. 12 U. S. C. 24. Kentucky law absolutely forbids anyone, corporation or individual, from owning more than 50 per cent of the stock of a Kentucky bank or trust company. Ky. St. 581, 609. Both state and Federal laws prohibited consolidations or mergers of banks except under careful statutory supervision. 12 U. S. C. 34a; Ky. St. 555. Loan limits were rigidly fixed. 12 U. S. C. 84; Ky St. 583. Interlocking directors were prohibited. 15 U. S. C. 19, 12 U. S. C. 462. Bank directors were required to own outright and unincumbered stock of the par value of $1,000.00; in a little bank $500.00. 12 U. S. C. 72, 73. Foreign corporations were required to qualify in Kentucky. Ky. St. 571, 4189-1. The Banco scheme was a planned attempt to circumvent at least some of these salutary statutes, in addition to the assessment statute. 12 U. S. C. 63, 64. We so charged in the bill of complaint. (R. 1, p. 66.)

The record shows that it was an "essential part" of the scheme that Banco "be managed and operated" by the banks. (Ex. V. 3, p. 1139.) The scheme also provided that Banco would "exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank or trust company has authority to exercise." So, therefore, it was planned from the beginning that the two banks should use Banco as an instrumentality to do indirectly what they could not do directly.

And this is exactly what the banks did, using their creature BancoKentucky as the instrumentality. They bought a chain of banks in Ohio and Kentucky. National Bank of Kentucky through its President directed the operation of each of these banks which were nothing but branches or links in the chain of banks. The scheme was a direct and immediate violation of the Kentucky Anti-Monopoly Bank Act in that Banco held more than 50 per cent of Louisville Trust, Central Savings, First National of Paducah, Ashland National, Security, and Mechanics. See p. 28, our original brief. Ky St. 581, 609. Brown, President of National Bank of Kentucky, served as a director of every one of the chain of banks, a violation of the interlocking director statute. 15 U. S. C. 19; 12 U. S. C. 462. Banco never did qualify to do business in Kentucky. It never paid its foreign corporation license tax. It never filed its foreign corporation reports. It was an "outlaw" corporation so far as the State of Kentucky was concerned. Ky. St. 571, 4189-1, Ex. 69b.

In the light of the above we submit that BancoKentucky Company, instead of being as they claim a "nonconductor", is exactly the type of corporation that a court of equity will look through or disregard in order to protect the innocent depositors of the bank. Certainly a court of equity will not permit the respondents, creators of Banco, to use it as a shield to protect them from the statutory individual liability.

In March, 1927 a letter was addressed to the Comptroller of the Currency (Ex. 11-1, p. 154, V. 1) advising that it was in contemplation to consolidate the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company. The Comptroller of the Currency wrote back promptly on March 22, 1927 (Ex. 11-2, p. 155, V. 1) in which he stated:

> "If the Louisville Trust Company desires to consolidate with the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville as proposed the consolidation can be effected under the Act of February 25, 1927. You are advised, however, that under the rules of this office it will be necessary for an examination to be made of the trust company prior to approval of the proposed consolidation."

The respondent bank stockholders did not want the Louisville Trust Company examined by the National Banking Department. They were already having too much trouble with the examinations of the National Bank of Kentucky. When they found out, as they did by this letter, that they could not consolidate Louisville Trust and the National Bank of Kentucky without a Comptroller's examination they undertook to do indirectly what they could not do directly. They "unified" the two banks by putting the stocks of both in the hands of trustees and issued to the stockholders the so-called Trustees Participation Certificates, which were nothing but bank stock.

Two years later, when it became obvious that the unification of the two banks did not restore them to public confidence they started BancoKentucky. By this time a 38 per cent deposit withdrawal, plus continued and more persistent criticism of overdrafts, excessive and slow loans, made it obvious that the National Bank of Kentucky was in a precarious condition; that its ultimate failure was in the offing, unless something substantial was immediately done. So Banco was proposed to escape the charge-offs which the Bank Examiner demanded and which, if made, would have wiped out surplus and undivided and part, if not all, of the capital.

Just about this time somebody thought of the double liability. So when they fixed up the papers they cleverly, so they thought, undertook to do two inconsistent things. They wanted to keep the exchange from being a legal sale so that they would not have to pay income tax. At the same time they wanted to call it a sale so that they could escape the assessment liability.

They were very careful and deliberate as to both schemes. It all appears crystal clear upon an examination of the testimony of their lawyer-witness, Robert F. Vaughn. He said at R. 3, p. 14, that every stockholder of the National Bank of Kentucky who purchased his bank stock at par would have had a taxable gain of $700.00 per share "if it was an outright sale." He said at p. 15 that if they would carry out the transaction as he proposed "it would be a mere receipt of the same property in another form". He said at p. 16 that "it was just an exchange of one kind of paper for another kind of paper". He said, at the top of p. 17:

> "The same identical people were in control of both the bank stock and the new corporation before Banco and after Banco."

He said at the middle of p. 18 that "this thing was not done hurriedly", and that "it was done deliberately". He said at p. 22 that the National Bank of Kentucky "was at the very outset under criticism of the National Bank Examiner" and at p. 28, "of course, everybody knew the Wagon Works was a sore spot in all of the banks". He said, at p. 32, that the objective of BancoKentucky was "the acquisition of a large group of banks". At p. 33 he said that he subscribed for some Banco stock himself and "I borrowed the money to pay for these subscriptions from the National Bank of Kentucky". He said, at p. 35, "for all practical purposes the owners of the Trustees Participation Certificates were the owners of the bank stock. And the owners of the bank stock, these two banks, had legal control of the BancoKentucky Company".

In the Detroit Bankers case the distinguished Detroit lawyer who wrote the papers in that matter, said that the holding company stock was "bank stock pure and simple". It is submitted that Mr. Vaughn's testimony makes it equally clear that BancoKentucky stock was also "bank stock pure and simple".

BARBOUR v. THOMAS.

86 F. (2d) 510.

Respondents' brief at p. 8 refers to the fact that we failed to convince the lower court of the "similarity" between the case at bar and the decision in the Detroit Bank stock holding company case, Barbour v. Thomas. Beginning at p. 43 of their brief they undertake to distinguish between the Detroit case and the case at bar. We adhere to our contention that the facts in the two cases are substantially identical. We invite careful comparison of the two cases. We respectfully submit that the asserted difference in the facts is immaterial; and that the decision in the Detroit case should have controlled the Louisville case.

Respondents' brief at p. 45 refers to Judge Hicks' "careful and detailed analysis of the extraordinary nature" of one of the Detroit Bank stock holding companies, namely: Detroit Bankers. They say: "It was, indeed, a bankers company". What was BancoKentucky but a "bankers" company? The name "BancoKentucky" indicates of itself that it was a "bankers" company. It is not a coincidence that holding company names such as Bank America Company, Northwest Bancorporation, BancOhio, Detroit Bankers, and Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., indicate that the corporations are primarily engaged in holding the shares of banks. Is it not more than a coincidence that such holding companies in adopting a name selected one practically synonomous not only with the banking business but quite similar to the principal bank in the chain? Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. took its name from the Guardian Detroit Bank and the Union Guardian Trust Company, the two big links in its chain. Bank America Corporation carries the name of its cornerstone bank. BancOhio is built around the Ohio National. Northwest Bancorporation takes its name from the territory in which it operates. The name "Detroit Bankers Company" was less closely associated with the name of its principal bank, First National Bank-Detroit, than any of the group mentioned. BancoKentucky was directly named after the National Bank of Kentucky, which was always known as Bank of Kentucky. As stated in our original brief, BancoKentucky was listed and sold on the stock markets and publicized in the newspaper quotations as a bank stock. Therefore we submit that the argument fails in its attempt to show that Detroit Bankers was and that Banco was not "a bankers company".

On the same page of respondents' brief it is stated with reference to Detroit Bankers that > "It was, essentially and exclusively, an instrumentality of the five constituent banks, by which it was conceived, organized, financed, dominated and ultimately dissolved."

This statement quoted above is correct as to Detroit Bankers but it is equally correct as to BancoKentucky. The only distinction is that in the Detroit Bankers there were five banks at the time of its organization and in BancoKentucky there were only two banks, National Bank and Louisville Trust. BancoKentucky was "essentially and exclusively an instrumentality" of the two banks. In fact the Banco prospectus used the very word "essential," viz.:

> "It is an essential part of this organization that the shares of this corporation (or at least a substantial majority thereof) be owned by the trustees participation shareholders, and that it be managed and operated by the Board of Directors and the officers of the two banks."

BancoKentucky was "conceived" by the two banks. The conception took place in meetings of the Board of Directors of National Bank of Kentucky held on June 7 and June 21, 1929, a record of which appears on the bank minutes (See minutes and resolutions printed in full at p. 23 of our original brief). Banco was "organized" by the two banks. See the prospectus printed as Appendix A, p. 63 of our original brief. Note at p. 66 the signatures of the two banks and at p. 67 the signatures of the directors. And bear in mind that the directors of the two banks were identical and that after Banco was formed the same directors also became the directors of Banco.

Banco was "financed" by the two banks because over $7,000,000 out of the $9,000,000 new money put into Banco came out of the two banks by way of loans upon the security of Banco stock (Ex. V. 4, p. 1934).

Banco was "dominated" by the two banks because it was "an essential part" of the scheme "that it be managed and operated by the Boards of Directors and the officers of the two banks."

And finally Banco was "ultimately dissolved" by the two banks because when the Banco Board, which was identical with the Board of Directors of the National Bank and Louisville Trust Company voted to suspend they brought the whole structure down like a house of cards, including Banco and the whole chain of constituent banks. This is exactly what took place at Detroit with the Detroit Bankers and the Guardian Group chains; exactly what Solicitor General Lehmann prophesied would happen so far back as forty years ago.[1]

Respondents also, at p. 45, say that Detroit Bankers was in "absolute control" of the constituent banks for five years. BancoKentucky, according to the "essential" plans, was always to be "managed and operated" by the two banks. At p. 46 it is pointed out that Detroit Bankers operated through "service charges" on the constituent banks. BancoKentucky operated on overdrafts at the National Bank of Kentucky and by using, without remuneration, the facilities and clerical force of the National Bank. It did this because it had no facilities or clerical force of its own. At p. 46 respondents suggest that Detroit Bankers was controlled through "puppets" of the banks. National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company controlled Banco directly without the aid of "puppets"; a distinction without difference.

There is but one significant and pertinent distinction between the two cases on the record. The stockholders of the Detroit Banks honorably obligated themselves by contract to respond for any assessment levied upon any of the constituent banks. The Louisville stockholders by seeking to make their stock "non-assessable" and by writing into their Articles of Incorporation that their private property should be exempt from liability, were seeking to escape the very responsibility which the Detroit stockholders honorably assumed.

To permit the respondent stockholders of a tottering bank, without knowledge or sanction of the depositors to interpose their own corporate creature, Banco, between themselves and the double liability would be a direct violation of the "rules of fair play" pointed out in Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, at p. 311. Certainly the stockholders of a failing national bank cannot "avail" themselves of their own "corporate device" to the "detriment" of the innocent depositors; and this must be particularly true when they seek the evasion or circumvention of a statute passed for the security of the depositors. The "rules of fair play" do not permit them to do "indirectly through the corporation" what they could not do "directly" as individuals. No matter how "meticulous" they may be in following legal forms or "technical requirements" in such cases, equity will "intervene" to keep them from getting away with it, because it is not "fair play."

It is claimed as a distinction between the Barbour v. Thomas and the case at bar that no "new money" went into Detroit Bankers but that over $9,000,000 "new money" went into BancoKentucky. We challenge the statement that "new money" went into BancoKentucky. Over $7,000,000 of it came out of the two banks on loans made on the security of Banco stock. We don't think this was "new money." In any event in the companion Detroit case to Barbour v. Thomas, Deming v. Schram (7 F. Supp. 271), $7,500,000 of really new money went into that bank stock holding company and the court made no distinction in its judgment. In Nettles v. Rhett (94 F. (2d) 42), new money was put in the holding company and its stockholders were held liable.

It is claimed, and the Court of Appeals opinion (Anderson v. Abbott, 127 F. (2d) 696, p. 700) also points this out as a distinction between Detroit Bankers and BancoKentucky, that none of the stock of Detroit Bankers was sold to the public. This statement is not exactly correct. Detroit Bankers stock was listed and actively dealt in on the Detroit Exchange and many of the defendants in that case purchased their stock in the open market. It is true, however, that none of the stock of Detroit Bankers was originally offered to the public whereas in Banco the public buyers were to some extent original subscribers. But what difference does all this make anyway? If Banco-Kentucky stock represents bank stock, and we submit that it does under the facts of this case, the holder of Banco stock becomes, for the purpose of the statute in question here, liable for the assessment regardless of whether he acquired it by exchange or by purchase in the market. The district court so found (R. 1, p. 155). See also Ullrich v. Thomas (86 F. (2d) 678). (Cert. den. 301 U. S. 692.) When the investor bought Banco stock he knew he was buying bank stock; not stock in one bank but stock in every one of the whole BancoKentucky chain of banks. He must have known this because Banco was listed on the exchanges and quoted in the newspapers always as bank stock. Even if the contention was sound it would still result in holding the original bank shareholders. Certainly they could not escape liability because a few people on the outside bought Banco stock.

The lower court in its attempt to distinguish the Barbour v. Thomas case, p. 700, recites that the only assets of Detroit Bankers was bank stock and that the expense of Detroit Bankers was borne by the levy of a service charge on the various banks, and it is pointed out that therefore there was no substantial assets for the protection of the bank depositors with reference to the assessment statute and then intimates that Banco had substantial assets other than bank stocks. In answer to this statement we refer the court to our original brief, pp. 27 to 31 inclusive, where it is definitely shown that all the assets that Banco ever had were bank shares except a few shares in the Union Central Life Insurance Company and where it is shown that all the business that Banco ever transacted was connected with its business of holding bank stocks. It never had investments in anything except bank stock.

Another distinction that the lower court pointed out between the two cases was that in the Detroit case the stockholders assumed double liability by their Article 9 whereas in Banco they not only made no such assumption but also affirmatively sought to negative liability by making their shares "non-assessable." It is submitted that an attempt to evade the statute violates the rule of fair play which estops the one who makes the attempt from taking advantage of it. Again the lower court at p. 701 attempts to distinguish the two cases by saying that Banco operated on a broader scope, both territorially and in corporate financing than did the holding company involved in Barbour v. Thomas. As to this suggested difference we point out that the only territorial difference was that Detroit Bankers operated only in Michigan while BancoKentucky operated in Kentucky and Ohio. The only difference "in corporate financing" outside of the holding of bank stocks was that Banco owned a few shares of life insurance company stock. The "loan" to Brown and the other "operations" are all set forth at pp. 30 and 31 of our original brief. Examination of these will show that except for the fact that it owned banks in two States Banco operated on a much narrower field than Detroit Bankers because Detroit Bankers owned controlling stock in many more banks than did BancoKentucky.

In our original brief, pp. 56 to 61, inclusive, we have analyzed and criticized in detail both the District Court and Court of Appeals opinions in the instant case. A further analysis of the Court of Appeals opinion is found in the petition for rehearing (R. 3, p. 327).

NO DEFENSE CAN BE BASED ON PRIOR CASES.

Less than twenty-four pages of the "argument" for respondents is devoted to the merits (pp. 33-57). More than half of respondents' 109-page brief is devoted to the claim that two prior cases enable the shareholders of this bank to escape the payment of their statutory liability on the ground that such cases represent "an election of remedies", or are "res judicata". The first of these two cases was a suit by the Receiver to recover judgment against the holding company as the record owner of the bank stock. This case is known as "Laurent (Receiver of Banco) v. Anderson" (Receiver of the Bank), 70 F. (2d) 819. The second case was a suit by the Receiver to impose liability upon the directors of the Bank for losses resulting from violation of their statutory duty and from negligence in the management of the Bank. This case is known as "Atherton v. Anderson", 86 F. (2d) 518; 99 F. (2d) 883. These defenses were held to be without merit in fact and unsound in law by the District Court in his opinion overruling defendants' motion to dismiss, reported in 23 F. Supp. 265 (R. 1, p. 144). A similar conclusion was reached by Judge Sullivan in overruling a motion to dismiss the bill of complaint filed in the Northern District of Illinois. Anderson v. Atkinson (22 F. Supp. 853). Upon the conclusion of the trial on the merits the District Judge adhered to his opinion that these technical defenses based on these two cases were devoid of merit (R. 1, p. 268)[1] and denied respondents' request for findings and conclusions of law upholding these defenses (R. 1, p. 283).

The respondents did not appeal from the decision of the District Court overruling the defenses based upon these two cases. Although these defenses were asserted in the Court of Appeals by way of argument, they were not considered meritorious by that court. We do not believe they are deserving of consideration here. However, in order that this court may have the benefit of a clear and correct statement of the issues involved, we discuss each separately.

[1] Conclusion of Law No. 13: "The judgment in Atherton v. Anderson, 86 F. 2nd 518, is not res judicata of the case and the defendant's pleas of res judicata, election, estoppel and estoppel by judgment should be overruled.

LAURENT v. ANDERSON.

70 F. (2d) 819.

As set forth in our main brief (p. 3), substantially all the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky at the time of its failure was held of record in the name of Banco. The failure of Banco and the banks held by it followed immediately the failure of the Bank. This was inevitable since a chain is no stronger than its weakest link and this is particularly true of bank chains—which rest on public confidence.

As soon as the assessment was levied upon the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky the Receiver was confronted with the duty to proceed to collect the assessment against both the record owner of the bank stock and against the real shareholders of the Bank insofar as he was unable to make the assessment against the record holders. Respondents argue that Banco was not a record holder of bank stock because the stock register listed the shareholders as the directors and the six trustees. The argument is fallacious. The exact language on the stock ledger recorded that the stock of the Bank stood in the names of the six trustees,

> "under trust agreement dated April 22, 1927." (R. 2, p. 77)

This trust agreement, thus incorporated by reference in the stock ledger, was actually filed with the Bank as provided in the participation certificates issued by the trustees (Ex. V(1, p. 28).

Furthermore, the trustees were required by the trust agreement to keep,

> "• • • a register of trustees participation certificates issued by them similar to the ordinary stock certificate book, showing the name and mailing address of each certificate holder, and shall certify a copy thereof to each institution (National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company) issuing stock to them." (Trust Agreement paragraph VI.) (Ex. 7, Vol. 1, p. 25.)

The above provision under which a register of the holders of trustees participation certificates was certified to and made part of the records of the Bank was in compliance with R. S. § 5210, 12 U. S. C. § 62.

It is thus clear that the stock records of the National Bank of Kentucky showed, first, that all of its stock was issued to the trustees under the trust agreement of April 22, 1927 and, second, that BancoKentucky Company was the record holder of 95 per cent of the trust certificates which represented the shares of the Bank. Disregarding mechanics, the Bank records showed clearly that the BancoKentucky Company held 95 per cent of the stock of the Bank.

However, since BancoKentucky Company was a holding company, conceived and organized by the Bank shareholders to hold their bank stock, the Receiver served by registered mail two separate and different notices of assessment and demand for payment—one on BancoKentucky Company as the record holder of bank stock, and the other on the shareholders of Banco as the true, real and beneficial holders of the bank stock. These two notices show that the position taken by the Comptroller of the Currency and the Receiver of the Bank has been continuously consistent from the day the assessment was levied to the present time. The first notice was directed to Mr. Joseph S. Laurent as Receiver of BancoKentucky Company and was dated March 20, 1931. After reciting that the Comptroller had levied an assessment upon the stockholders of the Bank for the par value of each share, the notice continued:

> You are holder of record of 540,484 trustees' participation certificates issued under the terms of a certain trust agreement of April 22, 1927, which said trustees' participation certificates represent the ownership of 37,721,624 shares of stock of The National Bank of Kentucky. You are, therefore, required to pay the assessment upon 37,721,624 shares of stock of The National Bank of Kentucky, represented by the aforesaid trustees' participation certificates in accordance with the foregoing order and this notice. Your prompt compliance will be a great benefit to creditors of this trust and will advance materially its early liquidation.

Notice to Banco

A second notice was sent out on the same day, also by registered mail, to each stockholder of BancoKentucky Company advising him of the levy of the assessment and then reciting:

> "A notice of such assessment and a demand for payment of the same has been served upon the Receiver of The BancoKentucky Company as the holder of 540,484 trustees' participation certificates, issued under a certain trust agreement of April 22, 1927, which trustees' participation certificates represent the ownership of 37,721,624 shares of stock in The National Bank of Kentucky. You will, therefore, take notice that it is the intention of the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, to proceed against you for the collection of the aforesaid assessment liability represented by the said trustees' participation certificates held by said BancoKentucky Company, to the extent that the undersigned, as Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky, is unable to collect said assessment from The BancoKentucky Company or its Receiver." (Ex. 1, p. 7; R. 1, pp. 69, 70.)

No objection was made by any shareholder of Banco to the above clearly defined course of procedure. Since the attempt to collect as much as possible from the holding company before resorting to the individual liability of shareholders was for their benefit, there was no reason the shareholders of Banco should not acquiesce in the course followed by the Receiver.

Pursuant to the foregoing notices and reservation of his right to collect any deficiency from the individual shareholders of Banco the Receiver commenced the action known as Laurent v. Anderson to collect the stock assessment from Banco as the record holder. This clearly appears from an examination of the petition filed October 31, 1931. After describing the plaintiff, defendant and the nature of the suit, the petition recites:

> The Banco Kentucky Company was at the time of the closing of The National Bank of Kentucky, and the appointment of the plaintiff as Receiver, the holder of > record of five hundred forty thousand four hundred eighty-four (540,484) Trustees Participation Certificates, having a par value of $10.00, which Trustees Participation Certificates were issued under the terms of a certain Trust Agreement of April 22, 1927, and which Trustees Participation Certificates represent the ownership of 37,721.624 shares of stock of The National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville, as hereinafter more fully set forth.

> (Deft. Ex. 23 Transcript of Record Laurent v. Anderson, p. 3)

Other language of the petition clearly shows that two issues were raised by the petition. First, that trustees' participation certificates represented the ownership of bank stock under the trust agreement and, second, that Banco was the record owner of such stock and hence liable as record owner and on its contract (Art. IX of the Trust Agreement) to pay the assessment. These claims were challenged by a general demurrer and answer filed by the Receiver of Banco. The answer contains a denial that,

> "* * * the said BancoKentucky Company owned any stock of the National Bank of Kentucky at any time, or that any trustees' participation certificates owned by BancoKentucky Company at any time represented National Bank of Kentucky stock."
> (Deft. Ex. 23 p. 10)

Banco further asserted in paragraph two of its Answer that the record shareholders were the trustees and that they alone were liable to the extent of the trust estate under 12 U. S. C. 66 of the federal banking law.

Thus, the main issue presented to the court for decision under the pleadings in Laurent v. Anderson was whether Banco or the trustees were the record owner of the bank stock. The respondents, stockholders of Banco, were not parties to that case. No facts were offered in evidence as to respondents. The court did not decide that respondents were, or were not, bank stockholders, record, or real. Such an issue was not before the court to decide. So when the court, in its opinion, speaks of the "real and beneficial" ownership theory of liability it was only with reference to the rights and responsibilities as between Banco and the trustees. Banco, in that case, as between it and the trustees, was both the real and the record owner of the bank stock. It was, so far as the record was concerned, the real stockholder because it was the beneficiary under the trust indenture. It was the record stockholder because its name was filed of record with the bank by the trustees under the provisions of the Bank Act. 12 U. S. C. 62.

An incidental question which arose under 12 U. S. C. § 66, was whether liability rested solely on the trustee to the extent of the trust estate or whether the beneficiaries of the bank stock trust were liable. The court held that the stock assessment liability rested upon the BancoKentucky Company as the beneficiary of the trust and the record holder of the bank stock.

Of the judgment thus obtained against Banco, as the record owner of the stock, a little more than ninety thousand dollars was collected, leaving a deficiency of nearly four million dollars. Acting pursuant to the notice previously given to shareholders of BancoKentucky Company (supra, p. 24), the Receiver then brought the present suit to recover from each his proportion of the deficiency amounting to approximately $2.30 per share. It is now claimed that the abortive attempt to realize the assessment from the defunct holding company was an election of remedies by the Receiver which bars the right of the depositors to pursue the real shareholders in the present case.

It is further claimed that the decision constitutes an adjudication that the corporate entity of Banco was the real shareholder of the National Bank of Kentucky. Neither claim is well founded in law.

Both the Record and Beneficial Holders of Bank Stock Are Liable.

From the outset the Comptroller of the Currency and the receiver considered both the holding company and its shareholders liable for the assessment. In this they are amply supported by the authorities. In the cases which have considered the liability of a holding company and its shareholders for the statutory assessment upon the stock of banks owned by the holding company, both have been held answerable. E. g., Metropolitan Holding Company v. Snyder, 79 F. (2d) 263 (C. C. A. 8, 1935); Corker v. Soper, 53 F. (2d) 190 (C. C. A. 5, 1931), cert. denied, 285 U. S. 540 (1932); Harris Investment Co. v. Hood, 123 Fla. 598, 167 So. 25 (1936); Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937); Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42 (C. C. A. 4, 1938); Flanagan v. Madison Square State Bank, 302 Ill. App. 468, 24 N. E. (2d) 202 (1939); Galinski v. Adler, 302 Ill. App. 474, 24 N. E. (2d) 205 (1939).

Respondents' argument is predicated on their failure to recognize that both the holding company and its shareholders are liable and that the liability is not in the alternative. Where both are liable suit and judgment against one, in the absence of satisfaction, does not affect the right to proceed against the other. Respondents' whole contention is well answered in Ericson v. Slomer, 94 Fed. (2d) 437 (C. C. A. 7, 1938):

> "It is our conclusion that the receiver of a national bank has a right to proceed against both the record and actual owner of the shares of stock in an attempt to collect the liability thereupon imposed. It seems both logical and reasonable that such procedure should be permissible. Under well-established law, both are liable. As to who shall carry the burden as between them is a matter with which we are not here concerned. Why should the receiver, at his peril, be required to select the one against whom he is to proceed and why should a proceeding against one be a bar to a proceeding against the other? He should not be so > required and neither should either of the parties whom the law makes liable be permitted to shield himself from such liability by asserting an unsatisfied judgment has been obtained against the other. To hold otherwise is to lay down the bars so that fraud may be committed upon the creditors of the bank. There can be required only one satisfaction of the stock liability. A judgment against either and a satisfaction, of course, would constitute a bar to a judgment against the other. A partial satisfaction would constitute a bar pro tanto." [94 Fed. (2d) 437, 441.]

Another case directly in point is Nettles v. Sottile, 184 S. C. 1, 191 S. E. 796 (1937). The receiver of the Peoples State Bank of South Carolina brought an action to collect the stock assessment against the Palmetto Brokerage Company, a holding company which appeared as the holder of 900 shares of the bank stock. After obtaining judgment against the holding company the bank receiver brought suit against its stockholders. The stockholders defended on the ground that the receiver had obtained judgment against the holding company and that such action constituted a recognition of the corporation as the true owner of the shares involved; and that:

> "(2) The right of action to enforce the liability attaching to the shares involved is single and cannot be split into separate suits against the corporation and its stockholders; (3) In the Biltrite case the depositor-plaintiffs had the option of asserting the liability against the corporation or its stockholders, and elected to seek and recover judgment against the corporation."

The court rejected these defenses, which are identical to those urged by the Respondents here, saying:

> "The judgment was against the corporation as the apparent owner of the shares herein involved. The purpose of the instant suit is to discover the true owners of these shares and to collect the liability thereto attaching. . . .

"Equity, in good conscience, will not countenance the use of the equitable defense of estoppel to further a wrong or work an injustice.

"The principle of equitable estoppel is based solely on the prejudice or injury to the one in whose behalf it is allowed because of the conduct of another. Defendants can show no prejudice to their rights nor injury to themselves in this case which would warrant the application of this principle.

"What has been said above applies with equal force to the defendants' claim of election of remedies. There has been no election. None was necessary. The primary right of the depositor-plaintiffs in the Biltrite case to enforce and collect the liability attaching to these 900 shares of stock is only being furthered by this proceeding under the authority of the court in the main action, to which this suit, as above shown, is supplementary or auxiliary.

"The depositors are the creditors and the true holders of these shares, the debtors. As creditors, the depositors have a right to pursue one or more remedies until the obligation is satisfied.

"The courts favor creditors and the payment of obligations, and they will not loosely interpose barriers in the way of collection of just debts. The pursuit of several remedies is fully recognized, though, of course there can be but one satisfaction." (191 S. E. 796, 798-9.)

The Supreme Court of South Carolina affirmed the lower court on this point:

". . . the court is satisfied with the conclusion that the plaintiff had the right to bring this action, and that he is not debarred from maintaining it by reason of having made an election of remedies." (191 S. E. 796, 808.)

In Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. (2d) 42, 44, the stockholders of The Peoples Investment Corporation, a bank stock holding company, argued that a prior judgment for stock assessment obtained against the holding company constituted an election of remedies and barred a subsequent action against them. The Court of Appeals rejected the argument, expressly approved the decision of the Supreme Court of South Carolina in Nettles v. Sottile, supra, and said:

> "This ruling in our opinion should be followed in the pending case. There was no election of an inconsistent remedy in the earlier suit."

A similar conclusion was reached in Continental National Bank v. O'Neil, 82 F. (2d) 650 (C. C. A.-7, 1936). In that case the court said that they could well understand the receiver's perplexity and that his course in suing both the record owner and the beneficial owner was "reconciliably consistent."

> "In both actions the true facts were stated, and the complexity arose because of the legal conception of division of ownership into legal and equitable."

Recently this court denied certiorari in the case of Reconstruction Finance Corp. v. Pelts, 123 F. (2d) 503 (C. C. A. 7, 1941) cert. den. 315 U. S. 812, where the court of appeals arrived at the conclusion that judgment against the record owner of bank stock did not prevent the receiver from proceeding against the real owner.

In another recent decision the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals has reaffirmed the doctrine that a judgment recovered against the record holder of bank stock for assessment liability does not bar a subsequent action to determine the real shareholder. Reconstruction Finance Corp. v. Barrett, 131 F. (2d) 745 (1942). In that case judgment was obtained against the record holder (Sundeen) who paid a small part of the judgment by way of compromise. It was claimed that this constituted a complete bar to recovery against one Barrett whom the court found to be the real owner of the shares registered in the name of Sundeen. In overruling this plea Judge Minton, speaking for the Court, said:

"We held in Ericson v. Slomer, 7 Cir., 94 F. 2d. 437, and in Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Pelts, 7 Cir., 123 F. 2d. 503, that judgment for the added stockholders' liability could be had against both the owner of record and the actual owner, but that there could be only one satisfaction. By that we meant there could be only one satisfaction of the liability evidenced by the amount in judgment. * * *

The satisfaction in the case at bar was only a pro tanto satisfaction.

The owner of record is liable because he is the owner of record and he will not be heard to deny his liability. The actual owner, though not of record, is liable because of the voluntary relationship he has assumed towards the stock as owner in fact. * * *

When the obligation to pay has been fully met, that is all the judgment creditor is entitled to, and until it has received that full satisfaction, it may pursue either or both of its judgment debtors. In seeking to collect the double liability of the stockholders, the plaintiff is trying to collect the whole of the established liability. It is not engaged in a mere game of recovering judgments. It is engaged in collecting money, not judgments."

To the same effect is Broderick v. Aaron, 151 Misc. 516; 272 N. Y. S. 219; aff. 242 App. Div. 604, 272 N. Y. S. 244, and 277 N. Y. S. 499:

"Nor is it necessary in an action of this character for plaintiff to elect between the liability of the agent or principal. This doctrine applies only where the decision to pursue the principal is inconsistent with a concurrent cause of action against the agent and usually operates where contractual obligations are involved. Georgi v. Texas Co., 225 N. Y. 410, 122 N. E. 238. Compare Phelps v. Wait, 30 N. Y. 78. The assessment liability is not contractual in the accepted legal sense of the term [Rogers v. Jarden (D. C.), 3 F. Supp. 211], but it is of statutory origin (Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 26 S. Ct. 502, 50 L. ed. 732; 5 Ann. Cas. 740; McClaine v. Rankin, 197 U. S. 154, 25 S. Ct. 410, 49 L. Ed. 702, 3 Ann. Cas. 500). A fixed and absolute liability is imposed by statute upon designated classes and categories of persons." [272 N. Y. S. 219, 236-7.]

See also Irvine v. Blackburn, 205 Fed. 217 (C. C. A. 3, 1913), certiorari denied 229 U. S. 622 (1913).

Respondents cite cases dealing with the general principle of election of remedies. These cases do not consider the situation of the receiver of an insolvent national bank seeking to recover an assessment for the benefit of depositors from a bank stock holding company and its shareholders. There is no inconsistency in his proceedings against both. All of respondents' cases have to do with situations where one or the other of two could be sued, but not both. The inapplicability of such decisions is evident. The only case involving stock assessment cited by respondents is Pottorff v. Dean, 77 F. (2d) 893 (C. C. A. 1, 1935). This case does not involve the liability of a holding company and its shareholders.

There the defendant Dean owned bank shares. She transferred the bank shares to trustees and divested herself of all interest therein. The receiver attempted to collect the assessment from the trustees. Subsequently he brought suit against defendant Dean. The court held that Dean had not been a stockholder in the bank for more than five years and that the receiver's suit against Dean was inconsistent with his prior action against the trustees. In the suit against the trustees the receiver recognized that Dean retained no interest in the assets transferred to the trust.

How different is the situation here. At the outset the Receiver served notice on the stockholders of Banco that he considered them the real shareholders of the Bank within the meaning of the assessment statutes, and he has never receded from that position. Unlike the situation in the Dean case, both Banco, as the record holder, and the stockholders of the holding company, as the real shareholders, must answer for the assessment. In all the Bank Stock holding company cases both the company and its shareholders have been held liable for the assessment. In none has it been held that an unsatisfied and uncollectible judgment against the holding company bars the receiver from enforcing the assessment against the individual shareholders.

Laurent v. Anderson Is Not Res Judicata of the Issues Here Nor Was There an Election.

Respondents argue that the Laurent case decided that the real owner of the stock was the corporate entity, BancoKentucky Company. They further argue that this negatives ownership by the stockholders because the holders of stock of a bona fide corporation are not the owners of the assets thereof. Respondents further say that, although they were not parties to Laurent v. Anderson, they were in privity with the corporation.

There are many difficulties with defendants' argument. Primarily, it starts with a false premise. In determining whether the doctrine of estoppel by judgment or res judicata is applicable, the courts have held that the issues of law and fact and the parties must be the same. The pleadings control the issues. We have previously pointed out that the pleadings in the Laurent case raised entirely different issues from those involved in the present suit, and the parties were entirely different. The transcript of the record in the Laurent case, including all the formal appeal papers, consists of less than fifty printed pages. The case was largely determined by a construction of the trust agreement and the principal question was whether the trustees' participation certificates were bank stock, a matter which is no longer questioned. In the Court of Appeals the respondents in their brief, at page 40, said:

> "The trustees' participation certificates are admittedly bank stock for the purpose of this case."

Defendants refer to certain language in the opinion and findings in Laurent v. Anderson and in the argument contained in some of the briefs to the effect that Banco was the real and beneficial owner of the trustees' participation certificates, which were held to be bank stock, but, as this court has warned:

> "The nature and extent of the former decree is not to be determined by seizing upon isolated parts of it or passages in the opinion considering the rights of the parties, but upon an examination of the issues made and intended to be submitted and what the decree was really designed to accomplish. . . ." Vicksburg v. Henson, 231 U. S. 259, 273 (1913).

Here, as in United Shoe Mach. Co. v. United States, 258 U. S. 451, 460 (1922), "the defendants in their argument seize upon isolated passages in the opinion of the court in the former case, and contend that they are decisive here." But here, as in that case "the effect of the former judgment as an estoppel is not to be thus determined" (ibid.).[1] Judge Hahn's language cannot be considered apart from the other language in the opinion above referred to, nor apart from the pleadings and the issue presented in the case, i.e., whether T. P. C.'s were Bank stock. The court had for determination whether beneficial interest in the trust evidenced by the T. P. C.'s enabled Banco to shift liability as record owner of the T. P. C.'s to the trust estate under the provisions of R. S. § 5152, 12 U. S. C. § 66. None of the defendants was a party to that case and the court did not decide or purport to decide whether the stockholders of Banco are the real and beneficial owners of the Bank's stock.

That a reading of Judge Hahn's entire opinion leaves no question about what was decided in the Laurent case is demonstrated by what Judge Sullivan said when he rejectd similar pleas of estoppel by judgment, res judicata and stare decisis in the action brought by the receiver in the Il-

[1] Again in Oklahoma v. Texas, 272 U. S. 21, 42 (1926), the Supreme Court admonished: "The effect of a decree as an adjudication conclusive upon the parties, is not to be determined by isolated passages in the opinion considering the rights of the parties, but upon an examination of the issues made and intended to be submitted, and which it was intended to decide." linois district court. As to these defenses, Judge Sullivan said in part:

> "Defendants urge that because the receiver of the bank originally brought a suit against the Banco-Kentucky Company, the holding company, for double assessment, on the ground that it was the record owner of the bank stock (Laurent v. Anderson, Receiver, 6 Cir., 70 F. 2d 819, 823), recovered judgment against the holding company, and collected approximately $90,000, he is now estopped from seeking to disregard the corporate entity of the holding company and enforcing the assessment against the present defendants as the actual and beneficial owners of the stock.
> "I agree, however, with plaintiff's contention that the issue in the present case on the liability of the individual stockholders of the holding company was not raised or considered in the Laurent case, supra. The question there before the court was the liability of the Banco-Kentucky Company; and the court held that it, the Banco-Kentucky Company, was liable, first, because of its agreement to pay the double assessment; and, secondly, because it was the record owner of the bank stock.
> "In my opinion the judgment against the Banco-Kentucky Company does not constitute res adjudicata, neither does it constitute estoppel against the plaintiff in the instant case, so as to prevent him from maintaining a suit against the real and beneficial owners of the bank stock." Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853, 860 (D. C. Ill., 1938).

On motions to dismiss, Judge Swinford also rejected these defenses stating: "In the case of Laurent v. Anderson, supra, the same matters were not directly in question. * * * I am of the opinion that res judicata is not a good defense. * * * The receiver is not compelled to make a choice, but has the right to pursue either or both ways of collecting the assessment." (R. I, pp. 151-3; 23 F. Supp. 265, 269-270.) Defendants again urged the same matters in their motion for additional findings of fact (R. I, pp. 268, 281-3). The motion was overruled (R. I, p. 283).

We submit that respondents' argument is not supported by the facts and is not sustained in principle or by the authorities. The unsatisfied and uncollectible judgment against Banco, as the record owner of 95 per cent of the trust certificates representing bank stock, ought not in justice and equity prevent the depositors from recovering from the defendants, as the real and actual shareholders of the Bank, the additional liability imposed by federal statutes.

ATHERTON v. ANDERSON.

86 F. (2d) 518.

The Above Case Is Not a Bar to the Present Action and Cannot Be Used as a Special Defense for 18 Director Defendants.

Atherton v. Anderson was an action commenced by the receiver of the bank against the directors of the National Bank of Kentucky (including officer and non-officer directors) to recover damages for losses sustained by the bank. The receiver alleges that these losses were due (1) to a violation by the directors of certain specific federal statutes governing national banks, and (2) to the negligence of the directors in the performance of their duties. The District Court found (1) that the officer directors were guilty of violation of the statutes and negligence, and (2) that the non-officer directors had violated certain of these statutes. The District Court did not pass on the common law negligence of the non-officer directors (7 F. Supp. 924; 9 F. Supp. 151; 11 F. Supp. 9). A large sum was found due from both officer and non-officer directors. The officer directors did not appeal. The non-officer directors appealed. The receiver did not file a cross-appeal. The Court of Appeals reversed the District Court except as to one relatively small item and refused to consider the alleged negligence of the directors on the ground that the receiver had not filed a cross-appeal. (86 Fed. (2d) 518.) This court granted certiorari (300 U. S. 652). After argument this court reversed the decision of the Court of Appeals and remanded the case, with directions to hear and determine the claim that the non-officer directors were liable on the ground of common law negligence (302 U. S. 643). The exact language used by this court was: "Per Curiam: The Court is of opinion that the Circuit Court of Appeals was in error in ruling that, in the absence of a cross-appeal, the question whether common law liability for negligence would support the decree was not before the court for review. The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and the cause is remanded to that court for the determination of that question."

After reversal of the decree, and upon reconsideration, the Court of Appeals held the non-officer directors liable for negligence with respect to large losses suffered by the bank, but found that there was no negligence or statutory violation with respect to an undue concentration of loans collateralled by Banco stock (99 Fed. (2d) 895). Following this decision the amounts involved were compromised. A decree was placed of record in the District Court, and upon payment to the receiver of $2,500,000, the receiver "acknowledged satisfaction in full of all claims asserted by him" (Case No. 649 Equity, District Court, Western District of Kentucky). As a result of the settlement the receiver gave up his right to have this court consider and decide questions as to which certiorari had previously been granted. Eighteen of the 2985 defendants in the assessment suit were defendants in the directors' suit.

These 18 former non-officer directors now assert that the reversed decree rendered as a result of the first Atherton opinion (86 Fed. (2d) 518) is res judicata of some of the facts with respect to such directors. (Respondents' Br. pp. 91, 101.) It is not claimed that this decree is res judicata with respect to the remaining 2967 defendants who were not parties to the Atherton case. (Respondents' Brief 91, 101.) It would seem obvious without further argument that no plea of res judicata can be based upon a reversed decree.

It would also seem obvious that the decree finally entered by agreement of the parties, or as a result of a compromise settlement, cannot be availed of as an authoritative determination of the issues of fact.

Regardless of the reversal and subsequent settlement of this case, both the parties and the issues involved therein were quite different from those involved in the present case. Nothing contained in the Atherton case bars the right of the Receiver in the present case to recover of these eighteen directors the assessment due on the stock owned by them. Both the cause of action and the capacity of the parties involved in the Atherton case was and is entirely different from the present case.

We shall first examine the difference in the cause of action and then the difference in the capacity of the respective parties. The cause of action against the directors was to recover for losses sustained by the bank due to loans made in violation of specific federal statutes and for common law negligence in the management of the bank. The claim of res judicata is based upon the decision that the directors in making loans on the security of BancoKentucky stock did not violate the specific provisions of Section 5201, R. S., 12 U. S. C. 83. This section provides that "no association shall make any loan or discount on the security of the shares of its own stock, nor be the purchaser or holder of any such shares unless such security or purchase shall be necessary to prevent loss upon a debt previously contracted in good faith." The court of appeals (86 F. (2d) 518, 535) construed this section strictly and held that while it prohibited loans on the security of shares of National Bank of Kentucky stock that it did not prohibit loans on shares of stock of a holding company which held the stock of many other banks in addition to the stock of the National Bank and therefore that the directors were not chargeable with a violation of the statute so construed. Subsequently the court held that there was no negligence based upon an undue concentration of loans on Banco stock (99 F. (2d) 883).

The above statute is not involved in the present case. Liability in the present case is predicated upon an entirely different section of the National Banking Act, to-wit, the assessment statutes which have been construed to impose assessment liability upon the beneficial owners of bank stock even though the same is held of record by others than the beneficial owners and even though the record owner may be a corporation which holds the stock of several banks. In the directors' suit the court said that the BancoKentucky Company was not a holding company solely for the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and therefore the statute with respect to loans on the bank's own capital stock was not violated. In the present case the Receiver does not claim that Banco was a holding company solely for the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky. Its congenital characteristic was that it should hold both the stock of the National Bank and also that of the Louisville Trust Company and it was intended to and did hold the stock of a group of banks in Ohio and Kentucky. It is axiomatic that the principle of res judicata cannot be applied unless there is an identity between the causes of action in the first and second case. This is recognized in the decisions cited by respondents—Southern Pacific R. R. v. U. S., 168 U. S. 1, 48; Tait v. Western Md. Ry. Co., 289 U. S. 620, 623.

The capacity of the parties in the present suit is different from the capacity in which the parties were aligned in the Atherton case. Obviously the defendants are sued in the present case in their capacity as the beneficial owners of bank stock and not for their actions as directors. Although the Atherton case was also a suit by the Receiver of the bank, the Receiver in that case brought suit against the directors in a different capacity. In the action against the directors the Receiver was suing on an asset of the bank. He sought to enforce the right of action which the corporation itself had against the directors. Falvey v. Foreman State Natl. Bank, 101 F. (2d) 409 (C. C. A. 7, 1939) cert. den. 307 U. S. 632 (1939); Wittnebel v. Loughman, 80

F. (2d) 222 (C. C. A. 2, 1935), cert. den. 297 U. S. 716 (1936); Michelsen v. Penney, 10 F. Supp. 537 (D. C. N. Y. 1934) and cases collected in Anno. 116 A. L. R. 783, 794.

The liability of stockholders under the assessment statutes is a fund created exclusively for the benefit of creditors. Hence in the present action the receiver appears as a statutory trustee for the exclusive benefit of creditors to enforce the liability of shareholders which "attaches and exists for the exclusive purpose of paying the creditors of the bank equally and ratably." Van Dyke v. Evans, 20 F. Supp. 640, 642 (D. C. Pa. 1937), aff'd. 97 F. (2d) 18; Robbins v. Mitchell, 107 F. (2d) 56, 57 (C. C. A. 9, 1939); Frank v. Giesy, 117 F. (2d) 122, 126 (C. C. A. 9, 1941); Lally v. Anderson, 194 Wash. 536, 78 P. (2d) 603, 604 (938); Nieman v. Bethlehem Natl. Bank, 113 F. (2d) 717, 718 (C. C. A. 3, 1940).

When the relationship and capacity of the parties is properly considered it appears that the Atherton suit, while conducted between some of the same individuals who appear in the present case, was not a suit between the same parties because such parties appear in an entirely different representative capacity. In such case the prior decision is not res judicata. Troxell, Admx. v. Del. Lack. R. R. Co. (1913), 327 U. S. 434.

THE ANOMALOUS POSITION OF RESPONDENTS, SUSIE E. TELLMAN, EMMA BISCHOFF, ET AL.

Several of the defendants in the District Court filed a peculiar pleading designated "Separate Answer, Counter-Claim and Cross Action of Henry M. Johnson, et al." (R. 1, p. 158) and later another paper styled "Amended Answer, Counter Claim and Cross Petition of Susie E. Tellman, et al" (R. 1, p. 168). It is somewhat difficult to determine what is intended by these papers. In the first separate answer of Henry M. Johnson, Susie E. Tellman, Frieda Gudex, Admr. etc., Paragraph 1 admits "that they acquired their stock solely by original subscription," but not in exchange for National Bank stock (R. 1, p. 158). Thus, it is admitted that these stockholders subscribed to the prospectus and plan of reorganization, and are original subscribers. This pleading answers the facts pleaded in the Bill by saying "that they do not know whether they are true or false, that one or the other is a fact, viz, that they are either true or they are false" (R. 1, p. 159). Then follows a so-called alternative pleading, that if the averments are not true then these defendants adopt a defense set forth by another defendant, Thomas Trammel, and if the allegations of the bill are true then these defendants say they may have been defrauded and would in such event wish to rescind their subscription of stock to the BancoKentucky Company and establish some kind of a set off claim against the Receiver.

The second pleading asks that the court treat "the procedure now in process in this action in the nature of a pretrial procedure" (R. 1, p. 168), and move the court for a summary judgment in favor of all those similarly situated against the bank Receiver, adjudging that defendants who subscribed for stock of the BancoKentucky Company and did not acquire the same by the exchange of bank stock have a claim against the assets of the bank for the amount paid for their stock and interest, from the date of payment (R. 1, p. 170).

No allegations of fact are alleged either in the so-called separate answer filed September 8, 1938, or the amended answer filed November 1, 1938. It is not admitted that the facts set forth by the Receiver are true nor are the facts denied. The pleadings are in the nature of an "if" argument; i.e., if certain facts are proved by somebody else, then, these defendants wish to rescind their purchase of stock in BancoKentucky Company and also recover not from that company but from the Receiver of the bank, the price of their stock.

To this alleged counterclaim and cross-action the receiver filed a reply alleging (1) that the so-called pleadings failed to allege any right or claim upon which relief can be granted; 2. A denial; 3. A denial of jurisdiction to entertain this type of pleading (R. 1, p. 171). Plaintiff prayed that the so-called counterclaim and cross-action be dismissed and that judgment be entered against these respondents as original shareholders of the BancoKentucky Company. No evidence was offered by these respondents in support of their so-called cross-action. Furthermore said respondents stated they did not wish to prosecute the same unless the court decided in favor of the receiver in the principal case. The District Court ordered that said counterclaims and cross-actions be dismissed (R. 1, p. 284).

Notwithstanding the disclaimer of any desire to prosecute said cross-action if the court decided against the receiver, these respondents filed a so-called cross-appeal from the order of dismissal, but in the statement of points (R. 1, p. 297) the cross-appellants again stated that the cross-appeal was only prosecuted if and in the event the Court of Appeals should reverse the lower court. The Court of Appeals affirmed the judgment below dismissing the counterclaim and cross-action of Tellman, et al. No further effort was made to review this portion of the order below. This court has not been asked to grant certiorari by the cross-appellants below.

The Alleged Counterclaim of Respondents Tellman, Bischoff, Et Al., Is Not Properly Before This Court.

A brief has been filed styled "Brief for the Appellees and Cross-Appellants Susie E. Tellman, Emma Bischoff and Other Class B Defendants Similarly Situated". The so-called counterclaim was dismissed by the District Court. On cross-appeal this order was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. No effort has been made to review, reverse or modify this part of the order below, which is now final. Certiorari was not asked by said cross-appellants. Under these circumstances, we submit the matters urged in the brief in their behalf are not properly before the court. This has recently been decided in LeTulle v. Scofield, 308 U. S. 415, 421 (1940):

> "A respondent or an appellee may urge any matter appearing in the record in support of a judgment, but he may not attack it even on grounds asserted in the court below, in an effort to have this court reverse it, when he himself has not sought review of the whole judgment, or of that portion which is adverse to him."

The pleading styled a counter claim is an anomalous proceeding without basis of fact or law. It is not supported by any evidence nor by the proffer of any evidence. It was only asserted contingently. The contingency was that the lower court make a finding which that court did not make. It is asserted only "if" the court hold Banco to be a fraudulent corporation. This is unique and unprecedented. Respondents make no positive claim and allege no facts. They present no record. No prejudice resulted from the dismissal of the alleged counter claim. There was in fact nothing from which a cross appeal could properly lie. Respondents make no complaint as to the decree entered in the lower court. We submit that under these circumstances there is no justiciable issue to be considered here.

Purchasers of Banco Stock Who Did Not Previously Own Bank Stock Are Liable for Their Proportionate Part of the Assessment.

The claim is made in the Tellman brief that the small percentage of stock owned by persons who had not previously owned bank stock should be considered in a separate category as "Class B" and that these shareholders should not be held liable for their proportionate part of the assessment because they were innocent of the "fraud", if any, of the bank in organizing Banco. It is further argued that if they are held liable for the assessment they should be granted a counterclaim against the Receiver of the bank.

The record shows that Tellman borrowed money from the bank and used it to pay for Banco stock (Ex. V. 5, p. 2147). No Banco stock was sold by the bank to Tellman or other stockholders. Tellman et al. contend that they should be considered "purchasers for cash of Banco stock made up of the outside public who had nothing to do with the organization of Banco" (Tellman brief, p. 5). This is not true with respect to Tellman. She was an original subscriber for Banco stock (Ex. 148). She signed the original subscription agreement (Ex. V. 3, p. 1142) for stock in accordance with the reorganization plan outlined in the letter of the trustees dated July 19, 1929. Other respondents aligned with Tellman had no dealing with the bank and even the imaginary basis for the hypothetical claim of Tellman is missing with respect to the others.

All purchasers of Banco knew of its purpose to acquire and hold a chain of banks. The record shows that this was widely advertised. Tellman and the other respondents whom she purports to represent participated in the published plan and will not be heard to say that they defrauded themselves. Tellman got exactly what she subscribed for—bank holding company stock.

Neither Tellman nor any of the respondents have ever rescinded their purchase of bank holding company stock nor tendered back the dividends which they collected thereon.

Only one subscriber who had not previously owned bank stock testified. He said that he knew Banco held bank stocks—"We were getting dividends. Certainly I was aware that they were interested in banks; everybody knew it. It was the general opinion * * * I would have to acknowledge I did learn that they owned practically all of it (stock of the National Bank of Kentucky) * * *" (R. 2, p. 214). He said he knew that at the time he was getting dividends and decided to keep his stock with that knowledge. (R. 2, p. 215.)

The same contention was made in one of the appeals growing out of Barbour v. Thomas. In the Detroit case it appeared that over eight per cent of the stock was acquired otherwise than by exchanging bank stock for holding company stock. (86 F. (2d) 510, 516.) It was claimed that this "otherwise acquired" group were not liable for assessment because they bought bank holding company stock after its organization. This claim was specifically overruled and the "otherwise acquired" group were held equally liable. In Ullrich v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 678, (C. C. A. 6, 1936), cert. den. 301 U. S. 692, (1937) the court said that they "in common with other stockholders of the holding company received dividends from it through this holding company" and could not escape the burdens which followed their beneficial ownership. (86 F. 2d. 678, 679.)

In the present case approximately ninety per cent of the shares of Banco were held by individuals who had previously held bank stock or subscribed to the original plan of reorganization. Approximately ten per cent was otherwise acquired. (R. 2, pp. 126-129.) None of the "otherwise acquired" group testified at the trial. None of them disclaimed knowledge that Banco's primary purpose was to acquire a chain of banks. The language of the Court of Appeals in Nettles v. Rhett, 94 Fed. (2d) 42, 48, is highly appropriate. "Given the fact that the holding company invested in nothing but bank stock and finally held nothing but stock of the bank created by the mergers, we cannot assume that the preferred stockholders had no knowledge of the condition of their investment."

In the instant case the testimony is that this knowledge was "public property." "Everybody knew what was going on all the time." (R. 2, p. 228.)

As Judge Sullivan said in the case pending in the Northern District of Illinois (22 F. Supp. 853): "Everyone dealing in the stock of Banco was bound to know what its assets consisted of, and knowing that such assets were the Trustees Participation Certificates which represented the stock of the bank, they were then bound to know that a statutory liability was imposed on such stock by statute."

Tellman and those aligned with her can not defeat the assessment liability by interposing this contingent "if" pleading. They have no claim against the bank and could not maintain one without first paying their assessment. Oppenheimer v. Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, 301 U. S. 206 (1937).

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, Administrator, et al., Respondents.

PETITIONER'S REPLY TO RESPONDENTS' SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF.

The excuse given by respondents for the recent filing of a supplemental brief is that the petitioner did not file his reply brief until the day of the previous argument on February 8, 1943; and that consequently they did not have an opportunity to respond. Respondents' original brief was not filed until February 1, 1943; Cross-Appellants brief was filed February 3, 1943, so that our printed reply thereto, filed five days later, was both prompt and timely.

Respondents state (p. 1) that the "ultimate question" presented here is whether or not "the ends of justice require" that the "corporate personality" of Banco "be ignored." This is not a fair statement of the question presented to this court. The question presented, as stated in our petition for certiorari (p. 9) and re-stated in our original brief (p. 5) is as follows:

> "Are the owners of an insolvent National Bank relieved from individual liability or 'double assessment' under the applicable Federal statute, because shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares?"

No claim has ever been made by the respondents until now that the question so presented was not fairly stated. Respondents, even now, do not challenge a single fact in our statement of the facts of the case as set forth in our original brief (pp. 7-37). Nor do they challenge any of the additional facts of the case set forth in our reply brief.

Beginning on page 2 of the supplemental brief respondents erroneously assert that the long list of cases cited in our previous briefs, holding that the "real" stockholder of an insolvent bank is liable for the assessment without regard to whether or not he is the "record" holder, were "decided subsequent to 1931" to clear away the wreckage left by the financial storm of 1929, 1935. This assertion is absolutely incorrect. The principle was first announced shortly after the National Banking Act was adopted in National Bank v. Case (1878), 99 U. S. 628. The subsequent decisions are set forth fully in our original brief beginning on page 40 and again referred to in our reply brief beginning page 27.

Respondents, in an effort to narrow the principle laid down in the cases referred to, admit that they would be liable

> "where the stockholders of a failing institution have attempted to use the corporate device to evade threatened liability, and where the corporation so used has no other substantial assets than the assets transferred to it and no other function than to act as a receptacle for those shares."

If we were to accept respondents own restricted rule they would still be liable in this case. The National Bank of Kentucky was undoubtedly in a failing condition. We have set forth in great detail in our original brief, pages 7-29 the condition of this bank showing step by step its progress towards insolvency. The facts stated therein are taken directly from the written records of the bank reproduced in the record of this case. These facts as set forth therein have never been challenged by the respondents in any brief filed before this court.

There is no question but that these respondents organized Banco Kentucky. They tried "to evade threatened liability" by writing into Banco's articles of incorporation that its stock would not be assessable and by printing on the stock certificates "fully paid and nonassessable." Banco had "no other substantial assets" than the bank's shares and it transacted no business except "to act as a receptacle for those shares." This is pointed out in detail in our original brief, (pp. 27-33). It is submitted that respondents are liable in this case even under the narrow rule as stated by them in their supplemental brief.

However, the rule is far broader. The Federal decisions uniformly hold that the shareholders of bank stock holding companies are the real true and beneficial owners of bank stock and as such are liable for assessment although the banks prior to failure were considered sound and there was no intent to escape assessment. Nor is there any necessity to disregard the corporate entity where, as here, the corporation is created by the Bank's shareholders as their corporate agency or instrumentality.

At page 6 of the supplemental brief it is urged that respondents are not liable unless it was shown that Banco "was organized for the purpose of evading the statutory liability." We have never claimed that the only purpose for which Banco was organized was to escape the National bank stock assessment. The facts on this point are set forth in our original brief beginning at the bottom of page 26 where statements taken from the officers of the bank in letters written prior to the organization of Banco plainly indicate that one of the things contemplated was to escape double liability.

However, liability depends on statute—not intent—it is immaterial whether there was an honorable intent to pay or a dishonorable attempt to avoid assessment.

At page 49 of our original brief, and again at page 18 of our reply brief, we called this Court's attention to the case of Deming v. Schram, 7 F. Supp. 271, a companion case to the Barbour v. Thomas case, 86 F. (2d) 510, and stated that $7,500,000 of new money was put into the holding company in that case, but that it did not protect the holding company stockholders from the bank assessment. At page 4 of respondents' supplemental brief it is admitted that the $7,500,000 was paid into the bank stock holding company, but respondents assert that it was paid into a different holding company. The facts as to that situation are quite clear. The Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., which was the holding company in the Deming v. Schram case, was a successor in title through merger of two other bank stock holding companies, Union Commerce Corporation and Guardian Detroit Group. Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. was a consolidation of the two prior bank stock holding companies and the $7,500,000 was paid into the Union Commerce Corporation shortly before its consolidation into Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc.

In the supplemental brief, recently filed, it is again urged (p. 6, 7) that because the petitioner first proceeded against BancoKentucky, he is in some manner now precluded from proceeding against the stockholders of BancoKentucky. An isolated quotation is printed (p. 6) from the District Court's opinion and another isolated quotation (p. 7) is taken from the Court of Appeals decision. Under the heading "NO DEFENSE CAN BE BASED ON PRIOR CASES", we have covered this matter fully, on pages 20 and 21 of our reply brief. We have also reviewed these prior cases in detail under the heading "LAURENT v. ANDERSON, 70 F. (2d) 819", beginning on page 22 of our reply brief. The prior suit in the District Court was known as Keyes v. American Life & Accident Co., and in the Circuit Court of Appeals as Laurent v. Anderson.

In the supplemental brief, beginning on page 8, it is for the first time claimed that certain "findings of fact" of the District Court stand as a bar to a reversal of this case. In order to meet this assertion, we want to call the Court's attention first to the fact that substantially the whole record of this case is documentary; documents, books, letters and other papers taken from the records of the bank. We want also to call the Court's attention to the fact that, prior to the trial and pursuant to Rule 36, these documents were presented to counsel for respondents, with a request that they admit the genuineness of the same, and that, after due consideration, respondents admitted the genuineness of said documents and stipulated certain facts to be true (R. 2, pp. 74-116). Therefore, substantially all the facts in this case appear in accredited documents or in stipulation of facts, about which there is no dispute. It is because of this that respondents have not, to this date, challenged a single fact set forth in either our original or supplemental brief. Therefore, without challenging any of these facts, they now say that this Court cannot look at these undisputed documentary facts, because of certain findings of the District Court.

The findings of the District Court referred to are copied on page 8 of respondents' supplemental brief.

We invite the Court to examine these so-called findings of fact. We submit that they are, in reality, not findings of fact, but were conclusions of law. So-called findings of fact 64, and 65, also appear as number 7 in the conclusions of law. Finding number 66 is copied verbatim as conclusion of law number 8. Respondents must necessarily concede that this Court may review conclusions of law number 7 and number 8. Therefore, if this Court should consider that conclusions of law numbers 7 and 8 are erroneous, it would be rather strange to say that this Court would be barred in ordering a reversal simply because the erroneous conclusions of law were also copied verbatim as findings of fact.

'So-called finding of fact number 19 states that Banco was established for its "avowed purposes". What its "avowed purposes" were is not stated by the Court but it was a congenital condition "avowed" in the prospectus that it hold the stocks of the National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Co., and its officers and director "avowed" that its primary purpose was to hold back stocks (See our main brief pp. 32-43). The finding also states that there was no "thought on the part of any of its organizers of avoiding double liability". It is difficult to tell who the Court had in mind in this finding when it used the word "organizers". The written records plainly show that somebody had a "thought" about double liability when they "distinctly provided" in the Banco's charter and on its certificates of stock that it was "nonassessable". The President of Louisville Trust Company "thought" about double liability when he wrote to the President of National Bank of Kentucky immediately prior to the organization of Banco and stated: "One of the advantages of transferring your bank stock for BancoKentucky Company stock is that you are relieved of the double liability clause" (Ex. V 3, pp. 1262, 1264). And the President of National Bank of Kentucky must have had some "thought" about the matter when he read the letter. Hayes, the Vice President of the National Bank of Kentucky, had some "thought" on the subject when he said: "The new stock will be in just as safe a position, as I see it, as the old, and without double liability". (Ex. V 3, p. 1398).

It is submitted that what the District Court had in mind, in finding number 19, was that the stockholders of the bank, at the time they organized Banco, did not think that the bank was going to fail. They "thought" that the new money going into Banco would be used, to clear the deadwood out of the National Bank of Kentucky. However, instead of doing what they promised the bank examiner they would do, they immediately proceeded to invest the new money in a lot of other assessable bank stock: neither reserving funds with which to pay assessments or cleaning the deadwood out of the National Bank of Kentucky. But prior to the receipt of any money, it had contracted to spend over $7,600,000 for other assessable bank stock (R. 2, p. 280) and, subsequently it invested substantially all of this new money in assessable bank stock. It must not be forgotten that the whole thing collapsed, the banks as well as Banco, in just about one year. If the officers, directors and stockholders of the bank, who were the organizers of Banco, did not know of the precarious condition of the bank, it was their duty to have known it. They have no right to assert their own neglect as a defense to this law suit, brought for the benefit of the depositors of the bank.

So-called findings of fact numbers 61, 62, and 63 certainly do not prevent this court from reversing this case. We hardly know what is meant by finding number 61 that "Banco was organized in good faith". There is no dispute but that it was a legally organized corporation under the laws of Delaware. We do not quarrel with finding number 62 that it was "not a sham". These are nothing but general conclusions anyway, and we cannot tell what basic facts the court had in mind in making such findings. The same observation applies to finding number 63.

So-called findings numbered 64, 65 and 66, as we have previously stated, are nothing but conclusions of law and in identical language, appear as conclusions of law in Conclusions of Law numbered 7 and 8.

The supplemental brief attempts, beginning at page 11 under the caption "Banco's Origin and History" to make a partial statement of the facts of this case. In this so-called history of Banco, they have taken an isolated fact here and there, from the record, without attempting to give the court a full and complete statement of all the facts, and without in any way challenging any fact we have set forth in any of the briefs we have filed. It is not quite fair to ask this court to judge this case on some of the facts. It should be judged on all the facts, and respondents have never undertaken fully to state the facts of this case. They shy far away from the terrible condition of National Bank of Kentucky immediately prior to the organization of Banco. This condition is set forth in our original brief, pages 7 to 27, inclusive, and the correctness or fairness of our statement has never been challenged. In their supplemental brief they seek to avoid the facts as to the condition of the bank by the sly statement on page 17, "the directors of the bank knew that some of the bank's assets had been criticized by the bank examiner although the president of the bank followed the practice of concealing from them the more serious criticisms."

They seek under the title "Banco's Origin and History" to make it appear that Banco had untold millions in cash in addition to assessable bank stock. This is not correct. In the very beginning Banco sold some stock in addition to that exchanged for bank shares. All of it was preempted for the Bank's shareholders. Most of this additional stock was sold to the bank stockholders and paid for with money borrowed from the Banks ($7,000,000, Ex. V 4, p. 1934). A part of it only was subscribed by others. As a result of selling this additional stock, Banco when it started business had in cash and subscriptions approximately ten million dollars, and almost immediately invested substantially all of this new money in other assessable bank stocks pursuant to commitments made before the money was received. Thereafter it had substantially nothing but assessable bank stock.

From the beginning it functioned only as a holding company, transmitting to its stockholders on the same date received the dividends which it received from bank stocks. Banco never had an office or an employee,—it never even had a telephone. See pages 29 to 33, inclusive, of our original brief where the facts are set forth in detail with record references.

The overwhelming proportion of Banco (88.71%) was held by persons who were original bank shareholders and original subscribers who participated in the formation of Banco Kentucky. Those who acquired stock otherwise (11.29%) by gift, inheritance or purchase on the stock market knew that they were acquiring stock in a bank stockholding company, whose only assets were bank stocks (shown by its statement). None took the stand to deny this obvious fact. They enjoyed the dividends and benefits derived from the bank stocks and must under federal statutes and the decided cases bear their proportion of the statutory burden.

It is respectfully submitted that the judgment below should be reversed.

SUPPLEMENTAL RECORD REFERENCES RE CALDWELL.

Upon reargument, respondents devoted considerable time to the unconsummated negotiations between Banco Kentucky Company and Caldwell & Company. It was stated that this abortive deal was evidence of Banco's original purpose to engage primarily in the investment banking field. From this premise respondents argued that Banco's double assessment bank stock holding was only incidental to its original and main purpose of investment banking. The record in this case completely destroys any such argument.

1. Consolidation or partnership between Banco and Caldwell was never even thought of when Banco was organized. The agreement was made May 28, 1930, a few months before the collapse (R. 1, p. 258). Consequently it could not have been one of the original or "avowed purposes" of Banco.

2. The "Caldwell deal" was not a good faith effort of Banco to engage in investment banking. It was, as the court found, never "consummated". (R. 1, p. 262). As one of the directors testified, it was nothing but an attempt to "swap" four hundred thousand shares of "worthless" Banco for ten thousand shares of "worthless" Caldwell stock (R. 3, p. 103).

3. The "Caldwell deal" was merely another one of a series of unconsummated proposals to which publicity was given in an effort to avert inevitable failure.

The formation of the BancoKentucky holding company was proposed to the bank examiner to induce him to waive the charge-off of losses (Exhibit V-2, p. 612). Subscriptions to the stock of BancoKentucky were payable October 1, 1929. On that very day, Mr. Vaughn, an attorney, was employed to denationalize the National Bank of Kentucky and change it over to a state bank (R. 3, p. 25). This proposal was publicized and used to induce the bank examiner to again waive charge-offs. After it had served the purpose, the proposal to denationalize, which was continued as a pending proposal from October 1929 to March 1930, was abandoned (Ex. V2, p. 1024).

Another publicity move to bolster failing public confidence was the announcement that the National Bank of Kentucky would move into a beautiful new bank building at 421 Market Street. (Ex. V3, p. 1197) This was printed with a picture of the building, in the newspapers (Ex. V3 p. 1225). The Bank of Kentucky never moved into the bank building at 421 Market Street. See National Bank of Kentucky v. Louisville Trust Co., 67 F.(2d) 97; Louisville Trust Co. v. National Bank of Kentucky, 102 F.(2d) 137.

Another proposal, never consummated, was a physical merger of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company. (R. 3, p. 172)

The deal with Caldwell was in character with the above proposals. It was immediately publicized (June 2, 1930) by President Brown of Banco as "by far the largest and most important financial structure ever built in the midwestern or southern states and one that will undoubtedly stand out in the future as one of America's greatest financial institutions." (See brief for respondents, p. 20)

Having been publicized as above, no further effort was made to complete any appraisal of Caldwell's assets on which the deal was entirely contingent (R. 3, p. 273) and, on November 6, 1930, President Brown could therefore truthfully announce that "negotiations * * * have never been consummated. The BancoKentucky Company is, therefore, not connected in any way with the affairs of Caldwell and Company." (See brief for respondents, p. 21).

The unconsummated contract between Caldwell and Company and BancoKentucky (R. p. 258) shows that it was merely a paper deal. No money was invested by either party. BancoKentucky had previously increased its authorized capital stock from two million shares to five million shares (Ex. V3, p. 1086). Under paragraph 1 of the contract, the bankrupt Caldwell Company agreed to increase its authorized capital stock from ten thousand shares to twenty thousand shares; then Banco agreed to exchange nine hundred thousand shares of its "presently authorized, but unissued stock" for ten thousand shares of Caldwell.

Although the contract says nine hundred thousand shares, it was four hundred thousand, because four hundred thousand Banco shares were placed in escrow with the Trust Company "pending such examinations and investigations as the first party (Banco) may desire to make under Sections 7 and 8 of this agreement." By side agreement, one hundred thousand shares were supposed to be used to wash out the worthless paper of the Kentucky Wagon Works held by the National Bank of Kentucky (R. 3, pp. 27, 100). Banco covenanted that it was a bank stock holding company and that its assets were the banks set forth in Section 6 (R. 1, p. 260). Caldwell falsely represented that it had a net worth of $9,000,000 but Banco was to have one year from May 28, 1930, to "satisfy itself as to the valuation". (R. 1, p. 261).

The making of the contract one year after the organization of Banco and a few months before BancoKentucky's failure and the exchange of some "worthless paper", was all that was ever done. No steps were ever taken to carry out the terms of the agreement. No valuation of Caldwell's assets, upon which the whole agreement was contingent, was ever made or even attempted. (R. 2, p. 295; R. 3, p. 274). The most convincing proof that the deal was a mere paper transaction, intended for publicity purposes on the part of both Caldwell and Brown, is that not one dollar of dividends was ever paid to Caldwell on the Banco stock supposedly issued to Caldwell. From May 28, when the contract was made, until the failure of BancoKentucky and Caldwell a few months later, two dividends were declared and paid by the BancoKentucky Company. Although BancoKentucky stock stood in the name of Caldwell and Company, the dividends paid to all other stockholders were not paid to Caldwell—because there was in fact no bona fide deal and it was not intended to part with any money.* (R. 1, p. 303; Stipulation of Facts, R. 2, p. 105).

Mr. Allen Dodd, counsel for respondents, and director, testified:

> "Q. In your experience as a lawyer and director of a bank, would you say that the Caldwell & Co. contract was consummated?

* Donovan, secretary of Caldwell, testified that they were not entitled to dividends because no examination of the assets of Caldwell had been completed. The first dividend check was endorsed back to Banco and "the next quarterly dividend came in September, 1930. I don't recall that a check was issued to us for that dividend. My recollection is that a check was not issued. We received no part of the September, 1930, dividend." (R.1, p. 303)

"A. Of course, the contract was not consummated on its terms as written, but let me be plain on the proposition. When I left the Board of Directors' meeting on May 26, it was thoroughly understood that the only contract to be made with Caldwell & Co. was to be a scale contract and nothing was to be done until after the securities were valued. I did not think a contract would ever be drawn. When I got back to Louisville, I understood nothing had been delivered. • • •

"It was my understanding that the purchase price would be held by BancoKentucky until after its own appraisement so that if the assets proved to be of no value it would not have to be delivered. • • • BancoKentucky never made any appraisement or audit of the assets of Caldwell & Co., and never paid any dividends on the stock allocated to Caldwell in the deal, that I know of. I think I have checked the records and found that to be true." (R. 2, pp. 293, 295.)

Mr. T. Kennedy Helm, counsel for defendants and a director, testified:

"That deal with Caldwell was completed without our Board or myself having any other knowledge of what Caldwell's assets were than what Mr. Brown told us Caldwell had told him. (R. 3, p. 99)

"According to Mr. Brown, Caldwell had refused to have an audit made until the trade was agreed upon because he did not wish to submit his private papers to outsiders until the trade was consummated. And the trade would not be consummated in full until there was an audit. Th stock was held in escrow pending adjustment from the audit. (R. 3, p. 100)

• • •

"My recollection is that 400,000 shares of the 800,000 shares were taken back. As to the 400,000 shares Caldwell held, dividends were not to be paid on them until it was sold and there was an audit." (R. 3, p. 101)

Respondent E. Leland Taylor, a director, testified:

"I was one of the men who voted to make this deal with Caldwell. I was for him, I guess I voted for him. It was my understanding that that contract had a year in which we were to evaluate the assets of Caldwell. I did not figure in my mind that the contract was binding until the appraisal was made. If Caldwell & Co.'s assets proved to be nothing, there was to be no payment and no contract consummated. In other words, the contract was a contract to buy rather than having bought. Caldwell's assets were to be so much, but if it was less we would pay less, and if it proved to be more, we would pay more. If it were nothing, we would pay nothing.

"The appraisal of Caldwell's assets was never made. He had a year, and during that year he was to specify when he was ready to have the appraisal made and before that year ended, things blew up and it never was made. Some stock was turned over to Caldwell. No dividends were paid on it. We did not know it was going to be turned over and I suppose it was." (R. 3, pp. 273, 274)

4. Any argument that investment banking was an original or primary purpose of Banco is precluded by sworn statements of its officers, duly authorized by its directors (V. 3, pp. 1072, 1075, 1103), filed with the State of Delaware (Ex. V. 4, p. 1921a), and with the stock exchanges in Chicago (Ex. V. 4, pp. 1711, 1723) and Louisville (Ex. V. 4, p. 1695) (quoted in Receiver's main brief pp. 37, 43), which state that its sole purpose was to hold, operate and control banks and trust companies; and by the positive and very truthful written statement of its secretary that it did not intend to go in the investment banking business.

"This company has not engaged in the business of investing and reinvesting in a diversified list of securities of other corporations for revenue and profit but has limited its activities to acquiring control of banks and trust companies and the operation of same." (Ex. V. 4, p. 1713)

5. That the sole purpose of Banco was holding assessable bank stock is made crystal clear by the sworn testimony of respondents who were directors of the bank and Banco and attorneys for themselves and other respondents. Director Dodd, a member of the common board of the bank and trust company and trustee under the April 22 trust agreement and a director of Banco, testified:

> "The primary purpose of the organization of Banco-Kentucky Company was to acquire a group of banks in the Ohio Valley." (R. 2, p. 261)

Director Carroll, who prepared the articles, testified:

> "Q. What was the purpose of the organization of the BancoKentucky Company?
> "A. Just as stated in that charter, to acquire stock in these other institutions as a holding company.
> "Q. As a holding company its primary purpose was to own and control a chain of banks?
> "A. Yes. I think that was the reason." (R. 3, p. 153)

Director Speed testified that:

> "The main object of the formation of the Banco-Kentucky Company (was) to acquire a chain of banks." (R. 3, p. 188)

Director Hiatt testified that the,

> "* * * purpose of the organization of BancoKentucky Company * * * was for control of the banking situation in the Middle West." (R. 3, pp. 202-203)

Director Boomer considered the organization of Banco as a means of

> "* * * extension of our interest in the other banks, such as the Covington bank and Cincinnati banks and Paducah, etc., that we afterwards purchased." (R. 3, p. 245)

Director Horace Taylor testified:

> "It was well known to me and to my fellow directors that the primary purpose of this institution was to first secure a majority of the National Bank of Kentucky stock and the Louisville Trust Company stock as a nucleus for a group of banks in the Ohio Valley." (R. 3, p. 252)

6. What Banco's intentions were can best be gleaned by what it actually did in the short period of its existence. The only thing it ever did was to hold assessable bank stocks.

7. The only thing in the whole record even hinting that Banco had a purpose or intention beyond holding assessable bank stocks is the self-serving testimony of some of its directors, in a feeble effort to conjure up a defense to this case, to the effect that there was a vague intention, some time in the future, to engage in investment banking. Such testimony contradicts the written, sworn statements of its officers filed with the Secretary of State of Delaware and with the stock exchanges, and is contradicted by the testimony of the same directors as to what Banco actually did. Compare Dodd R. 2, p. 227 with R. 2, p. 261. Compare Helm R. 3, p. 53 with R. 3, pp. 79, 81.

8. Even if some of the respondents had investment banking in mind, we submit that such intention (never carried out) is of no avail to relieve shareholders of a company, primarily designed and intended to own banks and bank stocks, from assessment liability imposed by federal statute. The bank holding companies in Detroit and elsewhere actually engaged in investment banking through First National Detroit Company, The Detroit Company and The Assets Realization Company in Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. (2d) 510,* and through Keane Higbee Company in Deming v. Schram, 7 F. Supp. 271. Such activity, it was held, did not relieve the shareholders from assessment liability, since the main purpose was to control the banks and to pass on the dividends received from bank stocks to the shareholders of the holding company.

9. Banco was incorporated July 1929 but it did no business until September 25, 1929. It then made a contract to buy the stock of two Cincinnati banks, both assessable under Ohio statutes, for Seven Million Dollars (R. 2, pp. 262, 280). Subscriptions to Banco were not payable until October 1, 1929. It would require substantially all of this subscription money to pay for the Cincinnati bank stocks. So from the beginning to the end Banco never had any substantial assets with which to pay an assessment on a bank stock except other assessable bank stock.

10. The above statements would be true even if we were to consider the belated and unconsummated Caldwell deal as an accomplished fact. There is a stipulation in the record that Caldwell was insolvent as of May 31, 1930 (the contract was dated May 28, 1930) to the tune of $1,111,170.30 (R. 2, p. 105). Creditors of Caldwell only received a dividend of one-tenth of one per cent (R. 2, p. 106); an infinitesimal amount with which to pay bank stock assessments. Besides, Caldwell was quite a bank stock holding company in its own right. It controlled directly, and through its controlled insurance companies, the assessable stock of sixty-six other banks and trust companies.

11. Finally, BancoKentucky Company was a Delaware Company and was legally incapacitated by the Kentucky Constitution and statutes then in effect from transacting investment banking, title insurance or making mortgage loans in Kentucky. It never qualified to do any business in that state (Ex. V. 4, p. 1693), (Kentucky Stat. § 571). Nor did it file a report or pay the license tax required by Kentucky Statute 4189-2 (Ex. V. 4, p. 1694).

 See table compiled from Federal Reserve data by Cartinhour —Branch, Group and Chain Banking, p. 66; Caldwell's original suggestion for the consolidation: "I have been wondering lately whether it would be feasible to consider a consolidation between the Banco Kentucky Corporation and the banks in which we are interested." (Ex. V. 4, p. 1840); Ex. V. 3, p. 1207.

The Kentucky Constitution, §202, contains the following prohibition:

> "No corporation organized outside the limits of this state shall be allowed to transact business within the state on more favorable conditions than are prescribed by law to similar corporations organized under the laws of this commonwealth."

BancoKentucky was not subject to the supervision of the Banking and Securities Department of Kentucky. §165a-1 of Kentucky statutes makes this mandatory with respect to "banks, trust companies, savings banks, combined banks, real estate mortgage companies."

The nine lawyers, members of Banco's board, knew that the provision that Banco shares should be "non-assessable" made it legally impossible for BancoKentucky Company to engage in investment banking or title insurance in the State of Kentucky. §547 Kentucky Statutes provides:

> "Stockholder in guaranty companies, investment companies and insurance companies shall be liable equally and ratably, and not one for the other, for all contracts and liabilities of such corporation to the extent of the amount of their stock at par value, in addition to the amount of such stock."

Respondents can hardly be heard in a court of equity to say that they had an original purpose to violate the laws of Kentucky or to do business prohibited there to foreign and domestic corporations.

v.

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

To the Honorable the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

The Respondents respectfully submit that the prayer of the Petitioner for the issuance of a writ of certiorari should not be granted.

SUMMARY STATEMENT OF FACTS.

In the year 1927, the National Bank of Kentucky, which as a State institution had begun business in 1834 and had had a long and honorable career, was doing business in the City of Louisville as a national banking institution. The Louisville Trust Company, a Kentucky corporation organized in 1884, was likewise doing business in that city. Believing that an affiliation of the two institutions would result in better banking and trust service to the community, stockholders of the two institutions, in April, 1927, brought about that affiliation by trusteeing most of the stock of the two institutions, excepting necessary qualifying shares for directors. The shares of the two institufions were transferred to trustees, who thus became the legal owners of those shares and stockholders of record of each of the two institutions. The trustees issued to the former stockholders certificates of interest in the trust estate, which are known in this record as "Trustees' Participation Certificates."

In July, 1929, the BancoKentucky Company, a non-banking corporation, was organized under the laws of Delaware. Its declared purposes included the buying and selling of corporate securities, the financing, management or operation of commercial manufacturing, financial or other enterprises, the underwriting of security issues for compensation, the acquisition of corporate securities by purchase, the guarantee of obligations of other persons, firms or corporations and, generally, all the powers conferred upon such corporations by the General Corporation Law of the State of Delaware. The articles of incorporation provided that "private property of the stockholders [should] not be subject to the payment of corporate debts to any extent whatever" and each stock certificate issued by the BancoKentucky Company described the shares represented by it as being "full-paid and non-assessable."

The BancoKentucky Company acquired various assets, among which were the Trustees' Participation Certificates, which were transferred to it by the owners in exchange for stock of the BancoKentucky Company. In addition to these exchanges, the former holders of Trustees' Certificates subscribed for 178,878 shares of the BancoKentucky Company, for which they paid in cash $4,471,950. The directors of the Bank and the directors of the Trust Company, whose combined maximum liability upon their surrendered Trustees' Certificates in the event of the failure of both the Bank and the Trust Company would have been $761,150, subscribed for 47,188 additional BancoKentucky shares for which they paid $1,179,750 in cash.

In addition to the exchanges and cash sales to former Certificate holders mentioned above, approximately 3,500 outsiders who had not been holders of Bank or Trust Company shares or of Trustees' Certificates, purchased 215,908 shares of the BancoKentucky Company for which they paid in cash $5,397,700. It thus appears that at the opening stage of the activities of the BancoKentucky Company $9,869,650 in cash had been realized from the sale of its shares.*

The Trustees, of course, remained the record holders of the stock of The Louisville Trust Company and the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and the BancoKentucky Company became the owner of the Participation Certificates.

*Rec. Vol. I, p. 256; Findings 25-31.

The break in the stock market occurred in October, 1929, followed by the depression. In the summer of 1930 the BancoKentucky Company entered into a transaction with Caldwell and Company, of Nashville, which, upon the failure of Caldwell and Company in November, 1930, led to some unfavorable newspaper publicity with reference to that transaction. This occasioned large withdrawals of deposits from the Bank and on November 17, 1930, it closed its doors and was put in the hands of a receiver. Shortly thereafter, BancoKentucky was likewise put in the hands of a receiver.

The following February, the Comptroller of the Currency made an assessment against the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky under the double liability statute. On October 31, 1931, almost a year after the Bank had closed and after the Receiver had had full opportunity to know all the facts surrounding the connection of the BancoKentucky Company with the Bank, the Receiver, after first securing the necessary court permission, sued the BancoKentucky Company for the amount of the assessment upon the Bank shares represented by the Trustees' Certificates held by it, alleging that by reason of its holding of those Certificates it was the real and beneficial owner of Bank shares. This suit was first styled, "Keyes v. Laurent," but is generally referred to in this record as "Laurent v. Anderson." It was resisted by the Receiver of the BancoKentucky Company but resulted in a judgment, first in the District Court* and later by affirmance in the Circuit Court of Appeals,* against the BancoKentucky Company, both Courts holding that the BancoKentucky Company was the real and beneficial owner of the Bank stock in question.

THE QUESTION PRESENTED.

Within a day or two of five years after the Comptroller's assessment against the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky, the instant suit was brought by the Receiver of that Bank against the stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company, upon the same cause of action which had been asserted against the BancoKentucky Company itself in his former action. Having obtained in the former action a judgment for $3,772,162.40 against the BancoKentucky Company as the real and beneficial owner of the Bank shares represented by the Trustees' Certificates owned by it, the Receiver now shifted his ground and asserted that the holders of BancoKentucky shares were the real and beneficial owners of the Bank shares represented by the Trustees' Certificates held by the BancoKentucky Company. Being founded upon that section of the Bank Act which then imposed a double liability upon the stockholders of national banks, his suit could only be based upon one or more of the following grounds: (1) that the stockholders of the Bank had transferred their shares within sixty days before the failure of the Bank, (2) that they had transferred their shares with knowledge of impending insolvency of the Bank and with intent to escape liability, or (3) that the BancoKentucky Company was not organized in good faith but solely for the purpose of shielding its stockholders against the double liability imposed by the Bank Act.

The Receiver has never asserted the first basis of liability mentioned above. In the District Court, after the evidence was all in, he disclaimed any intention to rely upon the second basis of liabifity mentioned above. It is obvious, therefore, that the only issue in this case was and is one purely of fact, to-wit, whether the BancoKentucky Company was organized and carried on in good faith for the purposes declared in its charter and was not a mere holding company nor organized as an agency of its stockholders or for the purpose of shielding its stockholders from the double liability imposed by the Bank Act.

The District Court heard the evidence introduced, listened to arguments and took the case under submission upon briefs for both sides. After a careful consideration of the record and briefs, it handed down an opinion (Rec. I, p. 228), with full findings of fact (Rec. II, p. 243),* and concluded that the BancoKentucky Company had been organized and carried on in good faith for definite, legitimate purposes and that consequently that Company, and not its stockholders, was the real and beneficial owner of the Trustees' Participation Certificates and the National Bank of Kentucky stock here involved.

*These should not be confused with "Plaintiff's Request" for Findings of Fact, beginning Rec. I, p. 176.

After hearing arguments and considering the briefs and the record, the Circuit Court of Appeals also handed down a full opinion and concluded, exactly as did the District Court, that the BancoKentucky Company was a bona-fide corporation, not created to circumvent any law, but to do the business its charter provided, and was the real and benficial owner of the Trustees' Certificates and the National Bank of Kentucky shares here involved.

CONCURRENT FINDINGS OF FACT BY BOTH COURTS BELOW CONCLUSIVE.

Applying the rule announced many times by this Court in this state of case, the writ should be denied.

In General Pictures Co. v. Electric Co., 304 U. S. 175, this Court said (p. 178):

> "There is nothing in the lower court's decision on either of the added questions to warrant review here. Whether respondents acquiesced in the infringement and are estopped depends upon the facts. Granting of the writ would not be warranted merely to review the evidence or inferences drawn from it. Southern Power Co. v. N. C. Public Service Co., 263 U. S. 508. United States v. Johnston, 268 U. S. 220, 227. Moreover, the decision on that point rests on concurrent findings. They are not to be disturbed unless plainly without support." (Citing cases.)

Again, the rule was announced in Harris v. Brundage Co., 205 U. S. 160, at page 163:

> "Here, both courts below found that Harris and Odell were agents of the debtor (the Association) and had custody of the Escrow Fund as such agents at the time the petition in Bankruptcy was filed and thereafter. We accept this finding, and proceed to a consideration of the jurisdictional question."

In the still later case of Just v. Chambers, 312 U. S. 383, the Court again said (p. 385):

> "In support of the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, respondent asks us to review the evidence with respect to the cause of the claimants' injuries and the breach of duty by the shipowner, contending that the evidence was insufficient to support the findings. Applying the well-established rule, we accept the concurrent findings of the courts below upon these matters (Texas & New Orleans R. Co. v. Railway Clerks, 281 U. S. 548, 558) and we confine our attention to the question of the survival of the causes of action."

ON TWO OTHER OCCASIONS THE PETITIONER OBTAINED AN ADJUDICATION THAT THE BANCOKENTUCKY COMPANY WAS THE REAL AND BENEFICIAL OWNER OF THE STOCK OF THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY.

As heretofore stated, the exact question here involved, namely, who was the real and beneficial owner of the Bank shares represented by the Trustees' Participation Certificates held by the BancoKentucky Company, was directly put in issue by the Petitioner here—by the same counsel asking for the writ here—in the suit referred to above, known as Laurent v. Anderson, which was filed in the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky and in which he secured from the District Court and from the Circuit Court of Appeals a finding that the real and beneficial owner of the Trustees' Participation Certificates and the shares of the National Bank of Kentucky here involved was the BancoKentucky Company.

In seeking permission from the State court, having jurisdiction of the BancoKentucky receivership to sue the BancoKentucky Company, the Petitioner here asked leave to sue on the ground that the BancoKentucky Company was the real, true and beneficial owner of the National Bank of Kentucky stock here involved by reason of its ownership of the Trustees' Participation Certificates.

Leave being granted in the terms of the request, a suit was accordingly brought and resisted by the Receiver of the BancoKentucky Company. In deciding the case, Judge Cochran held as a fact—

> "That the BancoKentucky Company, and the defendant, Joseph S. Laurent, its Receiver, was the actual and real owner of 37,721.624 shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, having a par value of $100.00 per share on November 17, 1930,"* and gave judgment against the BancoKentucky Company for $3,772,162.40, saying:†

> "Nor is it of any consequence that the BancoKentucky Company never owned in any way any stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and that it acquired its equitable interest therein by purchase of trustees' participation certificates from those who had been such owners and taken them in substitution for their stock. Upon the acquisition of such stock, that company became the beneficial and hence the actual and real owner thereof, and hence subject to assessment."

On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, that Court affirmed the decision below and in doing so said (p. 822):‡

> "The sole question for determination is whether Banco is liable to respond as a stockholder in the National Bank of Kentucky as the real and beneficial owner of the stock under Title 12, U. S. C. A.,

---

*Defendants' Exhibit No. 23.
†1 F. Supp. 512, at 513.
‡70 Fed. (2d) 819.

> Sec. 64, or whether it is exempt from liability under Title 12, U. S. C. A., Sec. 66," and answered that question with these statements (p. 824):

> "The evidence establishes that Banco was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the National Bank stock involved."

Again (p. 824):

> "The petition and especially the evidence sustain recovery against Banco as the real and beneficial owner under section 64 of the National Banking Act (12 U. S. C. A.)."

The Laurent case, decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals on May 7, 1934, was cited in Atherton v. Anderson, which came before the Circuit Court of Appeals in November, 1936. In that case there was presented the question whether loans made by the National Bank of Kentucky, collateraled by Banco-Kentucky stock, were loans on the Bank's own stock and therefore unlawful. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in a very elaborate opinion, set out the formation and history of BancoKentucky Company and reached the conclusion that the BancoKentucky Company was a bona fide corporation, established for a lawful purpose, acting independently of the Bank, and that its stock and the Bank stock were not the same. In the course of its opinion, it called attention to Laurent v. Anderson, saying:*

*86 Fed. (2d) 518, at 536.

"While in the very beginning the bank stock may, as found by the court [District Court], have been its principal asset, any may have continued thereafter to be its most valuable single asset, it had other assets of very substantial value, and it was warrantable inference at the time of its organization and for a substantial period thereafter that it could well meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank. At any rate there is nothing in the record to point to its creation for the purpose of escaping such assessment. Indeed when the assessment was finally made by the Comptroller it was enforced against Banco and not against the stockholders. See Laurent v. Anderson, supra. ITS SEPARATE CORPORATE EXISTENCE WAS RECOGNIZED BY THE VERY RECEIVER ON WHOSE BEHALF WE ARE NOW ASKED TO IGNORE IT." (Emphasis ours.)

Although Atherton v. Anderson, came to this Court and was sent back to the Circuit Court of Appeals for a ruling on another issue in that case, on its return the Circuit Court of Appeals adhered to its ruling theretofore made upon the character of BancoKentucky Company. Atherton v. Anderson, 99 Fed. (2d) 883, p. 895.

No appeal has ever been prosecuted from the latter ruling, made November 16, 1938, nor was any recovery adjudged or settlement made on account of alleged illegal loans by the Bank on the security of Banco-Kentucky stock.

THERE IS NO CONFLICT BETWEEN THE DECISION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS HERE AND ITS DECISION IN BARBOUR v. THOMAS.

The petition for the writ here sought seems to suggest conflict between the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Barbour v. Thomas, 86 Fed. (2d) 510, and its decision in the case at bar. Barbour v. Thomas was decided the same day that Atherton v. Anderson, supra, was decided and in the Atherton case the Court made an elaborate finding of fact regarding the status of Banco as an independent, bona-fide corporation. A complete answer to the suggestion of conflict between the decision in Barbour v. Thomas, and the decision in the case at bar will be found in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case. It points out with meticulous care the wide differences in the factual situation presented to it in the Barbour case and that presented here, which resulted in different, but not inconsistent, conclusions in the two cases.

THERE IS NO CONFLICT BETWEEN THE DECISION OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS OF THE SIXTH CIRCUIT IN THE INSTANT CASE AND ANY DECISION OF ANOTHER CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS.

The expression on this point found in Rule 38(b) is, "where a circuit court of appeals has rendered a decision in conflict with the decision of another circuit court of appeals on the same matter." (Emphasis ours.)

There is no such conflict between the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and a decision of another circuit court of appeals. The numerous cases cited by Petitioner (Petition, p. 10) are not "on the same matter." All of these double-liability cases have been decided upon the differing, factual situations involved therein and, as is explained in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case, any difference in the conclusion reached does not indicate a difference in the legal principles applied.

The suggestion is also thrown out by the Petitioner that conflicts may arise between the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case and future decisions in other cases which are awaiting the decision of this case.

While quite a few similar suits have been filed by the Receiver in district courts in other circuits against stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company residing in those districts, they involve a relatively small part of the total stock issued by the BancoKentucky Company and, although all of them were filed six or more years ago, all of them, so far as we are advised, are lying dormant, awaiting the decision in this case. In any event, should the petition for a writ of certiorari be denied in the instant case, there is no reason to anticipate that, in cases pending in other circuits, the Circuit Courts of Appeals will not follow the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, which has had the underlying question under consideration so many times. If the mere possibility that a conflicting decision might be made in the future were adopted as a ground for granting certiorari, almost every case could come to this Court.

NO IMPORTANT RULE OF LAW NOT HERTOFORE DECIDED BY THIS COURT IS INVOLVED HERE.

Respondents have never contested the rule of law frequently announced by this Court, that the real owner of national bank stock, as well as the record holder, can be held liable for an assessment.

Respondent have never contested the proposition that, where a transfer of stock is made to a dummy, with the real ownership still remaining in the transferor, such transfer must be ignored.

Respondents have never contested the proposition that transfers made to an insolvent, with knowledge of the failing condition of the bank at the time of such transfer or transfers within sixty days prior to the failure of the bank, must be ignored.

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has ignored none of these rules.

In the Laurent case, in obedience to the first rule above stated, it had affirmed a judgment against the BancoKentucky Company as the real and beneficial owner of the Bank stock in question.

In the instant case, again in obedience to that rule, it has re-examined the question who was the real and beneficial owner of the Bank stock in question and, consistently with its former decision, it has found that the real and beneficial owner was the BancoKentucky

Company, and not its stockholders. In reaching that conclusion, it said:*

> "From our study of the record in this case, we are in accord with the conclusions of the district court that the BancoKentucky Company was not a mere holding company, a sham corporation, or an empty shell; but was a very real and live corporate entity, actively acquiring capital assets; that the corporation was organized for the purposes set out in its prospectus of July 19, 1929, and for no other; that it was conceived in no planned avoidance of double liability assessment upon stock of the National Bank of Kentucky; that the BancoKentucky Company was the true, legal and beneficial owner of the national bank stock; and that its stockholders were not stockholders of the national bank within the meaning of the federal assessment statutes. 38 Stat. 273, 12 U. S. C. A. 64."

THERE IS NO MATTER OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST INVOLVED IN THIS CASE WHICH NEEDS ELUCIDATION BY THIS COURT.

Only the stockholders of BancoKentucky and the creditors of the National Bank of Kentucky are involved. The fact that a considerable sum of money is sought to be recovered certainly does not make the case one of general public interest.

The claim that many defendants, a majority of whom never owned any Bank stock, should be required to pay a sum, in addition to the heavy losses heretofore incurred by them, certainly does not present a question of public interest within the meaning of Rule 38.

Certainly, the repeal in 1933 (effective July 1, 1937) of Section 64 of the Bank Act, imposing double liability upon the stockholders of national banks, deprives any case arising under that repealed section of any general, public importance.

The suggestion is made in Petitioner's brief (p. 12) that the failure to repeal the similar section relative to Joint Stock Land Banks leaves the question a live one as to stockholders in such banks. However, a Congressional Act of the same session (12 U. S. C., §810) has forced all Joint Stock Land Banks to liquidate by denying them the right to do new business other than is necessary to liquidate their loans on hand as of May 12, 1933.

NO OTHER REASON COMING WITHIN THE GENERAL PURVIEW OF RULE 38 IS SUGGESTED BY PETITIONER.

Petitioner's "Summary Statement" (Petition, p. 1) attempts to create an atmosphere, which suggests fraud on the part of the organizers of the BancoKentucky Company. In his statement, Petitioner now claims that the Bank was in a failing condition at the time of the organization of the BancoKentucky Company. He made this claim in the District Court and introduced a great mass of documentary evidence relative to the internal condition of the Bank. But when the evidence was all in and he came to write his reply brief in that Court, he made the following statement (Plaintiff's Reply Brief, p. 84):

> "Although it is affirmed with monotonous regularity, plaintiff has never claimed that the National Bank of Kentucky was insolvent, in any sense of the word, when Banco was organized, and much less that the organizers knew it."

He did not withdraw this disclaimer in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Having disclaimed in the District Court any intention to charge that the Bank was insolvent at the time of the organization of the BancoKentucky Company and having stood by his disclaimer in the Circuit Court of Appeals, is not the Petitioner precluded from asserting at this time a claim which was not presented to the Circuit Court of Appeals?

In any event, the District Court found in regard to the condition of the Bank at the time of the organization of Banco the following fact:

> "There were irregularities in the handling of some of the credit accounts of the Bank, but the soundness of the Bank and its ability to meet its obligations could not be questioned, until long after the formation of Banco." (Rec., Vol. I, p. 267; Finding 67.)

As a further evidence of this, there was the District Court's finding on the question of the dividends paid by the Bank. The Bank had paid dividends of $160,000 quarterly and its last dividend was paid in October, less than a month before it closed. In regard to these dividends, the Court found:

> "Not one of the dividends declared and paid by the Bank during the period from April, 1927, to September, 1930, was criticized by the Comptroller of the Currency, either in the letters of the Comptroller to the Bank or in the reports of the Examiner." (Rec., Vol. I, p. 264; Finding 45.)

This finding was never questioned on appeal.

CONCLUSION.

This Court has said that a writ of certiorari will not be allowed simply to give the defeated party in the Circuit Court of Appeals "another hearing."*

It is hard to imagine a case which would come more directly within the terms of this statement than the one we are considering.

A year after the Bank closed and when the Petitioner, with full knowledge of all essential facts, came to enforce the statutory liability against National Bank of Kentucky stockholders, he brought a suit against the BancoKentucky Company alleging that, as the owner of Trustees' Certificates, it was liable to him in the sum of $3,772,162.40.

BancoKentucky not being the record holder of Bank stock, the Petitioner succeeded in satisfying the District Court that the BancoKentucky Company was the "real and beneficial owner" of such stock and consequently secured a judgment against that Company for the amount of the assessment.

Later, upon appeal, it convinced the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit that the BancoKentucky Company was "the real and beneficial owner of its Trustees' Certificates" and of the Bank stock represented by them.

Later, in his suit against the directors of the Bank, the Petitioner raised the question of BancoKentucky stock being the same as Bank stock, for the purpose of attempting to hold the directors liable for loans made in part upon the security of BancoKentucky stock.

The ruling in that case was in accord with the previous ruling which the Petitioner had obtained in the Laurent case but contrary to his desires. The Circuit Court of Appeals there held* that BancoKentucky stock was not Bank stock because the BancoKentucky Company was not one of those corporations whose corporate veil would be looked through.

Still later the Petitioner brought a new suit, the one at bar, making a claim exactly contrary to the claim he had made in the Laurent case. This time the BancoKentucky Company is not the true owner of Bank stock, but its stockholders are the true owners.

Thus the Petitioner, in three separate suits brought by him, has required the courts to decide the question of the true ownership of the shares of the National Bank of Kentucky. In all of them the courts have answered that the BancoKentucky Company was the true owner, in the first case (the Laurent case) in accord with Petitioner's contention, and in the other two cases (the Atherton case and the instant case) against his contention.

Meanwhile, the liquidation of the affairs of the National Bank of Kentucky by the Petitioner has dragged on for twelve years, during all of which time the depositors of the Bank, for whom he professes so much concern, have been deprived of part of the money to which they are entitled.

We suggest that the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky is not entitled to still "another hearing."

BRIEF FOR RESPONDENTS.

STATEMENT.

This is a proceeding by A. M. Anderson, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, to recover for the benefit of the creditors of the Bank an assessment by the Comptroller of the Currency against the stockholders of the Bank.

The three thousand or more persons named as defendants in the Receiver's bill were those residents of the Western Judicial District of Kentucky who were stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company, a Delaware, non-banking corporation. They were sued solely because they held shares in that corporation, without discrimination as to the manner in which they had acquired those shares. At the time of the closing of the Bank, November 17, 1930, none of them (except those who were Bank directors holding qualifying shares) were record holders of Bank shares and the great majority of them had never owned any such shares.

It was alleged, however, that they were the real owners of Bank shares because the BancoKentucky Company, in which they held stock, had acquired by purchase and retained among its assets at the time of the closing of the Bank certain "Participation Certificates" issued by the trustees in a stock-pooling agreement entered into in April, 1927, by stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company. Seventy per cent (70%) of the value of each share in the "indivisible trust estate" created by the pooling agreement was based upon the Trustees' holdings of Bank stock and the total value of the Bank stock included in the Participation Certificates owned by the BancoKentucky Company was less than twenty-nine per cent (29%) of the value of all of the assets of that Company, as shown by its balance sheet as of September 18, 1930.*

Two years before the filing of the Receiver's bill in the instant case, the legal consequence of the holding of Participation Certificates had been judicially determined in suits brought by the Receiver of the Bank against holders of Participation Certificates, including the BancoKentucky Company, to recover from them the Comptroller's assessment against stockholders of the Bank upon the ground that those Certificates represented Bank shares, in part, and that the holders of Certificates, though not record holders of Bank shares, were the real owners of the Bank shares represented by their Participation Certificates and were consequently liable, pro tanto, for the assessment.

The United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky sustained the Receiver's claim, declaring that the holders of Participation Certificates were "the actual and real owners" of the Bank shares represented by their Certificates (Keyes v. American Life & Accident Ins. Co. and Four Other Cases, 1 F. Supp. 512, decided Aug. 17, 1932). Upon appeal by the BancoKentucky Company, the defendant in one of those cases, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed the judgment (for $3,772,162.40) against the BancoKentucky Company, declaring that because of its ownership of Participation Certificates, it was "in every sense the true and beneficial owner" of the Bank shares represented by those Certificates (Laurent v. Anderson, 70 Fed. (2d) 819, decided May 7, 1934).

Almost two years later (February 17, 1936) the Receiver of the Bank commenced the instant proceeding, alleging that the real owners of the Bank shares in question were—not the Trustees, who were the record holders, not the holders of Trustees' Certificates, who had been held to be the real owners in the Laurent case, supra—but were the stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company. Four years later (June 29, 1940), the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, after a trial upon the merits, dismissed the Receiver's bill in the instant case, upon the ground that none of the defendants had been shown to be the real owner of the Bank shares in question (Anderson v. Abbott, 32 F. Supp. 328). Upon appeal by the Receiver, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed the judgment of the District Court. It closed its opinion with the following statement (Anderson v. Abbott, 127 Fed. (2d) 703):

> "The BancoKentucky Company was a legal entity, separate and distinct from its shareholders. The record reveals no underlying purpose of those who organized it or invested in its shares to afford asylum to stockholders of a national bank, seeking escape from the rigidity of individual liability for double assessment. Banco was not a mere sham corporation, nor was it exclusively a holding company. It existed vitally as an independent corporation and not as a mere conduit for the flow of national bank stock dividends to individuals. The corporation had been held liable as the real and beneficial owner of a large majority of the capital stock of a defunct national bank.
> "In our judgment, the reach of double liability assessment within the true meaning of the National Banking Act does not extend beyond the BancoKentucky Company to its stockholders."

THE NATURE OF THE RECEIVER'S CLAIM.

The provision of the National Bank Act, imposing double liability upon the stockholders of national banks (U. S. C., Title 12, §63) was first adopted by the Congress in 1864 and continued in force until its repeal in 1933 (U. S. C., Title 12, §64a). During that period of seven decades, numberless cases involving the construction of that section of the Bank Act were decided by the courts of the United States and the decisions in many of these cases were brought to this Court for review. The principles governing such cases have long since been conclusively settled.

The effect of these decisions has been to establish certain categories of persons to whom this provision of the Act is applicable. They are,

(1) Record holders of national bank shares who, though not the real owners, are estopped to say that they are not;

(2) Former holders of national bank shares, who have transferred their shares within sixty days next before the date of the failure of the bank (U. S. C., Title 12, §64);

(3) Former holders who have transferred their shares with knowledge of the impending failure of the bank and with intent to evade liability (idem);

(4) Trustee-holders, who are liable only to the extent of the trust estates in their hands (U. S. C., Title 12, §66);

(5) Real owners who, although not registered as the holders of the bank shares in question, may be held liable upon a showing that the record holders of those shares have received them merely as the nominees or agents of the real owners, or, in the case of a holding by a corporation, that the corporation is a mere instrumentality of the real owners who have transferred their shares or caused them to be issued to the corporation, without surrendering their control of and proprietary interest in the shares.

The Receiver has never claimed that the defendants or any of them fall within categories (1), (2) or (4) above. The Receiver has never consistently claimed that the defendants fall within categories (3) or (5), but has continuously shifted from one to the other as the exigencies of his case demanded.

While ground (3) has from time to time been presented (as it is here), the averments of the bill were never sufficient to sustain that ground. The greater part of the voluminous evidence introduced by the Receiver seemed to have no other purpose than to sustain this theory. However, after the proof was all in, the Receiver, in his reply brief in the District Court, indignantly disclaimed any intention to charge that any of the defendants had transferred their Participation Certificates to the BancoKentucky Company with knowledge of the impending failure of the Bank and with intent to evade liability. Thus, in his reply brief in the District Court he said:

> "Plaintiff has not claimed that any defendant is liable for having transferred T.P.C.'s with knowledge of the impending failure of the National Bank of Kentucky. Plaintiff has not claimed the T.P.C.-holders actually knew the condition of the Bank in 1929" (Br., p. 59).

* * * * *

"Although it is affirmed with monotonous regularity, plaintiff has never claimed that the National Bank of Kentucky was insolvent, in any sense of the word, when Banco was organized, and much less that the organizers knew it" (Br., p. 86).

Doubtless the Receiver made this disclaimer the more willingly because of the fact that the claim, even if sustained, was sufficient to support his case only as against a part of the defendants and would have failed as against all who acquired Banco stock on the outside and never owned any Bank stock.

And so, following this disclaimer, the Receiver for a time relied upon the fifth ground above stated and so presented his case to the Circuit Court of Appeals. His brief in that court commences with the following statement:

"The essence of the case is this: It is firmly embedded in our jurisprudence that the owners of national bank stock cannot organize a commercial corporation to hold their bank stock, channel the dividends on the bank stock to themselves through the holding company, and then interpose the corporate entity as a shield against the assessment liability imposed upon 'the actual owners of the capital of a national bank, that is, those who have their money invested therein.'"

When the case was affirmed in the Circuit Court of Appeals the Receiver apparently became alarmed at the weakness of the contentions there made and at his failure to convince the Court of the similarity between this case and the case of Barbour v. Thomas, 86 Fed. (2d) 510, upon which he so confidently relied. In any event, the Receiver was unwilling to apply for Certiorari to this Court upon that ground. And thus we find the Receiver returning to his original contention —one which had been expressly disclaimed and abandoned. In his Petition for Certiorari to this Court he states the issue involved—the only issue—as follows (p. 9):

> "The legal question presented here is: Are the owners of an insolvent national bank relieved from individual liability, or 'double assessment,' under the then existing Federal statute because, shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares?"

Doubtless the Receiver was confident that such a statement of the issue, made to this Court, would more readily induce this Court to believe that both of the courts below had committed serious error in this case. While we can understand the circumstances which forced the Receiver into this position, we wonder how he can reconcile the statement of the issue now made with his equally solemn statements of abandonment and disclaimer made to the District Judge.

The Receiver would now have this Court believe that this appeal presents the case of a bank in a distressed condition, abandoned by its stockholders who were seeking by fraudulent means to escape their obligations to its creditors. But he failed so utterly to prove this case in the District Court that he threw up his hands in despair and abandoned it clearly and finally, until revived here.

The underlying and controlling question decided by the courts below is a question of fact, that is, the question who were the real owners of the Bank shares in question. It is exactly the same question that was presented in the Laurent case, supra. In that case, the decision was that the BancoKentucky Company was the real owner of the Bank shares here in question. Upon that ground the defendants in the instant case interposed pleas of res judicata and election, which we shall have occasion to discuss in a later part of this brief. But the District Court decided to try de novo the question of real ownership and, since the Circuit Court of Appeals devoted its attention exclusively to that question, we shall open our argument with a discussion of that subject.

It presents a question of fact. In Rankin, Receiver v. Fidelity Insurance Trust & Safe Deposit Co., 189 U. S. 242, a national bank assessment case, this Court, by Mr. Justice Brown, said (p. 252):

> "The case then really turned upon the actual ownership of the shares, and this question was properly left to the jury as one of fact."

Since petitioner's statement is very incomplete and purely argumentative, and is not in accord with the findings of fact of both courts below, we feel compelled to give, in the following "Narrative," a chronological account of the origin and rise, the decline and fall of the BancoKentucky Company.

NARRATIVE.

Petitioner, A. M. Anderson, is Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, in succession to the original receiver, Paul C. Keyes, who was appointed November 17, 1930, and resigned December 15, 1932.

Respondents are stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company.

The National Bank of Kentucky was originally a State bank, organized in 1834. It became a national bank in 1900.

The Louisville Trust Company is a Kentucky corporation, organized in 1884.

The BancoKentucky Company is a Delaware corporation, organized July 16, 1929.

April, 1927 Under an agreement of April 22, 1927, the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and the stockholders of the Louisville Trust Company "trusteed" their shares, that is to say, they transferred their shares in those institutions to six trustees and received from the trustees certificates of shares in the "indivisible trust estate" thus created. These certificates were called "Trustees' Participation Certificates" and are familiarly referred to, in the record, as "T.P.C.'s". Each trust share was originally of the par value of $100 but the shares were subsequently "split," ten for one, and thereafter had a par value of $10 each.

By the terms of the agreement, the certificate-holders acknowledged their proportionate responsibility for any assessment lawfully levied against the Trustees as stockholders.

In preparation for the carrying out of this pooling agreement, the National Bank of Kentucky declared a stock dividend of 60 per cent. The Comptroller of the Currency not only approved this dividend, but congratulated the President of The Louisville Trust Company, Mr. John Stites, upon "its affiliation with this splendid bank, the National Bank of Kentucky" (R. II, pp. 49 and 218; Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 530).

In Laurent v. Anderson, 70 F. (2d) 819, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit had under consideration the effect of this trust agreement and held that, while the Trustees were the record owners of the Bank shares, the T.P.C.-owners were the real owners and consequently were liable for the assessment made by the Comptroller against Bank stockholders.

June, 1927 — On June 10, 1927, the Bank declared its customary quarterly dividend of 4 per cent ($160,000) and made a report thereof to the Comptroller of the Currency (subsequently approved by the National Bank Examiner in charge), which showed,

Capital	$4,000,000.00
Surplus	2,000,000.00
Undivided profits after payment of dividend	442,738.78

1927 to 1930 Thereafter and to its closing three and a half years later, the Bank declared and paid quarterly dividends of 4 per cent ($160,000) and made reports thereof to the Comptroller (never criticized by him), showing on each of the dividend dates given below a capital of $4,000,000, a surplus of $2,000,000 and undivided profits, after deducting required charge-offs and payment of dividend, in the following amounts (Defendants' Exhibit No. 2):

September 2, 1927:	Undivided profits:		$287,343.59
December 9, 1927:	"	"	321,307.09
March 16, 1928:	"	"	318,505.85
June 15, 1928:	"	"	261,476.64
September 14, 1928:	"	"	234,903.36
December 14, 1928:	"	"	213,384.72
March 16, 1929:	"	"	250,915.51
June 14, 1929:	"	"	188,815.34
August 2, 1929:	"	"	82,766.18
December 13, 1929:	"	"	134,787.53
March 14, 1930:	"	"	198,613.16
June 30, 1930:	"	"	166,835.00
September 19, 1930:	"	"	117,616.80

During this time each director of the Bank held his qualifying shares by purchase for value but subject to an agreement to transfer them to the Trustees in exchange for T.P.C.'s in the event of his death, retirement or insolvency. He received for his own use all dividends on those shares (Findings of Fact Nos. 5 and 8, R. I, pp. 244-5).

July, 1929 On July 16, 1929, the BancoKentucky Company, a non-banking corporation, was incorporated in Delaware. It is known in the record as "Banco" and we shall use that convenient abbreviation.

The purposes for which this corporation was organized, as stated in its certificate of incorporation, were very numerous and the powers granted to it were correspondingly wide in their scope. They included the buying and selling of corporate securities, the financing, management or operation of commercial, manufacturing, financial or other enterprises, the underwriting of security issues for compensation, the acquisition of corporate securities by purchase, the issuance of its own securities, the guarantee of obligations of other persons, firms or corporations and, generally, all the powers conferred upon such corporations by the General Corporation Law of the State of Delaware. Of course, the company was not authorized to engage in banking and never attempted to do so.

The certificate of incorporation ("Eighth" article) provided that "the private property of the stockholders [should] not be subject to the payment of corporate debts to any extent whatever."*

Each stock certificate issued by Banco described the shares represented by it as being "full-paid and non-assessable."

For some months prior to the incorporation of Banco the organization of such a corporation had been under consideration by a group of T. P. C.-holders, many of whom were also officers or directors of the

*In Delaware the "official form" of a certificate of incorporation provides ("Seventh" article) that "the private property of the stockholders shall not be subject to the payment of corporate debts to any extent whatever." Bank or of the Trust Company. On July 19, 1929, at the first meeting of the Board of Directors of Banco, July, 1929 the publication of an announcement of its organization and purposes was authorized. The announcement is copied in full, not only in the minutes of that meeting (Plaintiff's Exhibit 23), but also in the findings of fact made by Judge Swinford of the District Court (R. I, pp. 251-5). It is frequently referred to in the Record as the "Prospectus."

After stating generally the advantages to the Bank and the Trust Company of an alliance with an institution of large resources, which could > "take advantage of many sound and profitable financial opportunities frequently presented in the course of business of the two banks, but not available to them because of the restrictions upon their power and activities," the Prospectus explained the part which stockholders of the Bank and of the Trust Company (that is, T.P.C.-holders) were invited to take in financing the new company. Its charter authorized the issue of 2,000,000 shares, of the par value of $10 each, which, it was announced, were to be sold or exchanged on the basis of $25 per share. An offer was made on behalf of the new company, good until September 19, 1929, to exchange two of its shares for each Trustees' Participation share offered for exchange within that time and, in addition, to give the person making such an exchange the right to subscribe for additional shares of Banco at the price of $25 per share. If all of the authorized shares were disposed of in this manner, the new company would have a capital of $20,000,000 and a surplus of $30,000,000.

The offer was made upon the double condition that, as the result of such exchanges and subscriptions, T.P.C.-holders should acquire at least a majority of Banco shares and Banco should acquire at least a majority of T.P.C. shares, outstanding as of September 19, 1929. The Prospectus closed with a recommendation that the holders of T.P.C.'s avail themselves of the offer thus made, both as to the exchange of their trust shares for Banco shares and the exercise of their right to subscribe to additional Banco shares.

Before this announcement was put out, Robert F. Vaughan, a Louisville lawyer of high standing and a director of the Louisville Trust Company, was asked for an opinion on the question whether or not any taxable gain would result from the exchange of T.P.C. shares for Banco shares. Mr. Vaughan, on behalf of the Trustees, conferred with his associates, Messrs. Miller and Chevalier, well-known tax consultants of Washington, D. C., and on July 6, 1929, advised that, if the organization set up by the Trust Agreement of April 22, 1927, could be treated "as an association or corporation for income tax purposes," and if the pending plan required that, as a result of the exchanges of the shares of that "association" (i. e., T.P.C. shares) for Banco shares, Banco should acquire at least a majority of T.P.C. shares, then the transaction would be treated as a "reorganization," in the sense in which that word is used in the Revenue Act, and any gain apparently involved in those exchanges would not be "recognized" for income tax purposes until actually realized by a sale of the Banco shares thus acquired.

Through Miller and Chevalier, an "information ruling" (Plaintiff's Exhibit 134-1) was obtained from the Treasury Department to the effect that the organization created by the Trust Agreement of April 22, 1927, was "in a quasi corporate form" and was "an association within the meaning of the several Revenue Acts."

The original draft of the Prospectus had said nothing about a "reorganization" or about the necessity of securing a majority of T.P.C. shares in exchange for Banco shares (R. III, p. 5). It was as a result of Mr. Vaughan's advice, based upon the ruling of the Treasury Department, that the Prospectus was revised so as to describe the plan as a "reorganization" and to provide that it should become effective only if a majority of T.P.C. shares were acquired by Banco (idem).

Following the sending out of the Prospectus, the exchanges were so prompt and so numerous that the number of Banco shares left for sale was thought to be too small to produce the cash resources which had been anticipated and which were thought necessary to the accomplishment of the purposes for which the new company had been organized. Consequently, the charter of Banco was later amended so as to authorize the issuance of 3,000,000 additional shares.

In the end, substantially all outstanding T.P.C. shares (540,484 out of 570,550) were exchanged for 1,080,968 Banco shares (R. I, p. 256; II, p. 94). In July, August and September, 1929, T.P.C. shares were selling on the Louisville Stock Exchange at prices ranging from 44½ to 47 per share (par $10). On October 2, 1929, interim receipts for T.P.C.'s deposited for exchange sold at 50¼ per share (Defts.' Exh. 1). At the latter figure, the actual exchanges of T.P.C. shares for Banco shares gave the new company an invested capital of more than $27,000,000 from this source alone.

July-October, 1929

In addition, $9,869,650 in cash was realized from the sale of 394,786 Banco shares at $25 per share (R. I, p. 256). Included in these cash sales were 178,878 shares purchased for $4,471,950 by T.P.C.-holders, whose maximum double liability upon the T.P.C. shares surrendered by them for exchange had been $1,437,620 (id.). The directors of the Bank and of the Trust Company, whose combined, maximum liability upon their surrendered T.P.C. shares in the event of the failure of both the Bank and the Trust Company, would have been $761,150, subscribed for 47,188 additional Banco shares, for which they paid $1,179,750 in cash (id.).

Within six months after the closing date for the exchange of shares (September 19, 1929), Banco acquired a major stockholding interest in each of four Kentucky banks and two Cincinnati banks, and a holding of 32 per cent of the outstanding shares of the Peoples-Liberty Bank and Trust Company, of Covington, Kentucky (R. II, p. 96), at a total price of $11,500,020 of which $6,561,545 was paid in cash and $4,938,475 by the issue of 197,539 Banco shares at $25 per share (R. II, pp. 95-96). It thus appears that, during this period, in addition to the exchanges and cash purchases made by T.P.C.-holders, 413,447 Banco shares had been acquired, at the price of $10,336,175 by outsiders who had not been holders of Bank or Trust Company stock. Whereas there had been 2,225 T.P.C.-holders, there were now (April 1, 1930), 5,717 holders of Banco shares.*

The sale of Banco shares was not confined to sales to T.P.C.-holders. Subscription to its shares was open to the public. In fact, little more than 45 per cent. of the cash sales were made to T.P.C.-holders. Of the $9,869,650 in cash realized from such sales, $5,397,700 was contributed by outsiders. Of the cash so realized, $3,308,150 was never invested in bank shares.

It was in this early stage of Banco's life that the collapse of the stock market occurred (October 29, 1929). As to the effect of this collapse of the market, this Court has said:[1]

> "Judicial notice must be taken of the fact that late in 1929 there occurred a great collapse of values of all classes of property—railroads, other utilities, commodities and securities, and that the depression then commenced progressively became greater."

---

*The foregoing calculations are based upon facts, found by the District Court (R. I, pp. 255-257), as to which there has been no dispute, and upon admissions made by defendants at plaintiff's request (R. II, pp. 94-96, Para. 92, 94 and 96 to 100, inclusive).

[1] Great Northern Ry. v. Weeks, 297 U. S. 135, at p. 149.

Banco, however, went ahead with the increase
Spring, 1930 of its authorized capital stock (January, 1930) and, with the partial recovery of the market in the spring of 1930, thought the time opportune for a larger participation in the "many sound and profitable financial opportunities" mentioned in the Prospectus, which "were not available to [the two banks] because of the restrictions upon their power and activities."

April, 1930 Caldwell and Company, of Nashville, Tennessee, had for some years been engaged in "a general investment banking business" and, as the District Court found, was generally regarded as the largest and strongest investment house in the South:

> "In 1926 Caldwell and Company had sold and distributed about $30,000,000 in securities, and from then on, to and including 1929, its distribution had increased to where it sold and distributed $75,000,000 in securities in 1929, and for the first five months of 1930 its sales and distributions were around $37,000,000" (Findings of Fact, R. I, p. 258).

On April 15, 1930, the Board of Directors of Banco, relying upon Caldwell's guarantee that the net worth of the Caldwell Company was not less than $9,000,000, authorized the acquisition by Banco of half of the capital stock of Caldwell and Company. On May 29th a contract for the exchange of 900,000 shares of Banco for one-half of Caldwell and Company's 20,000 shares, having a book value of $450 per share, was approved. It was, however, provided that 200,000 of the 900,000 Banco shares to be received by Caldwell and Company should be held in escrow until Caldwell's assets were appraised.

June, 1930 On June 2, 1930, President Brown, of Banco, gave to the press a statement as to this transaction, saying that the "consummation" of these negotiations created

> "what is by far the largest and most important financial structure ever built in the middle western or southern States and one that will undoubtedly stand out in the future as one of America's greatest financial institutions."

At the time when this deal was closed, bank stocks held by Caldwell and Company were less than ten per cent of its total investment in securities (R. II, p. 301; Donovan).

Of the 900,000 Banco shares issued to Caldwell and Company, 700,000 were actually delivered, 200,000 shares being held in escrow, as explained above. The 10,000 shares of Caldwell and Company were delivered to Banco and appeared upon the balance sheet of that Company. The appraisal of the Caldwell assets, upon which the exact number of escrowed Banco shares to be delivered to Caldwell was to depend, was postponed at the request of Caldwell and, in the end, was not made at all.

The 10,000 Caldwell shares thus acquired by Banco were carried on its books as an asset of the Company (R. I, pp. 256-262).

November, 1930 On November 5, 1930, the Courier-Journal of Louisville carried a Nashville dispatch to the following effect:

"A committee of the Nashville Clearing House, after an investigation of the affairs of Caldwell and Company, investment bankers, issued the following statement today:

"'Rumors have become current regarding the affairs of Caldwell and Company. On account of the size and standing of Caldwell and Company, the company met with officers of the banks of Nashville who are members of the Clearing House. From statements made, we believe that Caldwell and Company is solvent and with co-operation its affairs will be worked out so that the interests of all will be conserved and protected. Its books show a large net worth; but on account of the very unusual financial condition of the entire country, its securities are difficult to dispose of at this time at a fair price.

"'The affairs of Caldwell and Company have been placed in our hands as a committee for the purpose of conserving and protecting the interest of that institution and all concerned and we ask and invite the co-operation of all interested and believe that with same none will suffer.'"

On November 6, 1930, there was published in the Courier-Journal of Louisville the following statement from President Brown, of Banco:

"Negotiations which have been in progress for several months between the BancoKentucky Company and Caldwell and Company have never been consummated. The BancoKentucky Company is, therefore, not connected in any way with the affairs of Caldwell and Company."

In the same issue of that paper, on the same page and in the same column (Plaintiff's Ex. No. 26, pp. 1214-23), President Brown's conflicting statement of June 2, 1930 (supra, p. 20), was reproduced. In the interval between this simultaneous publication of these two inconsistent statements from President Brown and the closing of the Bank on Monday, November 17, 1930 (a period of nine business days), the Bank lost $12,000,000 in deposits (R. I, p. 264).

On November 17, 1930, the Comptroller of the Currency placed the Bank in the hands of Paul C. Keyes, as Receiver.

On the same day (November 17, 1930), the Louisville Trust Company failed to open its doors and the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, of Louisville, was appointed receiver by the Jefferson Circuit Court.

At the closing of the Bank, stockholders of Banco had net deposits in the Bank of $1,254,783.27 and deposits in the Trust Company of $858,093.71, or a total in both of $2,112,876.98 (R. I, p. 266; Finding 60).

On November 24, 1930, Banco was placed in the hands of Joseph S. Laurent, as Receiver, by the Jefferson Circuit Court.

On September 19, 1930, the Bank had declared the last of its quarterly dividends mentioned above (payable October 1st), leaving intact its capital and surplus of $6,000,000 and undivided profits, after payment of the dividend, of $117,616.80.

September-October, 1930

On September 17, 1930, Chief National Bank Examiner Neill had commenced an examination of the Bank and on October 24, 1930, had made a report, covering the half-year in which the June and September dividends of that year were declared and paid. In his report (Ex. 20, pp. 875-991), as well as in prior conferences with the officers of the Bank (R. I, pp. 142, et seq.), he had severely criticized some of the larger loans and investments of the Bank and had pointed out certain items, described as "estimated losses" and amounting to $1,357,654.74, as to which, if not otherwise eliminated, he thought a charge-off "would be in order," thus necessitating "reduction in the surplus account of the Bank" (Ex. 20, p. 979). He had not only approved the June dividend (idem, p. 972) but had made no mention whatever of the September dividend, although he had learned on September 25th of its declaration, which was six days before it was payable and thirty days before the closing of his examination on October 24th (R. II, p. 154). The inconsistency between his failure to criticize this dividend at the time of its declaration and his subsequent testimony in the instant case that "from [his] point of view the [September] dividend was paid with known losses and was illegal" (R. II, p. 158) he has attempted to explain as follows:

> "I did not approve this dividend payment. I made no mention in the report of examination of this particular report of earnings but I did not formally criticise it. I did criticize the dividend policy in my report at page 11-6 where I said: '* * * As a matter of conserving earnings to provide for losses, a reduction of the present dividend rate of 16 per cent per annum should be given serious consideration by the board of directors.'"

February, 1931 — On February 20, 1931, the Comptroller of the Currency levied a one hundred per cent assessment against the stockholders of the Bank.

March, 1931 — On March 20, 1931, Keyes, as the Receiver of the Bank, mailed to the stockholders of Banco a letter, informing them that he had made a demand upon Banco for the payment of the assessment, upon the ground that the T.P.C.'s held by Banco really represented Bank shares, and advising the addressees that, if he did not succeed in collecting from Banco, he intended > "to proceed against [them] for the collection of the aforesaid assessment liability represented by the said trustees' participation certificates held by said BancoKentucky Company" (R. I., p. 70).

March, 1931 — On March 25, 1931, four months after the closing of the Bank, the Receiver of the Bank paid to its depositors a dividend of 67 per cent, on Receiver's certificates aggregating about $27,000,000.

Keyes v. Akers — On March 31, 1931, Keyes, as Receiver of the Bank filed an action in the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky against the directors of the Bank, in which he sought to recover damages, in a sum exceeding $14,000,000, for losses alleged to have resulted either from negligence in the management of the Bank or from violations of the National Banking Act on the part of the directors. Among other things, it was alleged that loans made by the Bank upon the security, in whole or in part, of Banco shares, constituted violations of that provision of the Act which forbids a national bank to make loans on the security of its own stock (U. S. Code, Title 12, Sec. 83), since Banco stock (it was alleged) was really Bank stock.

March, 1933 The cause was referred to a master, who recommended a decree, as to non-officer directors, exonerating them from the charge of common law negligence, as well as the charge of violation of the section of the Act, cited above, but holding them liable on other grounds in the sum of $517,910.

July, 1934 Upon exceptions to the Master's report, the District Court on July 7, 1934, held these directors liable for violations of the Act, in sums ranging from $86,000 to $3,900,000. As to loans secured, in whole or in part, by pledges of Banco shares, it was held that they were made in violation of the statutory prohibition of loans by the Bank on its own shares and recoveries, on this ground, were awarded against twenty-six, non-officer directors in sums ranging from $1,549,907 to $1,636,673.

As to all claims of the Receiver, not recognized in the above recoveries, including the claims based upon common law negligence, the bill was dismissed (Anderson v. Akers, 7 Fed. Supp. 924).

November, 1936 Upon appeal, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, on November 11, 1936, reversed the judgment of the District Court, except as to one item included in the recovery awarded below. The view of the District Court that Banco stock was really Bank stock and that consequently loans by the Bank on the security of Banco shares were, in fact, loans on the security of its own shares was expressly rejected and the decree was reversed "in so far as it awards damages against any of the appellants for losses suffered in the bank in consequence of loans on shares of the BancoKentucky Company" (Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 537).

This case came a second time before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, having been remanded by the Supreme Court of the United States for a determination of the question whether there was such a showing of common law liability for negligence as would support the decree of the District Court. The former ruling of the Circuit Court of Appeals that loans on the security of Banco shares did not offend against the statutory prohibition of loans by a national bank on its own stock was not involved on this second hearing and was allowed to stand and it was further adjudged that there was no negligence shown in the making of these loans (99 Fed. (2d) 895).

November, 1938

After a hearing on the question of negligence, which resulted in a decision favorable to the Receiver, the Circuit Court of Appeals remanded the case to the District Court, with directions to enter a decree consistent with the opinion.

December, 1938

On December 28, 1938, the District Court entered a decree, which disposed of the Receiver's claim of liability for making loans on Banco shares in the following paragraph:

"It is adjudged that none of the non-officer directors of the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville are liable to the plaintiff, under Section [83] of Chapter 2 of the title, 'Banks and Banking,' of the United States Code, or on common law principles of negligence for the losses sustained by the Bank on account of moneys supplied on loans collateraled, in whole or in part, by stock of the BancoKentucky Company and set out in Paragraph 45 of the original decree herein."

October, 1931

Meanwhile, on October 31, 1931, Keyes, as Receiver of the Bank, had filed in the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky a petition against Laurent, as Receiver of Banco, praying judgment for $3,772,162.40, being the amount of the Comptroller's assessment against Bank shares represented by the T.P.C's held by Banco. At or about the same time, Keyes brought similar actions against four other T.P.C.-holders, namely, Hattie B. Speed, Jennie L. Robins, Harvey L. Graybill, and the American Life & Accident Insurance Company. The five cases were ordered to be heard together and the opinion of the District Court in these cases is reported under the style of "Keyes v. American Life & Accident Ins. Co., and four other cases" (1 F. Supp. 512).

Laurent v. Anderson

August, 1932

On August 17, 1932, Judge Cochran, of the District Court, held, in accord with the contention of the Receiver, that Banco and the four other T.P.C.-holders, mentioned above, were liable upon the ground that, because of their ownership of T.P.C.'s, they were "the actual and real owners" of Bank shares. The opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, on appeal by the Receiver of Banco, is reported under the style, "Laurent v. Anderson" (70 Fed. (2d) 819), Anderson having meanwhile succeeded Keyes as Receiver of the Bank.

May, 1934 Upon that appeal the Circuit Court of Appeals, on May 7, 1934, affirmed Judge Cochran's judgment, declaring that T.P.C.-holders were "in every sense the true and beneficial owners" of the shares of the Bank.

June, 1933 [On June 16, 1933, Congress repealed that section of the National Banking Act (U. S. C., Title 12, Sec. 64) which imposed double liability on stockholders of national banks, effective as of July 1, 1937.]

February, 1936 On February 17, 1936, which was five years (lacking three days) after the levy of the assessment by the Comptroller of the Currency, A. M. Anderson, Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, commenced this action against the stockholders of Banco.

July, 1938 On July 12, 1938, the District Court overruled defendants' motion to dismiss the bill and their motion, under Equity Rule 29, to hear and determine, before trial, the question of the legal validity of Paragraphs II and III of the answer of David J. Abbott, Paragraphs II and III of the answer of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company, Executor of the will of Mary E. Reed, deceased, and Paragraphs II, III and IV of the answer of G. A. Heuser, Executor of the will of Henry Vogt, deceased.

These paragraphs contained pleas of election, estoppel by judgment and res adjudicata, based upon the rulings of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, and Atherton v. Anderson, supra. The District Court not only ruled that the facts alleged in these paragraphs were insufficient in law to constitute a defense, but ordered the paragraphs stricken from the pleadings. Subsequently, however, the answer of Heuser, as Executor of the will of Vogt, was allowed to be refiled in its entirety (R. I, p. 117) and the substituted answer of Katherine Kirkpatrick Abbot, Administratrix of the estate of David J. Abbott, deceased, in which the same defenses were pleaded, was ordered filed (R. I, p. 87). By virtue of an order of the District Court, entered October 31, 1938, these answers inured to the benefit of all defendants in so far as they stated matters of defense which were available to them (R. I, p. 173).

October, 1938, to February, 1939

The hearing of the case upon the merits commenced October 31, 1938, and the introduction of evidence was completed on February 3, 1939.

On February 3, 1939, after defendants had introduced as witnesses ten Banco stockholders (R. II, pp. 205-306; R. III, pp. 1-189), and after it had been stipulated that, if called, the testimony of other named stockholders would be substantially similar to the testimony theretofore given by certain other witnesses for defendants (R. III, pp. 290-292), the District Court, on its own motion, ordered to be read in evidence for defendants the following finding of the Court (R. I, p. 174):

> "On the Court's own motion, it is considered, ordered, adjudged and found that each of the defendants herein, save and except those who were officers, directors or employees of the National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company, or officers or directors of BancoKentucky Company, if called as a witness in his own behalf, would testify, over plaintiff's objections, that each of them acquired their respective shares of stock in BancoKentucky Company, believing, as distinguished from whatever constructive knowledge may be imputed to them as a matter of law, that the Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky were both solvent and sound financial institutions, and that they did not even remotely suspect that either of said banking institutions were in a questionable financial condition, if such they were, and that they acquired their stock in BancoKentucky Company in the belief that they were making a sound financial investment in a separate corporation, and that the BancoKentucky Company was to do things authorized by its corporate charter, as indicated in the letter of July 19, 1929."

On March 23, 1940, the Court handed down an opinion, announcing that plaintiff's bill was to be dismissed and directing counsel to submit requests for findings of fact and conclusions of law, and draft of a judgment in accordance with the opinion.

On June 29, 1940, the District Court made 67 findings of fact and stated 14 conclusions of law and, having overruled all motions for different or additional findings, entered a judgment dismissing the bill and awarding defendants a recovery of their costs.

On July 30, 1940, the Receiver gave notice of appeal. Upon his motion, the District Court ordered that the operation and enforcement of the judgment be stayed, without supersedeas or other bond, until the final determination of this cause or until further order of the Court.

On September 30, 1940, the Receiver filed his statement of the points on which he intended to rely on the appeal, and, after obtaining three extensions of time for filing and docketing the record, filed the record on December 24, 1940.

On November 13, 1941, in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, the cause was argued before Simons, Allen and Martin, JJ.

On May 4, 1942, judgment was entered, affirming the judgment of the District Court.

On June 3, 1942, the Receiver filed his petition for rehearing, which was denied on June 5, 1942.

On October 28, 1942, Petitioner filed in this Court his petition for a writ of certiorari, which was granted on December 7, 1942.

STATE OF THE RECORD.*

The three volumes of the printed record contain 961 pages. In addition, 438 exhibits were introduced by the Receiver and 27 by the defendants, all of which were ordered by the District Court to be transmitted to the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals in lieu of copies. It was subsequently ordered by the Circuit Court of Appeals that its Clerk accept for filing photostatic reproductions of such exhibits as had been reproduced in this manner for the Court's use in considering the appeal. The photostatic copies of exhibits offered by the Receiver fill five quarto volumes, containing a total of 2,204 pages. And, finally, the records on appeal with the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Laurent v. Anderson, No. 6384, and Atherton v. Anderson, No. 7289, were ordered by that Court to be considered as part of the record on appeal, in lieu of appellees' exhibits, designated as "Defendants' Exhibit No. 1" and "Defendants' Exhibit No. 23."

*We call attention to the novel and somewhat confusing page headings adopted by the person who edited Volume I of the printed record. The pages (243 to 268) which contain the Court's findings and conclusions are properly headed "Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law." The pages containing the respective motions of plaintiff and defendants for other findings (pp. 221 to 228 and pp. 269 to 283) have headings which properly describe the contents of those pages. But on pages 176 to 221, which contain plaintiff's "request" for still other findings and conclusions, the heading on each page is merely "Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law," which is not helpful.

ARGUMENT.

The Legal Aspects of Petitioner's Claim.

The Comptroller's assessment on the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky gave the Receiver "an unsecured and unpreferred claim"—Pufahl v. Estate of Parks.[1] In that case, Mr. Justice Roberts, speaking for the Court in upholding the applicability of a State statute of limitations to a national bank receiver's claim based on a Comptroller's assessment, said:[2]

> "The statute evidences no intent to prefer the assessment over other claims against the estate, or to exempt the receiver from the pursuit of the remedy prescribed by the local law for collection of claims of the same sort." * * *
> "The claim may only be recovered by suit or action. The judgment obtained is collectible like any other; it has no preference in distribution if the debtor's property be in the hands of a receiver, if he has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, or become bankrupt."

In his arguments in the courts below, the petitioner constantly insinuated that the liability resulting from a Comptroller's assessment has a peculiar sanctity which requires the courts to give to assessment claims a preference over other claims and to find a means of satisfying them without regard to the rules of law governing claims of lesser dignity, so that the defense that the stockholder's liability had been terminated by a transfer of his bank shares must be regarded with special scepticism, no matter how regular it appears to be.

It is, of course, well settled that a bank stockholder may not escape liability for an assessment by transferring his bank shares to a mere agent or nominee, or by a transfer made with knowledge of the impending failure of the bank or for some other fraudulent purpose. But except in such cases the courts give full effect to transfers as terminating the transferrer's liability under the statute. He may transfer his shares to any one, without regard to the solvency of the transferree or his ability to pay an assessment upon the shares, if it should be made. In McDonald v. Dewey,[1] this Court said:

> "The stockholder is not deprived of his right to sell his stock by the fact that the sale is made to an insolvent person, unless it be made with knowledge of the insolvency of the bank."

In Fowler v. Crouse,[2] the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit said:

> "But this provision is not intended to interfere with the right to freely transfer shares in such institutions" (p. 647).
> "If the bank is insolvent, and its insolvency is unknown to the seller, the transfer divests him of liability as a stockholder. To burden a seller with restrictions arising from unknown insolvency would practically take away his right to dispose of his shares" (p. 648).

His right to dispose of his shares must also apply when he makes an out-and-out transfer of it for stock of another company. As a stockholder of the Bank, he no longer had any rights against it whatsoever.

For, as said by this Court, in Klein v. Board of Supervisors[1] and subsequent cases:

> "The corporation is a person and its ownership is a nonconductor that makes it impossible to attribute an interest in its property to its members."

That principle was fully recognized, and the fact that there was such a transfer was clearly claimed, by the petitioner in the Laurent Case when he sought a judgment on the basis of the absolute ownership of Banco of the certificates in question. In his brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Laurent Case he states as follows at page 51:

> "The record here shows that BancoKentucky received dividends on its proportionate interest in the stock in the National Bank of Kentucky. BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to control the votes in the National Bank of Kentucky. BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to select Directors for the National Bank of Kentucky. BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to secure title to the stock in itself. BancoKentucky retained every privilege which is given by the National Banking Act to stockholders; and furthermore, BancoKentucky agreed to pay any assessment which might be levied on stock of the National Bank of Kentucky." * * *

When the Comptroller levied the assessment against the shareholders of the Bank, petitioner became possessed of an unsecured and unpreferred general claim. In the enforcement of it, the law gave no short cut for by-passing general rules of law that might interfere with his securing a judgment upon his claim.

One of these applicable here is the rule set forth in the Klein Case. If he seeks to avoid this rule, he must show that the corporation involved comes within the well-established exceptions to this rule by reason of its own character and not by reason of the fact that his claim arises under the statutory assessment allowed by the Banking Act.

When petitioner sued BancoKentucky Company on the assessment in the Laurent Case, he knew that the BancoKentucky Company was not listed as a shareholder upon the stock record book, which the Banking Act required the Bank to keep and which it did keep. He knew that the same record showed that 39,820 of the shares were listed in the names of six Trustees and ten shares each in the names of each of the eighteen directors of the Bank.[1]

He was fully cognizant of the fact that, Banco not being a record holder, it was necessary for him to allege and prove that Banco was the real owner of the shares involved. But he also knew that, if he recovered a judgment against BancoKentucky Company, as the true owner of these shares, he could not again sue its stockholders, as the real owner of the same shares, because he would be bound by the judgment in the first case.

[1]Request for Admissions, Rec. Vol. II, p. 76; Bill of Complaint, Vol. I, p. 60; also photostat copy Defendants' Exhibit No. 6 of the Bank Stock Record Book.

The record shows that Banco was a bona fide corporation and the true owner of these certificates and petitioner rightly decided to sue Banco as the true owner and accordingly secured a judgment so holding.

It is true that the petitioner wrote a letter to the stockholders of BancoKentucky Company, advising them that he was about to sue BancoKentucky Company, but that, if he did not succeed in collecting his claim from BancoKentucky Company, he was going to sue them as stockholders of said company. We submit, however, that this letter has not the slightest significance except to show petitioner's full knowledge of the situation, which confronted him, and the fact that he believed that Banco was the true owner. Certainly he could not create a cause of action against the stockholders simply by reason of the fact that he could not secure all of his money from the true owner. Likewise, he could not avoid the binding effect as between himself, the BancoKentucky Company and its stockholders by a mere declaration of what he intended to do.

The respondents that were found among the 2,225 persons who had transferred Participation Certificates to the BancoKentucky Company joined issue with the petitioner on the averments (a) that they had transferred their Participation Certificates to the BancoKentucky Company merely as their agent and (b) that they had made those transfers in order to evade liability for an assessment on Bank shares.

THE FACTS IN THIS CASE DO NOT JUSTIFY LOOKING BEYOND BANCO AS THE REAL OWNER OF BANK STOCK.

A variety of reasons have been advanced for the disregard of the corporate entity of the BancoKentucky Company.

The Participation Certificates appeared to be the property of that Company. If they were its property, then they were not the property of its stockholders and the stockholders of Banco were not liable as stockholders of the Bank.

For our present purpose, it is not necessary to touch upon the abstruse and metaphysical conceptions of the "entity" or "personality" of a private corporation, so entertainingly discussed by Mr. Machen in his article, "Corporate Personality."[1] In Klein v. Board of Supervisors,[2] Mr. Justice Holmes, speaking for the Court, said:

> "But it leads nowhere to call a corporation a fiction. If it is a fiction it is a fiction created by law with intent that it should be acted on as if true. The corporation is a person and its ownership is a nonconductor that makes it impossible to attribute an interest in its property to its members."

[1] 24 Harvard Law Review, 253, 363:

> "The doctrine of corporate personality is a natural though figurative expression of actual facts. It is only by study and artificiality that we can train ourselves to make it confusing or misleading. The best method of dealing with the doctrine that a corporation is a legal personality is, therefore, to think less about it. The conception itself is a natural one. We do not need to be instructed to regard a corporation as an entity and to regard that entity as a person: our minds are so constituted that we cannot help taking that view. Being a natural conception, it will tend to find its proper place in the law, if only we cease to regard it as something mysterious or technical."

[2] 282 U. S. 19, at p. 23.

In Puerto Rico v. Russell and Co.,[1] Chief Justice Stone, then an Associate Justice, speaking for the Court and having reference to the jurisdictional rule obtaining in the federal courts that the domicile of a corporation, not that of its individual stockholders, is controlling as to diversity of citizenship, said:

> "In its final form this rule of jurisdiction was stated in terms of a 'conclusive presumption' that the stockholders are citizens of the State of the corporate domicile [citing cases], but even those who formulated the rule found its theoretical justification only in the complete legal personality with which corporations are endowed. Fictitious that personality may be, in the sense that the fact that the corporation is composed of a plurality of individuals, themselves legal persons, is disregarded, but 'it is a fiction created by law with intent that it should be acted on as if true.' Klein v. Tax Supers., 282 U. S. 19, 24."

In Cannon Manufacturing Co. v. Cudahy Packing Co.,[2] the question was whether a Maine corporation (Cudahy Packing Company) was doing business within the State of North Carolina and was, therefore, suable there, because it held all of the stock of a subsidiary corporation (Cudahy Company of Alabama) which was doing business in North Carolina. In affirming the judgment of the District Court for the Western District of North Carolina, dismissing the action for lack of jurisdiction, Mr. Justice Brandeis, speaking for the Court, said:

[1] 288 U. S. 476.
[2] 267 U. S. 333.

"In the case at bar, the identity of interest may have been more complete, and the exercise or control over the subsidiary more intimate, than in the three cases cited, but that fact has, in the absence of an applicable statute, no legal significance. The corporate separation, though perhaps merely formal, was real. It was not pure fiction" (p. 336).

"It is not contended that the Alabama corporation was dissolved ipso facto by this concentration of its stock or that its property became, in law, that of the defendant" (p. 337).

We submit that there is nothing in this record that justifies any departure from the rule that a corporation "is a person and its ownership is a non-conductor that makes it impossible to attribute an interest in its property to its members."[1] An attempt to disregard the corporate personality of the BancoKentucky Company was made in the case of Anderson v. Akers, supra, in order that the directors of the National Bank of Kentucky might be held liable for making loans on the security of the stock of the Bank. The loans had been made on the security of stock of the BancoKentucky Company and it was claimed that there was such a connection or relationship between the Bank and its stockholder, the BancoKentucky Company, as to make these loans, in effect, loans upon the stock of the Bank. The District Court overruled the Master and upheld the Receiver on this point and awarded a recovery to him against the Bank directors, upon the theory that there had been a violation of the Bank Act. But the

[1] Klein v. Board of Supervisors, supra.

Circuit Court of Appeals[1] reversed the judgment of the District Court, saying (p. 536):

> "We come then to the question whether the relation between the bank and the BancoKentucky Company was such that a court of equity would be warranted in disregarding the existence of Banco as a separate corporate entity. It is true that Banco was conceived in the vaulting imagination of the president of the bank; that it was promoted and fostered by the appellants; that the directorates of the two corporations, though not identical, overlapped; that the great majority of trust participation certificates representing stock in the bank became the property of Banco, and that there is a suggestion of identity in the name adopted for the new company. But Banco was not a mere holding company for the bank's stock. It was organized for clearly defined purposes, too optimistically conceived, perhaps, but neither illegitimate nor unlawful. It had its own capital with cash resources at one period almost twice the entire capital and surplus of the bank. While in the very beginning the bank stock may, as found by the court, have been its principal asset, and may have continued thereafter to be its most valuable single asset, it had other assets of very substantial value, and it was warrantable inference at the time of its organization and for a substantial period thereafter that it could well meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank. At any rate there is nothing in the record to point to its creation for the purpose of escaping such assessment. Indeed when > the assessment was finally made by the Comptroller it was enforced against Banco and not against the stockholders. See Laurent v. Anderson, supra. Its separate corporate existence was recognized by the very receiver on whose behalf we are now asked to ignore it."

[1] Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 518.

In the instant case, the District Court made the following findings of fact:

Banco was "organized in good faith," was "certainly not a sham," was "not organized for a fraudulent purpose or to conceal secret or sinister enterprises conducted for the benefit of the bank," was not "a mere holding company."[1]

And the Court stated the following conclusions of law:

Banco was "the true, legal and beneficial owner of the stock of the Bank." The transfers of Participation Certificates to Banco "were out and out transfers and Banco thereby acquired full legal title thereto." The stockholders of Banco "were not stockholders of the Bank within the meaning of the statute."[2]

The Circuit Court of Appeals, in affirming the judgment dismissing the bill, made the following summary statement of its conclusions:

> "The BancoKentucky Company was a legal entity, separate and distinct from its shareholders. The record reveals no underlying purpose of those who organized it or invested in its shares to afford asylum to stockholders of a national bank, seeking escape from the rigidity of individual liability for double assessment. Banco was not a mere sham corporation, nor was it exclusively a holding company. It existed vitally as an independent corporation and not as a mere conduit for the flow of national bank-stock dividends to individuals. The corporation has been held liable as the real and beneficial owner of a large majority of the capital stock of a defunct national bank.

"In our judgment, the reach of double liability assessment within the true meaning of the National Banking Act does not extend beyond the Banco-Kentucky Company to its stockholders."

In support of his claim that Banco was a "corporate agency and instrumentality" for its stockholders, the petitioner relied, in both courts below, chiefly upon the case of Barbour v. Thomas.[1] In his petition for certiorari in the instant case, he declared that the "factual situation" in the Barbour Case was "strikingly parallel if not exactly identical to this case." We submit that any resemblance between the two cases is only superficial. It is true that both cases involved an attempt to impose liability for a Comptroller's assessment upon persons who were not the record-holders of the stock of the insolvent bank. But there the resemblance comes to an end. If the cross-defendants in the Barbour Case, like the respondents in the instant case, had denied liability solely upon the ground that they were not the owners of bank shares, they would not have had a leg to stand on. In the absence of extraneous circumstances, their liability was clear, not merely because of the peculiar nature of the Detroit Bankers Company in which they were stockholders, but also because they had expressly assumed liability for the assessment. But the stockholders of the Detroit Bankers Company did not defend the receiver's action upon the ground that they were not owners of bank shares. They relied upon certain extraneous circumstances which do not appear in the instant case. As was pointed out by Judge Hayes, who tried that case in the District Court,[1] they alleged:

> "That (1) article IX in the charter [by which the stockholders of the Bankers Company expressly assumed liability] was contrary to the general law of Michigan and void; that (2) the provision undertaking to require a shareholder to assume the stock assessment liability was a promise to assume the debt of another, and not signed by the shareholder or any one by him authorized, and was not valid under the statute of frauds; and that (3) if the provision in the charter was valid and the statute of frauds inapplicable, the promise, if any, was contractual and unenforceable for that the liability arose from conditions not within control of the corporation and not in the contemplation of the parties, the liability arising from insolvency which was brought about by (a) the illegal acts of the Governor of Michigan in declaring state banking holidays, (b) the illegal acts of the President of the United States in declaring national banking holidays, and by (c) the illegal acts of the conservator who sold the liquid assets of the bank."

[1] Barbour v. Thomas, 7 F. Supp. 271, at 274.

It will be observed that none of the questions presented in the Barbour Case are presented in the instant case. In the Barbour Case all of the claims of exoneration from the assessment advanced by the stockholders of the Bankers Company were rejected both by the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals, chiefly upon the ground that they involved a collateral attack on the Comptroller's decision as to the solvency of the bank and the need for the assessment.

The Barbour Case[1] and the Atherton Case[2] were handed down by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit on the same day (November 11, 1936). Hicks and Simons, JJ., sat in both cases. The Detroit bank receiver won in the first case and his Louisville colleague lost in the second.

In the Barbour Case, Judge Hicks, speaking for the Court, gave a careful and detailed analysis of the extraordinary nature of the Detroit Bankers Company. It was, indeed, a bankers' company. It was, essentially and exclusively, an instrumentality of the five constituent banks by which it was conceived, organized, financed, dominated and ultimately dissolved. At least for the first five years (it lasted only three years), the absolute control was in the five constituent banks, which supplied ratably its only funds, to-wit, $1,200. This modest sum was the basis for the issue of 120 "trustees shares," having no par value and issued, ten shares each, to twelve trustees, nominated by the banks from the members of their respective directorates. The trust upon which these shares were held by the nominees of the banks was that they should be voted by the trustees at all elections of directors for persons who were holders of ten trustees' shares and that each trustee should have the right to vote for himself for director, "the spirit of the foregoing being to perpetuate a proportionate representation of each of the foregoing institutions or their successors during the period of the trust." The expenses of the Bankers Company were met by the levy of "service charges" on the several constituent banks.

[1] Barbour v. Thomas, 86 Fed. (2d) 510.
[2] Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 518.

None of the stockholders of the Bankers Company had a voice in its affairs or a vote in its elections. Indeed, there were no elections. The unquestioned control was in a self-perpetuating oligarchy composed of the nominees and puppets of the five constituent banks, whose stockholders exchanged their bank's shares for shares of the Bankers Company in reliance upon this air-tight system of control by the banks in which they were interested.

Upon this showing, Judge Hicks announced the following conclusion:

> "We concur in the finding that appellants are 'actual owners' of stock of the bank upon which the assessment was levied. The stockholders never sold their stock. They simply exchanged it for holding company shares. The holding company certificates represented the interests which the shareholders of each unit held or acquired in the assets of the group. None of the stock was sold to the public nor issued to any persons other than > the stockholders of the banks or their assignees. * * * Stockholders of the banks had no intention of retiring from the banking business. They organized the holding company for the protection and promotion of their common interests because they realized that the banks acting separately were at a disadvantage in competing with the Guardian-Detroit-Union group. * * * They were careful to provide that the holding company should be under the exclusive control of officers and agents of the component banks at least until December 31, 1934."

Referring to Article IX of the charter of the Bankers Company by which the holders of stock of the Bankers Company assumed liability for any assessment against the stock of any of the unit banks, Judge Hicks observed that this assumption of liability by the stockholders of the Bankers Company "constituted additional evidence that they regarded themselves in their relationship to the creditors and depositors of the bank as the true and real owners of its stock." Simultaneously with the handing down of this opinion by Judge Hicks, Judge Simons handed down the opinion of the same Court in Atherton v. Anderson, supra, from which we have quoted at length (supra, p. 41).[1]

Purchasers of Banco stock acquired the usual rights and none other than those of a stockholder. Those who traded T.P.C.'s for Banco shares parted with all title to their T.P.C.'s and made no arrangement of any kind that reserved to them any further right regarding the latter shares, or any different right in regard to their

[1] Atherton v. Anderson, supra, at p. 536.

Banco stock than that possessed by the stockholders of other corporations. They retained no power, and had none, as stockholders of Banco to require the corporation either to dispose of its acquired T.P.C. shares or to keep them. There was no contract or arrangement that prevented Banco from handling every single asset it owned exactly as any other corporation might do.

The directors of Banco never coincided with the directors of the National Bank of Kentucky. True, at all times the National Bank of Kentucky directors were directors of Banco, but the former Louisville National Bank directors were never directors of the Bank of Kentucky, and after January, 1930, the directors of the National Bank of Kentucky were continuously in a minority on the Banco Board.

The stockholders reserved to themselves no power to control the management or disposition of the assets of Banco, except the indirect control resulting from the power to elect the directors of the company. Nor was there any arrangement by which the conduct of the affairs of Banco could be controlled in any degree by any bank whose shares were held by Banco.

It was true that in the initial stages of Banco's course the overlapping personnel of the directorates of Banco and the two banks in which it then held stock made possible a large measure of co-operation between those separate institutions. This was, indeed, one of the objectives which it was hoped would be attained through the organization of Banco. But there were no interlocking controls which deprived any of those institutions of the unfettered power to conduct its own affairs.

There was no "channelling" of bank dividends through Banco to stockholders who had exchanged bank shares for Banco shares, in the sense in which the Receiver uses that expression. Banco derived income from other sources than the bank shares held by it. The dividends paid to its stockholders were in a much larger amount than the income received by it from bank dividends and it was only because of Banco's income from other sources that it was able to declare and pay the dividends which it paid to its stockholders. This subject is fully explained by the Receiver's accountant and witness, Hugh A. White (R. II, pp. 132-134):

> "The total dividends paid by Banco to all its stockholders during any one period exceeded the amount of dividends received by Banco on Trustees' Participation Certificates. There was no period when the income from bank stock held by Banco equalled the dividend payment."

But nothing we might say to distinguish the instant case from the Barbour Case could equal in clarity and cogency the simple contrast of the pictures of the Detroit Bankers Company and the BancoKentucky Company drawn by Judge Hicks and Judge Simons in their respective opinions in the Barbour Case and the Atherton Case. We submit that the grounds upon which Judge Hicks predicated the liability of the stockholders of the Detroit Bankers Company are conspicuously absent from the instant case.

Among the other cases relied upon by the petitioner in the courts below, a conspicuous place was given to the case of Fors v. Farrell.[1] The most authoritative commentary upon that case is to be found in a later opinion of the same Court (Supreme Court of Michigan) in Burrows v. Emery.[2] In that case the receiver of an insolvent bank sought to enforce an assessment upon the stockholders of the bank against the stockholders of a corporation which itself held stock of the insolvent bank. The case was heard by the entire bench of the Court of eight members, including three of the judges who concurred in the decision in Fors v. Farrell Case. The decision, affirming the judgment of the lower court dismissing the receiver's petition, was unanimous.

After explaining and distinguishing five of petitioner's favorite cases, namely, Fors v. Farrell, supra, Corker v. Soper,[3] Metropolitan Holding Company v. Snyder;[4] Nettles v. Rhett,[5] and Barbour v. Thomas, supra, the Court said:

> "These and other cases cited by plaintiff may be summed up in the statement of Justice North in Fors v. Farrell, supra: 'That neither an individual nor a corporation can through a trust arrangement or by other indirect means of circumlocution possess as an owner and enjoy the beneficial interest in bank stock without assuming the contingent liability of a stockholder's assessment imposed by law. To hold otherwise would be to nullify the protection given the bank creditors by the statute imposing double liability.' This rule is not meant to lend aid to an effort to attack a bona fide corporate entity and hold shareholders of that corporation liable for a bank assessment levied upon bank stock which the corporation owns.

"'The corporation will be regarded as a legal entity as a general rule, and the courts acting cautiously and only when the circumstances justify it, will ignore the fiction of corporate entity, where it is used as a blind or instrumentality to defeat public convenience, justify wrong, or perpetrate a fraud, and will regard the corporation as an association of persons.' Majestic Co. v. Orpheum Circuit, Inc., 8 Cir. 21 F. (2d) 720, 724. See, also, People v. Michigan Bell Telephone Co., 246 Mich. 198, 224 N. W. 438. * * *

"Here the stockholders did not assume liability for an assessment and the history of the corporation persuades one to believe that it enjoyed a bona fide existence free from fraudulent intent to evade liability."

In bringing to an end our discussion of this branch of our subject, we would call attention, not only to the findings of the District Court quoted above, but also to the fact that Judge Martin, speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals in the instant case, after quoting from Judge Simons' opinion in the Atherton Case, said:

"The additional evidence adduced in the case at bar, though on a different issue, presents no discernible reason for change in the Court's previously expressed concept of the character of the BancoKentucky Company."

THE FACTS IN THIS CASE DO NOT SUSTAIN THE CLAIM THAT THE BANK WAS INSOLVENT OR THAT RESPONDENTS TRANSFERRED THEIR SHARES WITH KNOWLEDGE OF IMPENDING FAILURE.

The petition for certiorari (page 9) thus states the legal question presented to this Court:

"Are the owners of an insolvent national bank relieved from individual liability * * * because, shortly before the bank's failure, they organized a holding company and exchanged their bank shares for holding company shares."

We have diligently tried to understand and follow the petitioner's contentions with regard to this claim throughout the entire course of this case. An examination of petitioner's bill will disclose that it contains no mention of the insolvent, or failing, condition of the Bank, at the time of the organization of Banco or at the time of the transfer of T.P.C.'s, and no claim that respondents transferred their shares with knowledge of any such condition. The bill did not even hint at the existence of the issue now presented.

During the course of the trial much proof was offered by petitioner which could have no conceivable place in the case unless it was addressed to this issue.

We have heretofore shown (pages 6, 7) that at the conclusion of the trial petitioner expressly disclaimed any intention of charging that the respondents transferred their T.P.C.'s "with knowledge of the impending failure" of the Bank or that they knew of the Bank's condition in 1929 or that the Bank "was insolvent, in any sense of the word, when Banco was organized, and much less that the organizers knew it." This claim was completely abandoned during the proceedings before the Circuit Court of Appeals and this issue is not even mentioned in the opinion of that Court. That this question should now be presented to this Court as the underlying legal issue in the case is unusual to say the least.

The question as stated in the petition does not contain all of the elements required by the statute. One important element, i. e., "knowledge" of impending failure, is entirely omitted from petitioner's statement of the issue. But if respondents are to be held liable for assessments as transferrers of their stock within the meaning of the statute, knowledge is an indispensable element.

In the trial of the case below, petitioner made absolutely no effort to prove knowledge of the condition of the Bank on the part of any of the respondents. The proof introduced by respondents was so strongly to the contrary that the District Judge finally directed the entry of a stipulation (R. I, p. 174) to the effect that respondents, except officers, directors, or employees, would testify

"that each of them acquired their respective shares of stock in BancoKentucky, believing, as distinguished from whatever constructive knowledge may be imputed to them as a matter of law, that the Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky were both solvent and sound financial institutions, and that they did not even remotely suspect that either of said banking institutions were in a questionable financial condition, if such they were, and that they acquired their stock in BancoKentucky Company in the belief that they were making a sound financial investment in a separate corporation, and that the BancoKentucky Company was to do the things authorized by its corporate charter, as indicated in the letter of July 19, 1929."

The truth of the testimony of respondents on this issue cannot be doubted. Many of these same respondents who transferred their T.P.C.'s, which then had a potential assessment liability of $1,437,620.00, at the same time made cash purchases of an additional 178,878 shares of Banco for the sum of $4,471,950.00 (R. I., p. 256). Of the above respondents, those who were directors of the Bank and the Trust Company, who then held T.P.C.'s carrying a maximum assessment liability of $761,150.00 subscribed for 47,188 additional Banco shares for which they paid in cash the sum of $1,179,750.00, or $418,600.00 more than their assessment liability. It is inconceivable now, and was inconceivable at the time of the trial, that these respondents could have been suspicious of the condition of the Bank or could have been attempting to evade a possible liability of $1,437,620.00 when they made a simultaneous cash investment in the stock of Banco three times as large as any possible liability.

The truth of their testimony is further borne out by the fact that respondents who are now charged with attempting to evade assessment liability retained to the end deposits in the Bank and the Trust Company in excess of $2,000,000.00 (R. I, p. 267).

Their confidence in the Bank was justified by its published statement of July 11, 1929, which showed, in addition to a capital of $4,000,000.00, surplus, undivided profits and reserves of $2,929,034.48 (R. I, p. 263; Finding 42).

Another important fact which discloses the confidence of these respondents and the community in general in the condition of the Bank is that at the time Banco was organized T.P.C.'s were selling freely in the open market at from $47 to $50 per share. Bearing in mind that these certificates were of a $10 par value, the market on these shares demonstrates that these respondents were justified in feeling that they were disposing of an asset of substantial value when they exchanged their T.P.C.'s for Banco stock, and the thought of a possible assessment liability against stock selling at five times its par value was non-existent. At that time T.P.C.'s and Bank stock had a long and uninterrupted record of large dividend payments.

Before the Circuit Court of Appeals the petitioner sought to support his claim of knowledge by the contention that respondents, as stockholders in the Bank, were chargeable with knowledge which was assumed to have been in the possession of the officers of the Bank

(R. I, p. 291; Point 6). As no support could apparently be found for this contention, it now appears to have been abandoned and, for the first time, the charge is directly made in petitioner's brief in this Court (p. 34) that the stockholders themselves had actual knowledge of the claimed condition of the Bank and themselves engineered what is now alluded to as a scheme to "avoid" or "escape" liability.

The facts of this case are sufficient to eliminate completely all of these contentions. The District Court found (R. I, p. 267):

> "There were irregularities in the handling of some of the credit accounts of the Bank, but the soundness of the Bank and its ability to meet its obligations could not be questioned, until long after the formation of Banco."

The District Court also found (R. I, p. 255):

> "Banco was established for its avowed purposes with no thought on the part of any of its organizers of avoiding double liability on their Banco stock."

The Circuit Court of Appeals held (127 F. (2d) 696, at p. 703):

> "The record reveals no underlying purpose of those who organized it or invested in its shares to afford asylum to stockholders of a national bank, seeking escape from the rigidity of individual liability or double assessment."

Petitioner's statement of the sole legal question now presented to the Court, even if sustained to the fullest extent, could in no event be sufficient to cast liability upon that large group of respondents who admittedly never owned stock in the Bank and who never exchanged such stock for Banco stock but who acquired their stock in Banco by purchase after its organization.

It is respectfully submitted that this record gives no support to the claims now made but heretofore abandoned, that the Bank was insolvent or that respondents transferred their T.P.C.'s for the fraudulent purpose of escaping liability to assessment as stockholders of the Bank.

RES JUDICATA: THE DECISION IN LAURENT v. ANDERSON IS CONCLUSIVE OF THE ISSUE THAT BANCO, AND NOT ITS STOCKHOLDERS, WAS THE REAL OWNER OF BANK SHARES AND LIABLE FOR THE ASSESSMENT.

Among other defenses to the claim made by petitioner here, respondents pleaded[1] that the judgment rendered in favor of the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky in the case of Laurent v. Anderson, affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit,[2] is res judicata against petitioner's claim here.

Laurent v. Anderson was a suit by the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, petitioner here, seeking to hold the BancoKentucky Company as the real owner of the same Trustees' Participation Certificates, representing stock of the Bank.

[1]Transcript of Record, Vol. I, Paragraph III, p. 105.
[2]70 Fed. (2d) 819.

The basis of respondents' claim that this judgment is res judicata is that, as stockholders of the Banco Kentucky Company, they are in privity with that corporation, touching corporate matters, and are, therefore, bound by that judgment, even though not named as parties in that suit. Respondents being bound, the petitioner, as the one who obtained said judgment, is likewise bound. The Receiver of the Bank, having secured a judgment against Banco, with whom respondents were in privity, that Banco was the real and true owner of the bank stock involved here, cannot re-litigate that question in a subsequent, collateral proceeding against any of the parties or privies to the first action.

In speaking of res judicata, this Court in Oklahoma v. Texas[1] says (p. 85):

> "The general principle applied in numerous decisions of this court, and definitely accepted in Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 48-49, is that a question of fact or of law distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction as a ground of recovery or defense in a suit or action between parties sui juris is conclusively settled by the final judgment or decree therein so that it cannot be further litigated in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies, whether the second suit be for the same or a different cause of action. As was declared by Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court in the case cited (p. 49): 'This general rule is demanded by the very object for which civil courts have been established, which is to secure the peace and repose of society by the settlement of matters capable of judicial determination. Its enforcement is essential to the maintenance of social order; for, the aid of judicial tribunals would not be invoked for the vindication of rights of person and property, if, as between parties and their privies, conclusiveness did not attend the judgments of such tribunals in respect of all matters properly put in issue and actually determined by them'."

To determine what was involved in the case claimed to be res judicata the Court laid down the following rule (p. 88):

> "What was involved and determined in the former suit is to be tested by an examination of the record and proceedings therein, including the pleadings, the evidence submitted, the respective contentions of the parties, and the findings and opinion of the court;" * * *

In Hawkins v. Glenn[1] this Court stated the rule, as applying to situations such as are presented here, saying:

> "We think it cannot be doubted that a decree against a corporation in respect to corporate matters, such as the making of an assessment in the discharge of a duty resting on the corporation, necessarily binds its members in the absence of fraud and that this is involved in the contract created in becoming a stockholder."

[1] 131 U. S. 319, 332.

That the stockholders are in privity with the corporation to such an extent that their presence in a suit touching corporate matters is not necessary to bind them has been announced many times by this Court.

In Hawkins v. Glenn, supra, the Court stated the rule thus:

> "It was not necessary that the stockholders should be before the court when it [the order] was made, any more than that they should have been there when the decree of bankruptcy was pronounced."

Again, in the same case, this Court said:

> "A stockholder is so far an integral part of the corporation that, in the view of the law, he is privy to the proceedings touching the body of which he is a member."

This was quoted with approval and applied in the later case of Hancock National Bank v. Farnum.[1]

The rule has never been modified by this Court in any way, so far as we have found.

Analysis of the proceedings in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, will show that it has been finally determined by judgment of a court having jurisdiction that the Banco-Kentucky Company was the actual owner of the Trustees' Participation Certificates, representing the shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, here involved, and was consequently the real owner of the Bank shares represented by those Certificates.

[1] 176 U. S. 640, 644.

The record in the case of Laurent v. Anderson is filed in this case as "Defendants' Exhibit No. 23."

Examination of that record shows that the plaintiff in that case was the same as the petitioner here, namely, the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky.

The Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky was represented by the same counsel in that case that represent him here.

The defendant in the Laurent Case was the Banco-Kentucky Company.

While the respondents were not named as defendants in that case, their connection with the BancoKentucky Company, as stockholders, automatically made them privy to the judgment.

Respondents and Banco being bound by this judgment and unable to litigate again with the Receiver of the Bank, the question of Banco's true ownership of the T.P.C.'s and the underlying Bank stock, the Receiver of the Bank, petitioner here, is also bound by that judgment and is, therefore, unable to re-litigate that question with Banco or its stockholders.

The imposition of the liability here being purely statutory, in order to succeed in the suit against Banco, it was necessary for the Receiver, petitioner here, to bring the BancoKentucky Company within the purview of the statute. Banco not being a record-holder of Bank stock, the petitioner was compelled to claim that the BancoKentucky Company was the real owner of the stock involved and accordingly so brought his suit.

There has never been any claim of joint ownership and obviously, therefore, a decision holding that Banco "was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the national bank stock involved" excluded any one else from being the real owner of that stock.

The statute imposes liability upon shareholders of the Bank, and upon transferrers within sixty days or with knowledge of impending failure. The only other exception recognized in the decisions of this Court is that record holders, even though not the true owners, may be held upon the ground of estoppel, in which case a subsequent claim asserted against the true owners is not inconsistent. Certainly, this rule does not apply here, since in the Laurent Case the BancoKentucky Company was not sought to be held as the record holder of Bank stock. It was sought to be held, and was actually held, as the real and beneficial owner of the Bank stock, represented by the Participation Certificates held by it.

This was announced in the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Laurent Case[1] and is conclusively shown by Respondents' Exhibit "No. 6" and Stipulation in reference thereto filed in this case. Exhibit "No. 6" is a photostatic copy of the Stock Record Book of the National Bank of Kentucky, certified by the Comptroller. It contains neither the name of the BancoKentucky Company nor the name of any of the respondents herein, except those who were directors of the Bank.

[1] 70 Fed. (2d) 819.

In order, therefore, that the BancoKentucky Company be held liable for an assessment, it was necessary for the Bank Receiver in the Laurent Case to allege and prove, not only that the T.P.C.'s which Banco did own were equivalent to Bank stock, but also that the Banco-Kentucky Company was the true owner of the T.P.C.'s.

This he did allege and prove in the Laurent Case.

As clearly showing his claim that Banco was the real owner, we refer to page 51 of his brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Laurent Case, where he makes this argument:

> "The record here shows that BancoKentucky received dividends on its proportionate interest in the stock in the National Bank of Kentucky. BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to control the votes in the National Bank of Kentucky. BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to select Directors for the National Bank of Kentucky, BancoKentucky retained and exercised its right to secure title to the stock in itself. Banco-Kentucky retained every privilege which is given by the National Banking Act to stockholders; and furthermore, BancoKentucky agreed to pay any assessment which might be levied on stock of the National Bank of Kentucky." * * *

BancoKentucky could only have attained the rights above referred to by an out-and-out transfer of Trustees' Participation Certificates to it. There has never been any claim that Banco held this stock subject to any agreement concerning it with the transferor. The acquisition of these rights by Banco came through the sale of the stock to Banco and as an incident thereof.

The former T.P.C.-holder lost them at the same time Banco acquired them.

In his conclusion in the same brief is this statement (p. 52):

> * * * "A decision denying the right of the Comptroller of the Currency to collect the assessment levied in this case from the true owners of the National Bank of Kentucky would undermine a fundamental security of depositors."

In order to sue the BancoKentucky Company, which was in receivership, it was necessary for Keyes, then Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, to secure the consent of the Jefferson Circuit Court in Kentucky. He accordingly filed in a pending suit, known as Carroll v. Chemical Bank & Trust Co., a petition seeking leave to sue the BancoKentucky Company for the assessment here involved. In that petition he alleged, under oath:

> "Your Petitioner further represents that at the time of the closing of said National Bank and the appointment of your Petitioner as Receiver, the defendant, The BancoKentucky Company, was the owner and holder of 540,484 Trustees' Participation Certificates," * * *.

With this petition the plaintiff, Keyes, tendered an order drawn by him, which the Court signed, to the following effect:

> "It is therefore ordered, adjudged and decreed that Paul C. Keyes, as Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, be and he hereby is granted leave and authority by this Court to commence and prosecute to final judgment an appropriate action at law against Joseph S. Laurent, hereunto duly appointed Receiver of The BancoKentucky Company, and the duly acting and qualified Receiver of said company, to recover such sum of money as said Paul C. Keyes, as Receiver, may claim to be due from The BancoKentucky Company as an assessment upon the shares of capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky or upon certain Trustees' Participation Certificates claimed to represent the ownership of capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky by The BancoKentucky Company and any final judgment recovered in such action shall be a valid and just claim against said Joseph S. Laurent, as Receiver of The BancoKentucky Company herein, to be filed in this action for determination as to its rights of distribution in relation to other claims."

In the Laurent Case plaintiff thus states, under oath, the basis of his claim:[1]

"that said money is due him as an assessment upon the shares of stock of The National Bank of Kentucky owned by The BancoKentucky Company at the time plaintiff was appointed Receiver or upon certain Trustees' Participation Certificates, representing The National Bank of Kentucky stock, owned by The BancoKentucky Company at the time of said appointment of plaintiff as Receiver."

Again, on page 6 of the same exhibit:

"The BancoKentucky Company and/or Joseph S. Laurent ever since September 19, 1929, has been and is the owner and holder of said Trustees' Participation Certificates for Five Hundred Forty Thousand Four Hundred eighty-four (540,484) shares, of the par value of $10 per share each of said trust estate."

In his printed brief in the District Court in the five cases, which reached the Court of Appeals under the style of Laurent v. Anderson, he states this general heading (p. 17):

> "The holders of trustees' participation certificates were the true and beneficial shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and as such are liable for the assessment made by the comptroller."

At page 29 he says:

> * * * "We believe that in the instant case the holder of a Trustees' Participation Certificate is the real stockholder. Being such he is liable for an assessment."

Again, at page 38:

> "There are numerous other cases where technicalities are disregarded and persons have been held liable whom the Court describes as 'the real owners,' 'the actual owners,' 'the substantial owners,' 'the true owners,' 'the equitable owners,' 'the beneficial owners,' 'the owners in fact,' and 'those to whom the shares really belong.' Each of the phrases listed above could be applied to the defendants in these cases as holders of Trustees' Participation Certificates. These defendants control every action of the Trustees. They were the true stockholders of the Bank. They were listed as beneficial owners of the stock on the list of certificate holders certified to and kept by the Bank under the terms of the trust. If they were not the stock owners, then the National Bank of Kentucky had no stock owners!" * * *

In the District Court the Receiver claimed throughout his brief that the assessment should be sustained because Banco was the true owner of the stock here involved.

In sustaining the Receiver, Judge Cochran held:[1]

> * * * "Nor is it of any consequence that the BancoKentucky Company never owned in any way any stock in the National Bank of Kentucky and that it acquired its equitable interest therein by purchase of Trustees' Participation Certificates from those who had been such owners and taken them in substitution for their stock. Upon the acquisition of such stock that Company became the beneficial and hence the actual and real owner thereof and hence subject to assessment."

In a separate finding of facts and law in said cause Judge Cochran also found:[2]

> "That the BancoKentucky Company, and the defendant, Joseph S. Laurent, its Receiver, was the actual and real owner of 37,721.624 shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, having a par value of $100.00 per share on November 17, 1930."

[2] Defts.' Exhibit No. 23, p. 18, Rec., Laurent v. Anderson.

The case was appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and an opinion[1] was rendered, affirming Judge Cochran. The opinion states the actual question involved and decided by the Court. At page 820 of the reported opinion, it is said:

> "Banco never held stock in the National Bank of Kentucky but several years after the date of the agreement purchased the trustees' participation certificates which had been issued under the agreement."[2]

Again, at page 820:

> "The assessment of double liability was made against Banco upon the theory that, being the holder of Trustees' Participation Certificates issued under a trust agreement dated April 22, 1927, it was the real and beneficial owner of national bank stock."

The Court held (p. 824):

> "The evidence establishes that Banco was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the national bank stock involved."

Again (p. 824):

> "The petition and especially the evidence sustain recovery against Banco as the real and beneficial owner under Section 64 of the National Banking Act (12 U. S. C. A.)."

[2]Agreement of 1927, Trusteeing stock of National Bank of Kentucky and The Louisville Trust Company.

The judgment of the District Court, holding Banco to be the real owner of the Bank stock, was affirmed.

Let us see what was the respondents' position after the rendition of this judgment.

The Receiver of the BancoKentucky Company paid something over $90,000 on this judgment.

In his present Bill, the petitioner says, Paragraph VII:[1]

> "* * * the defendants [respondents] are the real, true and beneficial shareholders of the National Bank of Kentucky and have promised to pay said assessment and are estopped to deny said assessment liability, and are the owners of shares of stock of the National Bank of Kentucky and each of the defendants appearing to be stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company is liable for the payment of the assessment levied by the Comptroller of the Currency hereinbefore referred to, individually, ratably and proportionately to the extent that the number of shares of stock held by him bears to the total number of shares issued and outstanding."

Having brought one suit and secured his judgment against the BancoKentucky Company, upon the ground that it was the "real, true and beneficial owner" of the identical stock here involved and having bound the stockholders of that corporation (respondents here) by that judgment, is it conceivable that he can now assert the same claim against the respondents and have this Court adjudge that they are the real, true and beneficial owners, simply because the interest of the petitioner would be benefitted thereby?

Petitioner seeks to avoid the effect of the Laurent Case by now claiming (Brief, p. 3) that in that case Banco was sued as the record owner of Bank stock and not as the real owner. The analysis of the Laurent Case which has here been made shows that the petitioner's present position is untenable. At no time in that case, from start to finish, was Banco claimed to be the record owner of Bank stock. The record in the instant case shows also that petitioner's claim is unfounded. Neither Banco nor any of the respondents (except Bank directors) were registered as shareholders of the Bank when it closed, as was expressly affirmed by petitioner in his request for admission by respondents that all of the outstanding shares (except 180 shares registered in the names of eighteen directors) were registered "in the names of Henry Vogt, Thomas J. Minary, Stuart E. Duncan, Allen P. Dodd, Charles A. Bohmer and Ben J. Metcalfe, as trustees under trust agreement dated April 22, 1927" (R. II, p. 76, Request 6; also Defendants' Exhibit 6).

This Court said in Hart Steel Co. v. Railroad Supply Co.:[1]

> "This doctrine of res judicata is not a mere matter of practice or procedure inherited from a more technical time than ours. It is a rule of fundamental and substantial justice, 'of public policy and of private peace,' which should be cordially regarded and enforced by the courts to > the end that rights once established by the final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction shall be recognized by those who are bound by it in every way, wherever the judgment is entitled to respect."

In Marin v. Augedahl,[1] the principle, to which we have addressed ourselves, was applied in favor of a Receiver. While it is true that the "full faith and credit" clause was involved, there is no difference in principle. Minnesota had a law placing a so-called double liability upon stockholders of a certain class of Minnesota corporations and excepting certain other classes. A money judgment was obtained against a corporation of that State and the execution thereon returned unsatisfied. In a proceeding under the Minnesota statute the Receiver of the insolvent corporation brought an action against the stockholders of that corporation and pro rata assessment was made against the stockholders, whether parties to the suit or not, on the ground that the corporation was not in the "excepted" class, described in the statute. Augedahl was a stockholder but was not a named party to the Receiver's suit and did not appear therein. Later the Receiver sued him in North Dakota, where he lived, and the North Dakota Court held that he was not bound by the Minnesota judgment, but could try over again the question of the liability of the corporation. In error to the North Dakota Court, this Court reversed the judgment, saying in part:

[1]247 U. S. 142, at p. 150.

"In Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, an assessment ordered by a Virginia court having the corporation before it was sustained as against stockholders residing in another State and not personally brought into the suit, the ground of decision being that 'a stockholder is so far an integral part of the corporation that, in the view of the law, he is privy to the proceedings touching the body of which he is a member.'"

Again, at page 148:

"Had the Minnesota court in this instance held that the corporation was in the excepted class and then denied the receiver's petition, is it not certain that the order, if neither vacated nor reversed, would have settled conclusively the non-existence of the asserted liability? And if in a subsequent suit the receiver or the creditor represented by him had again asserted such a liability on the part of the stockholders, is there any doubt that the latter could have relied safely on the order as a prior adjudication in their favor? The answers seem obvious. Charged with the duty, as the court was, of ascertaining whether there was any liability to be enforced, it was its province to consider and decide every question which was an element in that problem, including the one of whether the corporation was in the excepted class."

The same rule of res judicata has been applied in a number of cases from Kentucky, where the overwhelming majority of purchases of Banco stock were made.

In Ewald's Executor and Trustee v. City of Louisville,[1] the question arose in this way:

Kentucky had a law exempting the stockholders of a Kentucky corporation from payment of taxes on the value of its capital stock owned by them where the corporation itself paid taxes on all of its property in Kentucky. Under an omitted property assessment statute, suit had been brought by the Commonwealth of Kentucky against the Ewald Iron Company, to which its stockholders were not parties, and an assessment ordered, the judgment reciting that the property so assessed was all the property of the corporation theretofore omitted by it from the tax returns for the years in question.

There was also a rule of law prevailing in Kentucky, stated as follows by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in its opinion in the Ewald Case, supra:

> "We have repeatedly held that the omission of property from an assessment in a given year gives rise to only a single cause of action, and where an action has been brought to have property assessed and a judgment has been rendered therein, the judgment is conclusive, and an action cannot afterwards be brought to assess other property omitted from the same assessment which was not embraced in the first action." (Citing cases.)

Later a new suit was brought by the City of Louisville against the principal stockholder of the Ewald Iron Company on the ground that taxes had not been paid by the corporation on all of its property in Kentucky, and that consequently the stockholder was liable for taxes on the shares of the corporation held by him.

The defendant pleaded that, as stockholder of the Company, he was privy to the former judgment against the Company and that the judgment was res judicata under the rule hereinabove quoted.

In sustaining that plea and reversing the judgment against the stockholder, the Court of Appeals of Kentucky said:[1]

> "Under the rule of res judicata, a right, question or fact, distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies; and even if the second suit is for a different cause of action, the right, question or fact, once so determined, must, as between the same parties or their privies, be taken as conclusively established so long as the judgment in the first suit remains unmodified. Stone v. Winn, 165 Ky. 9, 176 S. W. 933; Southern Pacific v. U. S., 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 355. As neither Ewald nor the city was a party to the suits in which the judgments were rendered, the conclusiveness of the judgments depends on whether or not they were privies. Privity may arise by representation. Thus, a judgment against a corporation is conclusive against its stockholders in an action to enforce their statutory liability to creditors; and it is also held that a judgment in a garnishment proceeding against a corporation is conclusive in an action against stockholders to reach assets wrongfully withdrawn, as to the fact of indebtedness to the principal debtor and the amount thereof."

[1] 192 Ky. 279, pp. 282-3.

Again, at page 284:

> "For a like reason it would seem that a judgment against a corporation for omitted taxes is conclusive on the stockholder in a subsequent action to collect taxes on his individual stock, where his liability depends on whether or not the corporation has paid taxes on all of its property."

In view of the well established principles evidenced by the foregoing authorities, we submit that the decision in the Laurent Case is conclusive of the issue here presented and that Banco and not the respondents must be held to have been the real and true owner of the Bank stock, and not the agent or instrumentality of its stockholders for any purposes.

ELECTION.

In addition to our claim that Laurent v. Anderson[1] is res judicata between the parties here and therefore supports the judgment below and requires its affirmance, Laurent v. Anderson has another aspect that reaches the same end.

By bringing the suit of Laurent v. Anderson and claiming that BancoKentucky Company was the true owner of the Bank shares here involved and pursuing that claim to a successful judgment, petitioner has elected as to the ownership of Bank shares and is bound by that election.

Respondents contend that the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky can not maintain this suit to hold them as the "actual owners" of the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, for the very simple reason that he has heretofore secured a judgment from this same Court holding that the BancoKentucky Company was the "actual owner" of these same shares.

He cannot after this in a new suit against a different person now ask this Court to adjudge that some one else is the "actual owner" of these same shares.

Well-settled legal doctrines prevent the Receiver from doing this.

In Davis v. Wakelee[1] this Court said:

> "It may be laid down as a general proposition that, where a party assumes a certain position in a legal proceeding, and succeeds in maintaining that position, he may not thereafter, simply because his interests have changed, assume a contrary position, especially if it be to the prejudice of the party who has acquiesced in the position formerly taken by him." * * *

Neither BancoKentucky Company, nor its stockholders held any certificates of the capital stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, and neither appeared upon the Record Book required to be kept by Section 62, Title 12, Banks and Banking, U. S. C., showing the names of the stockholders.

Presented with this situation, the Receiver conceivably had the right to choose between Banco and its stockholders the one he deemed to be the true owners of the Bank stock and sue such company or persons and claim that such corporation or such persons were the true owners.

In this case either Banco was or the stockholders were.

In the absence of a claim of joint beneficial ownership, both could not be the actual owners.

Of course, the burden was on the Receiver to show who was the true owner and, therefore, since Banco unquestionably owned the T.P.C.'s, his obvious and less difficult course was to pursue Banco as the true owner.

His course was more difficult if he sued the stockholders, for in that case it was necessary for him to prove that Banco was the character of corporation whose corporate entity could be disregarded before liability could be imposed upon the stockholders.

But the Receiver was likewise charged with knowledge that he could not allege and prove that Banco was the true owner of the stock and succeed in maintaining that position and then in a subsequent suit ask the Court to adjudge just the contrary and fasten liability on some one else.

The law forbids such trifling with the Courts.

With this situation before him and with full knowledge, the Receiver elected to file an action against the BancoKentucky Company.

(The proceedings in the Laurent Case, including petitioner's application for leave to file his action, the pleadings, the arguments, the findings of the District Court and the opinions of the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals in that case have been analyzed in detail (supra, pp. 66-70) and that analysis need not be repeated here.)

In 20 Corpus Juris, page 17, the rule we contend for is thus stated:

> "Where a party has grounds to bring separate actions against different persons, and the maintenance of one necessitates the allegation of a fact, or the assumption of a position, inconsistent with, or repugnant to, the maintenance of another, he is bound by his election, and cannot proceed against the other." * * *

Election and estoppel are not the same. Election must not be confused with estoppel. The distinction is clearly stated by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in Barrell v. Newby.[1]

> "Plaintiffs urge that, inasmuch as the answer fails to aver that defendant settled with Todd before they sued defendant, it would be no hardship to require defendant to pay them. It seems to us that plaintiffs are confusing election with equitable estoppel. Election, whether of remedies or of defendants, has no regard to the situation of the defendant, but is founded on a public policy that forbids a plaintiff to trifle with the Courts. Equitable estoppel, on the other hand, grows out of a consideration of the defendant's state. They are distinct defenses, and he who pleads election need not show that it would be inequitable to permit the plaintiff to recover; it is enough if he shows that the plaintiff, having by law the right to take either of two courses, has taken and holds to the one that leads away from him."

In the case of Berry v. Chase (C. C. A., 6th), Judge Lurton stated the law of elections thus.[1]

"* * * But the law is that, when there is an undisclosed principal behind, he may be made liable, although he was never given credit by the seller, provided the circumstances are not such as to make such a result unjust or inequitable. But one who has dealt with an agent cannot upon discovery of an undisclosed principal hold both the agent and the principal liable. He must choose between the two, and an election once made he must abide by it."

In Pottorf v. Dean,[2] the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit had before it a national bank assessment case, wherein a claim of election by the receiver was made and the Court held that such election was binding in a second suit by the receiver involving a portion of the same stock. Suit was filed by the Receiver of the First National Bank of El Paso against Mrs. Dean to recover the assessment. She had transferred 571 shares of stock of the El Paso Bank and 31 shares of stock of the First National Bank of Albuquerque to trustees for the benefit of her minor children. The trust was without reservation. Both banks were solvent at the time of the transfer. At the time of the appointment of the receiver for the

[2] 77 Fed. (2d) 893.

El Paso Bank the 31 shares of the Albuquerque Bank were the only assets in the hands of the trustees for the children other than the shares of the El Paso Bank. It was claimed that the transfer being to minors was unavailable as a defense to Mrs. Dean.

The receiver first notified the trustees of their liability for the stock assessment. The trustees admitted the liability and forwarded the 31 shares of stock of the Albuquerque Bank in discharge of their liability. The receiver, to avoid a possible liability in case of insolvency of the Albuquerque Bank, requested that he might hold it as collateral until sold. The Court said:[1]

> "* * * Having accepted it on that basis, and having sold the stock, the receiver is bound by it. He cannot hold both the trustees and Mrs. Dean. The two propositions are inconsistent. He has made his election to hold the trustees on the ground that there was a bona fide transfer to the trustees and that the trust estate was liable under Section 66, 12 U. S. C. A."

Barrell v. Newby,[2] decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, was a case similar to Berry v. Chase, supra. This was a suit by a New York broker against Newby, who had directed Todd, an Indianapolis broker, to sell 100 shares of Northern Pacific stock "short." Todd, the broker, had actually directed the plaintiff to sell the shares. The New York broker lost a large sum in attempting to protect himself on the transaction. After the transaction was complete, Todd notified plaintiff that he was acting as agent for Newby. This notice was received prior to any action by the plaintiff against either Todd or Newby. After getting such notice, the New York brokers applied on account of their loss $5,734.74 then in their hands belonging to Todd and thereafter continued to hold this money. They also instituted suit against Todd.

[2] 127 Fed. 656.

Newby claimed that the application of this money of Todd's and the suit against Todd was an election and prevented suit against him even though the original claim was unsatisfied.

In deciding that the suit could not be maintained, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit said:[1]

> "Do plaintiffs' acts constitute an election? In two instances plaintiffs procured conditional executions in advance on their solemn declaration to the courts that the broken contract was Todd's—not Todd's and the defendant's, but Todd's. In another instance plaintiffs acted as court and sheriff, and turned Todd's money into their own till. Now they declared with equal solemnity that the same broken contract was defendant's—not defendant's and Todd's but defendant's. We do not mean to assert that the mere bringing of an action against Todd would be inconsistent with their proceeding later against defendant. If the action were begun before they learned of defendant's principalship, certainly they should be permitted to dismiss, and sue defendant. And if they proceeded against Todd by reason of mistake or fraud or the like, they might seek relief from their act, give up the chase they had entered upon, and return to the cross-roads. But here, under no misapprehension of comparative standings, but with full knowledge of the whole truth of the situation, plaintiffs not merely seized Todd's money on the basis that the contract was his, but they insist upon their right to retain it, and to say that the contract is Todd's throughout the time in which they assert that the contract is defendant's. To our minds but one interpretation can be given to this conduct."

The Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Second Circuit, in Johnson & Higgins v. Charles F. Garrigues Company,[1] made and applied the same proposition of law herein contended for. The following excerpt from the opinion covers the situation:

"The appellant Norwegian Nitrogen Products Company, Inc., was clearly established to have been the principal for the purchase of its casks through the Charles F. Garrigues Company, its agent. This relationship was well known to the appellee when, on December 31, 1926, it took a decree [against the agent] reserving the right to proceed against the Norwegian Nitrogen Products Company, Inc., but not electing to hold them alone. It was impossible, in legal contemplation, to hold the agent and the Norwegian Company. The Jungshoved (C. C. A.), 290 F. 753; Barrell v. Newby (C. C. A.), 127 F. 656; Berry v. Chase (C. C. A.), 146 F. 625; Georgi v. Texas Co., 225 N. Y. 410, 122 N. E. 238. Because the appellee sued the agent to judgment after a disclosure of the facts as stated, we must regard that as an election upon its part to hold the agent liable, and to discharge the principal, Norwegian Nitrogen Products Co., Inc."

[1] 30 Fed. (2d) 251, at p. 253.

In the case of Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation v. Bennett,[1] the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit announced the same principle in the following language:

> "It is a general rule of law which is well settled by a long line of decisions that, if a person contracts with an agent of an undisclosed principal, upon discovery of the principal, he has a right of action against the agent and a corresponding right against the principal. He may elect to proceed against either, but he may not proceed against both. If he elects to proceed against the agent after he discovers the identity of the principal, he may not thereafter proceed against the principal. If judgment is taken against either with full knowledge of all the facts, no claim thereafter may be asserted against the other, even though the judgment is unsatisfied. Williston on Contracts, Vol. 1, Sec. 289; Barrell v. Newby, 127 F. 656 (C. C. A. 7); Johnson & Higgins v. Charles F. Garrigues Co., 30 F. (2d) 251 (C. C. A. 2)."

The case just above referred to is cited by the Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Tenth Circuit, in Queenan v. Mays,[2] decided May 28th, 1937. The facts of the Queenan Case were these:

[1] 73 Fed. (2d) 387, at p. 389.
[2] 90 Fed. (2d) 525.

Joseph Mays had deposited with the First National Bank of Bristow, for safe-keeping, Liberty Bonds of the face value of $39,000. Without the knowledge or consent of Mays, the bank pledged these bonds to Creek County, Oklahoma, to secure a county deposit. Later Mays brought a replevin action against the county to recover the bonds. Neither the bank nor its receiver was a party to that action. Mays was defeated, the Court holding that the county was a bona fide purchaser, for value, from the bank. The bank failed. Thereafter, Mays sued the receiver of the bank to recover the value of his bonds that the bank had converted.

On motion of the receiver, the county was made a party, and he sought to recover the Mays' bonds from the county.

The county, shifting its position from that taken by it in the suit Mays had brought against it, defended on the ground that the bonds were Mays.

Responding to this claim, the Court said:[1]

> * * * "Mays sued the county. To defeat Mays the county established the fact that it believed them to be the property of the bank, and accepted them as such.
>
> "The receiver now sues. To defeat this action, the county now takes a position directly contrary to that it successfully took to defeat Mays, to wit, that the bonds were not the property of the bank but the property of Mays. If the argument is sound, then we have this situation: The county is not entitled to keep the bonds if they belong to the bank under the Sneeden Case, nor if they belong to Mays because they were pledged without his knowledge; yet it may keep them by alleging in the state court they took them as the property of the bank and in this Court that they were pledged as the property of Mays. We cannot lend our assent to an argument leading to such an anomalous result. The bonds belonged either to Mays or the bank, and the county is not entitled to retain them in either case. The apposite principle of law is laid down in Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 689, 15 S. Ct. 555, 558, 39 L. Ed. 578, as follows:

" 'It may be laid down as a general proposition that, where a party assumes a certain position in a legal proceeding, and succeeds in maintaining that position, he may not thereafter, simply because his interests have changed, assume a contrary position, especially if it be to the prejudice of the party who has acquiesced in the position formerly taken by him.' "

Myers v. Ross,[1] although not involving an assessment, is quite similar to the situation presented here.

The First National Bank of Jasper, Florida, had failed. Max Myers owed the bank $2,400.00 on a note. Max Myers and his wife were in business together. Myers had deposited $8,000 in the bank, for which a certificate of deposit was issued in favor of Mrs. Myers. After the failure of the bank Mrs. Myers disclaimed any interest in the certificate of deposit and Myers claimed the certificate of deposit and wished to have a proportionate part set off against his note. This the receiver refused to do and sued Myers. In the suit Myers claimed the certificate of deposit and asserted this as a set-off. Judgment went against Myers. Thereafter the bank paid a dividend. Not having satisfied his judgment against Myers, the receiver applied this dividend on his judgment. Whereupon Mrs. Myers sued the receiver and claimed that the receiver could not claim the money was Myers' in view of his refusal to accept her disclaimer in the first instance. In holding that the receiver's election bound him, the Court stated:

> "But the receiver, with full knowledge of all the facts, has made an election with respect to the title to the deposit, and consequently its avails which are the subject-matter of this suit, and has prosecuted that election successfully."

Again:

> "The doctrine of election differs from estoppel in the broader sense of the latter, in that the party invoking a prior election need not show that he will suffer material disadvantage unless his adversary is compelled to abide by his former election, nor is it necessary that the former election shall have been acted upon by the other party to his prejudice. Estoppel depends upon what a party causes his adversary to do. Waiver by election depends upon what the party himself intends to do, and has done. Flynn-Harris-Bullard Co. v. Hampton, 70 Fla. 231, 70 So. 385; 20 C. J. 4, 17.
> "A party cannot, either in the course of litigation, or in dealings, in pais, occupy inconsistent positions. Where he has an election between two or more inconsistent courses, and has knowledge of all the facts, he will be confined to that which he first adopts. Such election, knowingly made, cannot be withdrawn even though it has not been acted upon by another to his prejudice."

In a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Sixth Circuit, in United States v. Brown,[1] decided December 15, 1936, the same rule was applied against the United States Government. This case held the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, acting for the Government, had elected which one of two different persons he would pursue to judgment and having so elected the United States was bound.

The question in that case was presented in this way. The Big Springs Distilling Company ceased business and distributed its assets among its stockholders. At that time the corporation owed the Government taxes for 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921. The Government made an income tax assessment against the individual stockholders based on the full amount distributed to them. The stockholders claimed their assessment for income tax should be reduced by their pro rata liability for the unpaid taxes of the corporation. The Government denied this claim and secured a judgment based on the full amount distributed to the stockholders. Later the Government sought by suit to impress the property received by the stockholders from the corporation with a trust for the amount of the unpaid corporation tax. In affirming the decree against the Government, the Court said:[2]

[2] 86 Fed. (2d) 798, at p. 799.

"* * * The Commissioner exercised a freedom of choice. He chose to press the tax appeal proceedings, and this unequivocally constituted an election. Cf. Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 43, 15 S. Ct. 4, 39 L. Ed. 52. So far as the corporation taxes were concerned, the Government could avail itself of one of two remedies. The same amounts could not at once constitute income to the taxpayers and also be charged with a trust in favor of the Government. The Government could bring the transferee action on the theory of trust, or in the alternative, it could claim that all of the liquidating dividends constituted personal income to the taxpayers. It could not pursue both courses. It deliberately chose that the instant case should slumber in the files, and pressed the personal assessment on the theory that the entire respective amounts of liquidating dividends constituted income. The Government is bound by its election. United States v. Oregon Lumber Co., 260 U. S. 290, 301, 43 S. Ct. 100, 67 L. Ed. 261."

The rule laid down in these cases is clear. It has been constantly applied by the Courts and has a sound basis both in practice and logic.

Petitioner seeks to avoid the effect of the doctrine of election, because he sent a letter to the stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company calling attention to what he was doing in the suit against the BancoKentucky Company. It would seem clear that his letters to the respondents could not have this effect. Having no right to obtain a judgment against both the BancoKentucky Company and the respondents, as true owners of the same Trustees' Participation Certificates, petitioner could not avoid the effect of the doctrine of election by this simple device. He could not seek successive judgments, each holding that the person sued was the true owner of the stock involved. If he could, the wholesome doctrine meant for the protection of the courts could be frittered away.

We submit that the petitioner's election to sue the BancoKentucky Company and obtain a judgment against that company as the true owner of the Trustees' Participating Certificates here involved was not only in accord with the facts, but it was also an election and prevents him from maintaining a suit against the appellees here. The rule we ask to be applied, as stated by the Seventh Circuit in Barrell v. Newby, supra— and has been many times upheld.

> * * * "is founded on a public policy that forbids the plaintiff to trifle with the courts"

THE DECISION IN ATHERTON v. ANDERSON IS CONCLUSIVE AGAINST ANY CLAIM THAT MAY NOW BE MADE THAT THE BANK WAS INSOLVENT OR THAT FAILURE WAS IMPENDING WHEN BANCO WAS ORGANIZED AND ALSO AGAINST ANY CLAIM THAT BANCO WAS THE CHARACTER OF CORPORATION THE ENTITY OF WHICH MAY BE DISREGARDED, AS TO ALL RESPONDENTS WHO WERE PARTIES TO THAT ACTION.

A number of the respondents here were directors of the National Bank of Kentucky. Each was the owner of ten shares of stock of the Bank. The assessment upon their ten shares each is not involved in this case. In addition, however, to the ownership of ten shares of Bank stock, practically all of them transferred their Trustee Participation Certificates to the BancoKentucky Company and, in addition, they, the directors (as a whole), purchased approximately $1,180,000 of Banco stock for cash.[1]

After the Bank closed, Paul C. Keyes, as Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, sued the directors of the Bank, seeking recovery against them for two items (among others):

I. On account of petitioner's claim that they had knowingly participated in declaring illegal dividends of $2,240,000. This amount included annual quarterly dividends, beginning July 1, 1927, and ending October 1, 1930, the last dividend being over a year after respondents had sold their Trustees' Participation Certificates to BancoKentucky Company.

[1]Transcript of Record, Vol. III, Finding 28, p. 256.

II. That they were liable for participating in the making of large loans, collateraled "in whole or in part" by BancoKentucky Company stock, contrary to the statute. This claim was based on the same idea that is involved here, that Bank stock being involved, the corporate entity could be looked through for the purpose of ascertaining whether Bank stock formed "in whole or in part" collateral on the loan.

The Court decided that all of the dividends were properly declared, thus leaving the Bank, after their payment, with something more than $4,000,000 capital and $2,000,000 surplus, as of each dividend period.

As to the Banco loans, the Master decided and the Circuit Court of Appeals decided that the challenged loans were all properly made and held that Banco was not the character of corporation whose corporate entity could be disregarded.

As to the directors, who are respondents here, these decisions are pleaded[1] as res judicata of the fact (1) that the Bank was solvent at the time Banco was organized and at least until October 1, 1930, more than a year thereafter, and (2) that the corporate veil of Banco can not be lifted in order to see that Banco owned Bank stock.

[1]Transcript of Record, Vol. I, pp. 122 and 138.

We will discuss these two findings in the order named.

I

Under the Banking Act dividends must be paid out of undivided profits only.

Revised Statutes, Section 5204, 12 U. S. C. §56, provides as follows:

> "No association, or any member thereof, shall during the time it shall continue its banking operations, withdraw, or permit to be withdrawn, either in the form of dividends or otherwise, any portion of its capital. If losses have at any time been sustained by any such association, equal to or exceeding its undivided profits then on hand, no dividend shall be made; and no dividend shall ever be made by any association, while it continues its banking operations, to an amount greater than its net profits then on hand, deducting its losses and bad debts." * * *

In addition to deducting debts that are actually bad, there must also be deducted what are known as statutory bad debts. These statutory bad debts are defined as follows (R. S., Sec. 5204, 12 U. S. C. §56):

> * * * "All debts due to any association, on which interest is past due and unpaid for a period of six months, unless the same are well secured, and in process of collection, shall be considered bad debts within the meaning of this section." * * *

It will be seen from the definition of statutory bad debts that these debts may in fact not be bad at all, but are included because they come within the statutory definition.

The Receiver's claim against the directors for the recovery of illegal dividends required the answer to two questions:

(1) the primary and basic one was whether the capital and surplus of the Bank was impaired by the declared dividend; and (2) did the directors know of such impairment, if it existed?

If after a full examination of the condition of the Bank, it was found that, after allowance for all debts, liabilities, losses sustained, bad debts, statutory bad debts, plus the amount of the dividend declared, the capital and fixed surplus of the Bank was still whole, the claim of the Receiver automatically failed for a fortiori, the directors could have no knowledge of a non-existent fact.

The situation here is identical in that the Receiver now seems to base his whole case upon the assumption that there was impending insolvency at the time of the formation of Banco.

If the Bank were not facing impending insolvency, it is hard to see the relevancy of any of the arguments which the Receiver here makes. Certainly the greater part of his brief is of no moment whatever in determining the correctness of the decisions below.

The Bank had a capital of $4,000,000 and a fixed surplus of $2,000,000 throughout the period involved.

In the case of Keyes v. Akers (later known as Atherton v. Anderson) the Receiver offered a great deal of testimony in support of his claim. The evidence included all the National Bank Examiners' reports covering the period and all the other Bank data he thought pertinent.

He introduced many witnesses, including an expert accountant connected with Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, of Chicago, and the two Chief National Bank Examiners for this District during the period involved, John S. Wood and Robert Neill. He also introduced Clarence M. Stewart, of the Federal Reserve Bank, through whom there was filed in evidence a great deal of correspondence relative to the possible denationalization of the Bank of Kentucky and referred to in petitioner's brief.

Of course, these witnesses were cross-examined fully by defendants.

The defendants also introduced their own testimony.

The case was then fully briefed before the Master.

The Master held that the Bank's capital and fixed surplus were not invaded by the declaration of any dividend.[1]

Exceptions were filed to this report by the petitioner and the question was elaborately briefed and argued with the result that the Master's ruling was sustained by the District Court, the Opinion reading as follows:[2]

[1]Defendants' Exhibit No. 1, Rec. Atherton v. Anderson, Vol. I, pages 443 etc.

"The Master disallowed this claim in its entirety, finding that the evidence failed to show any facts indicating any statutory violation by any of the directors or any negligence on their part in connection with these dividends. The Master discussed and analyzed, at great length and in much detail, numerous debts which the plaintiff claims should have been charged off as statutory bad debts, and after painstaking and thorough consideration of such debts and of the other relevant facts and circumstances the Master found that the evidence did not sustain this claim of the plaintiff. To recite or review these details would unduly prolong this opinion and would serve no useful purpose. It is sufficient to say that the findings of the Master are convincingly supported by the record. It is entirely clear, and I find, that the witnesses on whom the plaintiff relied in this connection had no personal knowledge of the facts concerning which they assumed to testify. There is no competent evidence sufficient to sustain the burden resting on the plaintiff of proving that any of these dividends were paid out of capital of the bank or were not paid out of its net profits after deducting therefrom its losses and bad debts, including all debts on which interest was past due and unpaid for a period of six months and which were not well secured and all debts in process of collection."

The effect of this opinion was carried into the judgment. There was no appeal from this finding by the Receiver. It was not before the Court of Appeals, and time for an appeal has long since expired.

This decision in the suit between petitioner and respondents, who were also directors of the National Bank of Kentucky, is certainly conclusive of the fact that the Bank was solvent in September, 1929, and through October 1, 1930, when the last dividend was paid.

If the National Bank of Kentucky on October 1, 1929, contemporaneously with the transfer of the Trustees' Participation Certificates, and at every quarter thereafter, including October 1, 1930, had an intact capital of $4,000,000 and an intact surplus of $2,000,000 and was able in addition to pay a dividend of $160,000 after deduction of all bad debts and statutory bad debts, it seems perfectly clear that there was no impending insolvency of the Bank as of the time of the transfers.

II.

It was claimed by the Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky in Atherton v. Anderson that the defendant directors were liable for loans made by the Bank on the security, in whole or in part, of Banco stock, because of the fact that Banco owned Trustees' Participation Certificates, which were claimed to represent Bank stock.

The defendants there, who are also respondents here, took the position that the shares of stock of the corporation did not represent an interest in its assets, that the corporate entity made it impossible to attribute an interest in the corporation's property to its members, and for that reason the corporate personality could not be ignored.

The Master held that the normal rule prevailed and that Banco was a bona fide corporation and that its stock was not Bank stock and the mere fact that Banco owned Bank stock did not change the general rule.

The District Court reversed this finding, but the Circuit Court of Appeals, 86 Fed. (2d) 518, 536, held as follows:

> * * * "It (Banco) was organized for clearly defined purposes, too optimistically conceived, perhaps, but neither illegitimate nor unlawful. It had its own capital with cash resources at one period almost twice the entire capital and surplus of the bank. While in the very beginning the bank stock may, as found by the court, have been its principal asset, and may have continued thereafter to be its most valuable single asset, it had other assets of very substantial value, and it was warrantable inference at the time of its organization and for a substantial period thereafter that it could well meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank. At any rate there is nothing in the record to point to its creation for the purpose of escaping such assessment. Indeed when the assessment was finally made by the Comptroller it was enforced against Banco and not against the stockholders. See Laurent v. Anderson, supra. Its separate corporate existence was recognized by the very receiver on whose behalf we are now asked to ignore it."

Again (p. 536):

> "The circumstances under which one corporation will be held to be but the alter ego of another were recently fully considered by us in Shepherd, Trustee, v. Banking & Trust Co., 79 Fed. (2d) 767, 769. We there approved the doctrine of Pittsburgh & Buffalo Co. v. Duncan, 232 Fed. 584, 587 (C. C. A. 6), to the effect that: 'The mere fact that the stockholders in two or more corporations are the same, or that one corporation exercises a control over the other through ownership of its stock, or through identity of its stockholders, does not make either the agent of the other, nor does it merge them into one * * * where each corporation is separately organized under a distinct charter' and likewise gave approval to the exception to this general rule announced in New York Trust Co. v. Carpenter, 250 Fed. 668, 672 (C. C. A. 6), and approved in Hooper-Mankin Co. v. Mathew Addy Co., 4 Fed. (2d) 187, 189 (C. C. A. 6), where it was said:

"'From an examination of many decisions, we venture to say that no corporation acting within its powers has been held liable for the debts of another corporation legally organized, because it controls such corporation by reason of ownership of its stock, or otherwise, except by reason of contract or on grounds of agency, or of estoppel, or because the controlled corporation has been used in such a way that the maintenance of its character as a separate and distinct entity would work injustice.'

"The principle has been affirmatively stated in the Ninth Circuit (Martin v. Development Co. of America, 240 Fed. 42) thus: 'A holding corporation has a separate existence and is to be treated as a separate entity, unless facts are averred which show that such separate corporate existence is a mere sham, or has been used as an instrument for concealing the truth, or where the organization and control are shown to be such that it is but an instrumentality of another corporation.'

"The BancoKentucky Company was certainly not a sham, for nearly ten million dollars of actual cash paid for its stock attest its reality, and there is nothing in the record to point to it as an instrumentality of the bank. Nor was it organized for a fraudulent purpose or to conceal secret or sinister enterprises conducted for the benefit of the bank. The master absolved the appellants of all suspicion of bad faith and the court approved his finding in the last of three carefully reasoned opinions (11 Fed. Supp. 9, 14). Certainly we must accept this as the deliberate judgment of the court rather than as a euphemism, easing the blow to the sensibilities as it fell heavily upon the purse."

Following this decision and after the case had reached this Court upon a different point, judgment was rendered on the question here involved on December 28, 1938, as follows:

"It is adjudged that none of the non-officer directors of the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville are liable to the plaintiff under Section 93 of Chapter 2 of the title, Banks and Banking of the United States Code, or on common law principles of negligence for the losses sustained by the Bank on account of moneys supplied on loans collateraled, in whole or in part, by stock of the BancoKentucky Company and set out in Paragraph 45 of the original decree herein."

This Court, in Southern Pacific Railroad v. United States,[1] and other cases, has adhered to the following principle:

> "The general principle announced in numerous cases is that a right, question or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, as a ground of recovery, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies; and even if the second suit is for a different cause of action, the right, question or fact once so determined must, as between the same parties or their privies, be taken as conclusively established, so long as the judgment in the first suit remains unmodified. This general rule is demanded by the very object for which civil courts have been established, which is to secure the peace and repose of society by the settlement of matters capable of judicial determination. Its enforcement is essential to the maintenance of social order; for, the aid of judicial tribunals would not be invoked for the vindication of rights of person and property, if, as between parties and their privies, conclusiveness did not attend the judgments of such tribunals in respect of all matters properly put in issue and actually determined by them."

The same rule prevails in Kentucky. In the case of Brooks v. Lower Elkhorn Coal Corporation,[2] the following rule was applied by the Court of Appeals:

[1] 168 U. S. 1, at pp. 48-9.

(This ruling has been a number of times followed by the Supreme Court and in an opinion written by Justice Roberts was re-stated in Tait v. Western Maryland Railway Co., 289 U. S. 620, at p. 623.)

[2] 219 Ky. 74, at pp. 77-8.

* * * "In Moore v. Gas & Electric Shop, 216 Ky. 530, 287 S. W. 979, we laid down the rule that when a right or fact has been judicially tried and determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, the judgment of the court so long as it remains unreversed is conclusive upon the parties and those in privity with them in law or estate, and that where some controlling fact or question material to the determination of an action has been determined in a former suit and the same fact or question is again at issue between the same parties, its adjudication in the first will, if properly presented, be conclusive of the same question in the latter suit without regard to whether the cause of action is the same or not, or whether the second suit involves the same or a different subject-matter."

Certainly, as to those of the respondents, who were Bank directors and parties to the suit in Atherton v. Anderson,[1] any claim that the Bank was insolvent, or approaching insolvency, as of the time of the formation of Banco, or that the corporate entity should be ignored, is res judicata here.

PETITIONER'S BRIEF.

The larger portion of the foregoing brief was written before receipt of petitioner's brief, copy of which we received on Saturday, January 16, 1943.

In the reflected light of the contentions made by the Receiver in the courts below, his brief in this Court, shows him in a new role. In the last analysis, his present position is that stockholders of a national bank who, prior to the repeal of Section 64, Title 12, U. S. C., transferred their bank shares to a bank stock holding corporation in exchange for shares of that corporation, are not relieved from the double liability imposed by that section of the Bank Act, so long as they retained the shares of the corporation to which their bank shares were transferred, and that Banco was a corporation of that type.

It is true that the Receiver still flies the tattered remnants of the flags under which he sometimes fought in the District Court and in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

He still features the reports of the bank examiners who examined the National Bank of Kentucky repeatedly from April 23, 1927, to November, 1930, when the Bank closed, insisting that these reports showed that the Bank was in an "unhealthy" or "precarious" condition during that whole period (Brief, pp. 7-35, inclusive). By far the larger portion of his brief is devoted to this subject. And he emphasizes the importance of this element of the case in his statement of the issue (Brief, p. 5) as involving only transfers made by stockholders "of an insolvent national bank." But, as we have heretofore shown, his bill of complaint contains no allegation that the stockholders of the Bank, when they transferred their Participation Certificates to the BancoKentucky Company, had any knowledge of a condition in the Bank that would suggest the idea that a failure of the Bank to meet its obligations was impending. It is true that in his brief (p. 24) he makes an oblique reference to knowledge on the part of the directors of the Bank, saying that it was their duty to know the "precarious" condition of the Bank, even if they did not know it actually, and, in the next following paragraph, he lumps the officers, directors and stockholders together in making the statement that they had agreed to organize a holding company, "knowing the precarious condition" of the Bank. Again (p. 39), in referring to the provision in the articles of Banco and on its stock certificates that its stock was "fully paid and non-assessable," he asks the following rhetorical question: "What did they intend by this except to escape the assessment liability?" The provision that stock is "fully paid and non-assessable" could not possibly be considered as relating to a double liability assessment. In common practice, it means only that it is not subject to further calls for payment by the issuing company.

We have also shown that petitioner has heretofore, in this case, disclaimed any assertion that the Bank was insolvent, in any sense of the word, or that these respondents knew it. Even in his present brief, petitioner says (p. 60):

"Liability does not depend upon pending insolvency."

If pending insolvency, or the condition of the Bank, is not a material element of liability, must we not assume that the large part of the brief devoted to this subject was merely for the purpose of beclouding the true issue and to create an unfavorable impression in the mind of the Court as to the position of the respondents? In any event, since it is again affirmed that impending insolvency is not an issue in the case, we forbear from further lengthening this brief with an examination of petitioner's factual statements in regard to the Bank's condition, and it must be assumed that the findings of both courts below as to this issue (supra, p. 56) were correct and will not be disturbed.

The Receiver still clings, somewhat precariously, to the charge that respondents must be considered as the real owners of the Bank stock, either because Banco was organized merely as an agency or instrumentality of its stockholders, or because of faint intimations of some clandestine purpose in its organization, or for no better reason than that Banco continued to hold T.P.C.'s representing Bank stock among its assets. These claims presented merely factual issues and petitioner was unable to sustain any of them by proof either in the District Court or in the Circuit Court of Appeals. In the earlier part of this brief we have given at some length a complete history of the organization of Banco as shown by the record in this case. We have also referred to the cases upon which petitioner relies in his brief. Those discussions need not be repeated here.

The question of the real ownership of the Bank shares by Banco, involving as it does every ground which might be urged in favor of finding such ownership elsewhere, has been before the Circuit Court of Appeals on three separate occasions (Laurent v. Anderson, 70 Fed. (2d) 819; Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 518, and Anderson v. Abbott, 127 Fed. (2d) 696). On each and every one of those occasions it has been held that Banco, and not its stockholders, was the real owner of the Bank shares, and every reason which could be presented to induce a contrary finding has been rejected. In view of this situation, we deem further discussion of the question at this time to be unnecessary.

It is obvious that this conception of the responsibility of transferrers of Bank shares has no support in the Bank Act itself. That Act, Section 64, imposes a double liability upon transferrers of bank shares only in two instances, (1) where the transfer was made within sixty days next before the failure of the bank, or (2) where the transfer was made "with knowledge of such impending failure," that is, the failure of the bank "to meet its obligations."

Petitioner's brief complains of the finding of the District Court that Banco was an "operating" company and not merely a "holding" company. As we understand petitioner's new theory, this apparently makes no difference. At least, we are given no intimation of what differences must exist between those corporations that fall within or without the class the stockholders of which petitioner now claims should be subject to such liability.

The District Judge had the benefit of much evidence and testimony beyond that mentioned in petitioner's brief. The Court had a right to consider what was intended to be done, as well as what was done. The Court realized that a connection with varied banking interests was one of the preliminary essentials to assure Banco a certain and wide source for the initiation of business activities. Such had always been a part of the plan. The Court also knew that, following close on the heels of its organization in July, 1929, came the stock market crash in October of that year, and that this event was a particularly hard blow to the business possibilities of the type which Banco hoped and expected to engage in. And the Court also knew that, in spite of all these difficulties, Banco proceeded to acquire a one-half interest in one of the largest investment houses in the South. The respective securities had actually been exchanged and everything had been done to complete the transaction, except to determine the value of the Caldwell assets. The Court was entitled to give consideration to the testimony of respondents, which was unchallenged, to the effect that they believed Banco was to perform all the functions permitted by its charter and that they expected to have an entirely different form of investment from the mere ownership of bank shares. The Court was not required to gauge the character of Banco merely by a backward look at what had happened in the few months of its existence. There is no occasion for disturbing this finding, supported as it is by two separate decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the Atherton Case and in the instant case. That subject, at least, is entitled to judicial repose.

Petitioner's criticism of the decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals is difficult to understand. Apparently, the chief complaint is that the Court found Banco to be the "true owner" of the Bank shares and that respondents were not such true owners. At least, petitioner now says (p. 60) that liability—

> "arises by virtue of the statute and depends on ownership," and argues that respondents had the same property after the transfer as before. This statement, of course, is wide of the mark. Before the transfer they owned a proportionate interest in the Bank. After the transfer they owned a proportionate interest in Banco. After the transfer, as petitioner himself has pointed out (supra, p. 35), Banco received dividends on its interest in the Bank stock and could dispose of them as it wished; Banco, and not its stockholders, retained and exercised its right to vote the Bank shares; and to select directors of the Bank. Banco, and not its stockholders, retained and exercised its right to secure title to the stock in the Bank or to dispose thereof. Banco, and not its stockholders, retained every privilege given by the Bank Act to stockholders. Petitioner still insists that respondents hoped and expected to remain in the banking business—although every item of testimony in the case is to the contrary.

It ill becomes petitioner now to criticize the Circuit Court of Appeals for holding that Banco, and not its stockholders, was the real, true and beneficial owner of the Bank stock, because in the Laurent Case this same Receiver, and the same counsel, had labored to induce the Court to adopt that very principle. When it suited the Receiver to call Banco the true owner, he did not hesitate to ask the Court to support him in that position. Later, in the Atherton Case, the Court, on another issue, very properly took the same position. Now that it suits the petitioner to take a contrary position, he does not hesitate to criticize the Court for saying again what it had previously said at his insistence. We believe the petitioner has shown no ground upon which the decision of the District Court or the Circuit Court of Appeals should be disturbed.

The assessment here involved gives rise only to "an unsecured and unpreferred claim," entitled to no peculiar dignity or sanctity. The statute giving rise to this assessment has long since been repealed. The District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals have carefully examined all the facts and have given meticulous attention to every argument made by petitioner in support of his claim. They have held, as a fact, that Banco was the true owner of the Bank stock against which the assessment was levied. Both Courts have examined and distinguished cases claimed to be similar and have rejected their claimed application to this case.

It is respectfully submitted that no reason is here shown for disturbing these findings and opinions and that the decision below should be affirmed.

APPENDIX.

United States Code, Title 12.

§63. Individual liability of shareholders.—The shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares; except that shareholders of any banking association now existing under State laws, having not less than $5,000,000 of capital actually paid in, and a surplus of 20 per centum on hand, both to be determined by the Comptroller of the Currency, shall be liable only to the amount invested in their shares; and such surplus of 20 per centum shall be kept undiminished, and be in addition to the surplus provided for in this title; and if at any time there is a deficiency in such surplus of 20 per centum, such association shall not pay any dividends to its shareholders until the deficiency is made good; and in case of such deficiency, the Comptroller of the Currency may compel the association to close its business and wind up its affairs under the provisions of chapter four of this title. (R. S., §5151.)

§64. Transfer of shares.—The stockholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, each to the amount of his stock therein, at the par value thereof in addition to the amount invested in such stock. The stockholders in any national banking association who shall have transferred their shares or registered the transfer thereof within sixty days next before the date of the failure of such association to meet its obligations, or with knowledge of such impending failure, shall be liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee fails to meet such liability; but this provision shall not be construed to affect in any way any recourse which such shareholders might otherwise have against those in whose names such shares are registered at the time of such failure. (Dec. 23, 1913, c. 6, §23, 38 Stat. 273.)

§64a. Liability of shareholders after June 16, 1933; termination.—The additional liability imposed upon shareholders in national banking associations by the provisions of section 5151 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, and section 23 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended [§§63, 64, this title], shall not apply with respect to shares in any such association issued after the date of enactment of this Act. Such additional liability shall cease on July 1, 1937, with respect to all shares issued by any association which shall be transacting the business of banking on July 1, 1937: Provided, That not less than six months prior to such date, such association shall have caused notice of such prospective termination of liability to be published in a newspaper published in the city, town, or county in which such association is located, and if no newspaper is published in such city, town, or county, then in a newspaper of general circulation therein. If the association fail to give such notice as and when above provided, a termination of such additional liability may thereafter be accomplished as of the date six months [sic] subsequent to publication, in the manner above provided. (June 16, 1933, c. 89, §22, 48 Stat. 189; Aug. 23, 1935, c. 614, Tit. III, §304, 49 Stat. 708.)

A. M. ANDERSON, RECEIVER OF THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY, OF LOUISVILLE, - Petitioner,

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, ADMINISTRATRIX, ET AL., - - - - - Respondents.

SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF FOR RESPONDENTS ON THE REARGUMENT OF THE CASE.

The ultimate question in this case is whether or not the ends of justice require that the corporate personality of the BancoKentucky Company be ignored in order that petitioner, as Receiver of the National Bank of Kentucky, may collect from the shareholders of the Company the unsatisfied balance of a judgment heretofore recovered by him against the Company itself as the real owner of the same bank shares involved in the case at bar.

The answer to that question is indicated in a group of cases decided subsequent to 1931, in which the courts were called upon to clear away the wreckage left by the financial storm of 1929-1935. They were called upon to allocate the responsibility for losses resulting from the collapse of financial structures of a novel kind, of which no exact examples were to be found in the earlier cases, and to apply the established principles of law and equity to the new situations presented in these cases.

In these cases there was developed the principle that the ends of justice may permit the disregard of ordinary legal relationships in cases where the stockholders of a failing institution have attempted to use the corporate device to evade threatened liability, and where the corporation so used has no other substantial assets than the bank shares transferred to it and no other function than to act as a receptacle for those shares. In such cases the corporate personality of corporations of this kind has sometimes been disregarded. In the instant case both courts below found that none of the elements justifying such disregard existed in the case of the BancoKentucky Company.

Petitioner's "Reply Brief" was filed in the Clerk's office on February 8, 1943, the day on which the case was first argued, and consequently counsel for respondents had had no opportunity to consider the contents of that brief or to make reply thereto before the case was first submitted.

Petitioner, in his reply brief, has cited and relied upon forty-three cases, in addition to the twenty-five cases cited in his original brief, so that we now have sixty-eight citations in support of petitioner's argument.

None of these cases supports petitioner's right to recover under the facts disclosed in this case and the great majority of them are relied upon to support contentions whose validity respondents have never challenged.

We have never denied that the real owner of bank shares, though not so registered, was liable for an assessment against those shares.*

We have never denied that the record holder of bank shares, though not the real owner, was liable for an assessment against those shares.†

We have never denied that both the real owner and the record holder of bank shares, when not the same person, might be sued, jointly or successively, to recover such an assessment.‡

We have never denied that a corporation which is subject to the regulatory provisions of the Sherman Act or of the Hepburn Act can not evade its provisions by transferring a part of its property or business to a corporation of which it is the sole stockholder.*

We have never denied that the stockholders of a corporation to which they have transferred bank shares in exchange for the shares of that corporation, may be liable to assessment as the real owners of those bank shares, in cases where the bank shares are the only asset, or substantially the only asset, of the holding corporation and the corporation has no other function than to act as a depositary for those shares and there is evidence of an attempt to evade liability.†

With the exception of fourteen cases on the subject of res judicata or election, the facts in the cases cited by petitioner bring those cases within one or the other of the doctrines stated above.

It is true petitioner says (Brief, page 49; Reply Brief, page 18) that in Deming v. Schram, supra, "$7,500,000 of really new money went into that bank stock holding company." But this statement is inaccurate. The $7,500,000 referred to did not go into "that bank stock holding company." The Deming Case involved the liability of the stockholders of the Guardian Detroit Group, Inc., a Michigan corporation (later called the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc.), for a comptroller's assessment against the shares of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, all of whose shares were held by the Guardian Detroit Group. There had been in Detroit another and older bank stock holding company, the Union Commerce Corporation, a Delaware corporation which, prior to the organization of the Guardian Detroit Group, had sold to its stockholders, out of an increase in its capital, 25,000 shares at $300 per share, or $7,500,000, with which it purchased other bank shares. Subsequently, the Guardian Detroit Group was incorporated (May 9, 1929) and before the year was out it had absorbed the Union Commerce Corporation by exchanging its shares for all the stock holdings of the Union Commerce Corporation. That corporation was then dissolved, after distributing to its stockholders cash amounting to five cents per share and 733,695 shares of the Guardian Union Group.

It thus appears that "$7,500,000 of really new money" did not go into the holding company whose stockholders were held liable in the Deming Case.

The question of "real ownership" has never been determined merely by the fact that the corporation has no assets other than bank stocks or by the fact that the corporation at some later date became insolvent. Such facts where they exist may be considered as evidence of an initial purpose to evade liability, but they are never conclusive of such purpose. Burrows v. Emery, 285 Mich. 86, 280 N. W. 120; Pearson v. All Borg, 23 F. Supp. 837; Nettles v. Childs, 100 Fed. (2d) 952.

In the last analysis, petitioner's claim is that the stockholders of the BancoKentucky Company, and not BancoKentucky Company itself, were the real owners of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky because the BancoKentucky Company was organized for the purpose of evading the statutory liability and had no substantial assets except bank stocks and that consequently it must be regarded as a mere agency or instrumentality of the real owners of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky.

This contention is contradicted by both courts which heard and decided, in favor of petitioner, the suit brought by him to recover from the BancoKentucky Company the amount of the Comptroller's assessment involved in the case at bar. In Keyes v. American Life and Accident Insurance Co., 1 F. Supp. 512, 515, Judge Cochran of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky found:

> "That the BancoKentucky Company, and the defendant, Joseph S. Laurent, its Receiver, was the actual and real owner of 37,721.624 shares of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, having a par value of $100 per share on November 17, 1930."

On appeal from Judge Cochran's decision, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, in affirming the judgment, said:

"The assessment of double liability was made against Banco upon the theory that, being the holder of Trustee's Participation Certificates issued under a trust agreement dated April 22, 1927, it was the real and beneficial owner of national bank stock." * * * "The evidence establishes that Banco was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the national bank stock involved." (Laurent v. Anderson, 70 F. (2d) 819, 820, 824.)

The Laurent Case has been cited by the courts as holding that the "real owner" of bank shares, though not so registered, is liable for a Comptroller's assessment, in eight of petitioner's "real owner" cases, to-wit: Deming v. Schram, 7 F. Supp. 271; Hansen v. Agnew, 195 Wash. 354, 80 Pac. (2d) 845; Bacon v. Barker, 110 Vt. 280, 6 Atl. (2d) 9; Nettles v. Sottile, 184 So. Car. 1, 191 S. E. 796; Nettles v. Rhett, 94 Fed. (2d) 42; Continental National Bank and Trust Co. v. O'Neil, 82 F. (2d) 650; BancoKentucky's Receiver v. Louisville Trust Co.'s Receiver, 263 Ky. 185, 92 S. W. (2d) 19, and Pearson v. All Borg, 23 F. Supp. 857. With two exceptions, these were cases in which the stockholders of a holding company for one or more of the reasons stated above, were held liable for an assessment on the ground that they were the real owners of the bank stock held by the company. The exceptions were Continental National Bank and Trust Co. v. O'Neil, supra, and Bacon v. Barker, supra, in both of which the remainderman in a trust estate was held liable for an assessment on bank stock held by the trustee. In the Continental National Bank Case, the court said expressly that in the Laurent Case the BancoKentucky Company was held liable "because it was the real owner" of the bank stock upon which the assessment had been levied.

We submit that the instant case is clearly distinguished from all of petitioner's authorities by a controlling difference in the facts. That the BancoKentucky Company was not organized as a device for escaping liability on bank stock or for the exclusive or primary purpose of holding bank stock is amply shown by the record.

Petitioner's contention is also contradicted by both courts below in the instant case. The District Court made the following findings (R., Vol. I, pp. 255, 266, 267):

> "19. Banco was established for its avowed purposes, with no thought on the part of any of its organizers of avoiding double liability on their Banco shares."
>
> "61. Banco was organized in good faith."
>
> "62. Banco was certainly not a sham."
>
> "63. Banco was not organized for a fraudulent purpose or to conceal secret or sinister enterprises conducted for the benefit of the Bank."
>
> "64. Banco was not a mere holding company."
>
> "65. Banco was formed for the purposes set out in the letter of July 19, 1929, and for no other purpose."
>
> "66. Banco was not formed as a medium or agency through which to avoid double liability on the stock of the bank."

The District Court also made the following conclusions of law:

> "9. Banco was the true, legal and beneficial owner of the stock of the bank."
>
> "10. The transfers of the T. P. C.'s to Banco were out and out transfers, and Banco, therefore, acquired full legal title thereto."
>
> "11. The stockholders of Banco were not stockholders of the bank within the meaning of the statute."

The Circuit Court of Appeals, in the instant case (127 Fed. (2d) 696, 697), made the following statement:

> "The merger and unification of control and management of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company through the issuance of trustees' participation certificates, the terms and conditions upon which the certificates were issued, the organization of BancoKentucky Company and the underlying purposes thereof, and the acquisition by Banco of the trustees' participation certificates have been described and discussed, not only in the published opinion of the court below (32 F. Supp. 328) and in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, but also in Anderson v. Akers, D. C. Ky., 7 F. Supp. 924, 947, et seq.; and on appeal therefrom, in Atherton v. Anderson, 6 Cir., 86 F. 2d 518, 534, et seq."

After a review of the facts shown by the record, the Court stated its conclusion as follows (idem. p. 701):

"From our study of the record in this case, we are in accord with the conclusions of the district court that the BancoKentucky Company was not a mere holding company, a sham corporation, or an empty shell; but was a very real and live corporate entity, actively acquiring capital assets; that the corporation was organized for the purposes set out in its prospectus of July 19, 1929, and for no other; that it was conceived in no planned avoidance of double liability assessment upon stock of the National Bank of Kentucky; that the BancoKentucky Company was the true, legal and beneficial owner of the national bank stock; and that its stockholders were not stockholders of the national bank within the meaning of the federal assessment statutes. 38 Stat. 273, 12 U. S. C. A. 64."

These concurrent findings of fact by the courts below will, we assume, be accepted by this Court, leaving for consideration only the question of law whether or not, in the circumstances thus shown, the petitioner has made out a case of liability on the part of respondents. But since petitioner has challenged the validity of those findings (Petition for Rehearing, R. 3, pp. 327-353), we offer at this point a statement of certain salient facts shown by the record, upon which those findings were based.

BANCO'S ORIGIN AND HISTORY.

The persons who were directors of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company were the organizers of BancoKentucky Company. The purposes which they had in view and the means proposed for carrying those purposes into effect were set out in a letter of July 19, 1929, usually called the "Prospectus" in this record. That letter was addressed by them to all holders of Trustee's Participation Certificates and mailed to them on that date. In the third literary paragraph of that letter it was predicted that "the new corporation will not only greatly benefit the two banks and the territory they now serve, but will also be a stabilizing influence in banking circles throughout this section of the country" (R. 1, p. 253).

> "The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank nor a trust company has authority to exercise, and can take advantage of many sound and profitable financial opportunities presented in the course of business of the two banks but not available to them, because of the restrictions upon their powers and activities." (Idem.)

In paragraph 6 of the Prospectus, the activities of the new corporation were described thus:

> "To underwrite securities and take part in syndicate management, and to charge fees and commissions for its services in connection with the reorganization and financing of other corporations; the power to issue bonds and to guarantee the obligations of others, to become surety, guarantor, and endorser thereof."

The structure of the new corporation is thus described in paragraph 5 of the Prospectus:

> "The stock will be exchanged or sold in accordance with this Plan, on the basis of Twenty-Five Dollars ($25.00) per share, which will give the Company a capital of Twenty Million Dollars ($20,000,000) and a surplus of Thirty Million Dollars ($30,000,000) or a total capital and surplus of Fifty Million Dollars ($50,000,000). No stock shall be sold by the Company at less than Twenty-Five Dollars ($25.00) per share."

In paragraph 8 of the Prospectus it was declared that the entire plan "was conditioned expressly upon the acquisition by the BancoKentucky Company of at least a majority of the Trustee's Participation Shares issued and outstanding as of September 19, 1929."

In the Courier-Journal of Louisville there appeared on July 20, 1929, an announcement of which the following excerpts are illustrative:

* * * * *

> "The plan brings to Louisville an entirely new organization, it was said. It makes Louisville, its business and industries, independent in any field of operation they may choose, the officials asserted. Business and industrial leaders of Louisville will be able to finance their enterprises without seeking outside help and without being subject to the restraints that might be imposed by organizations not entirely devoted to Louisville and this section of the country, it was pointed out. A statement was put in the mails Friday night addressed to the holders of trustee's participation shares, National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company."

* * * * * *

"Such a re-organization is in line with the trend of business and finance in this country; and the strength and influence of the new corporation will not only greatly benefit the two banks and the territory they now serve, but will also be a stabilizing influence in banking circles throughout this section of the country. The new corporation can exercise many profitable and important functions which neither a bank nor a trust company has authority to exercise, and can take advantage of many sound and profitable opportunities frequently presented in the course of business of the two banks, but not available to them because of the restrictions upon their powers and activities." (Pl's Ex. 26, Vol. III, pp. 1163-5.)

The closing date for the acceptance of this offer by T. P. C. holders and for subscriptions to the stock of the new company, was September 19, 1929. Up to that time, the Prospectus and newspaper publications of the character of those mentioned above, contained the only information had by the public, including those persons who acquired Banco stock either by the exchange of T. P. C.'s or by purchase for cash. Neither in the Prospectus nor in the newspapers was anything said about the acquisition of stock in other banks than those of the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, represented by T. P. C.'s.

The first public notice of the acquisition by Banco of other bank stocks appeared in the Herald Post on September 26, 1929, when mention was made of a proposal to acquire a stock holding interest in two Cincinnati banks. The District Court found that "Banco was formed for the purpose set out in the letter of July 19, 1929, and for no other purpose" (R., Vol. 1, p. 267). In the course of the trial, after hearing the testimony of a number of defendants, the Court, of its own motion, found that all other defendants in like situation would testify that "they acquired their stock in BancoKentucky Company in the belief that they were making a sound financial investment in a separate corporation, and that the BancoKentucky Company was to do the things authorized by its corporate charter, as indicated in the letter of July 19, 1929" (R., Vol. 1, p. 174).

The posture of affairs as of the closing date for deposit on T. P. C.'s and for subscriptions to Banco stock, and the results thereof are stated in Findings 21 to 24 inclusive of the District Court (R., Vol. 1, p. 255), as follows:

> "21. On September 20, 1929, the day after the closed date for deposit and subscription for Banco stock, a meeting of its Directors was held. At this meeting it was reported to the Board that as a result of the efforts of the organizers of the Company, Six hundred thousand (600,000) shares of its stock had been subscribed for at $25.00 a share; that the deposit of T. P. C.'s for exchange was almost unanimous and the Board then reserved for exchange so as to cover all of the T. P. C.'s 1,150,000 shares of Banco stock, which, with the sale of [illegible] disposed of [illegible] shares, leaving [illegible] shares of the authorized issue undisposed of. Mr. Brown, President, asked the Board for and was granted authority to sell the [illegible] shares left at [illegible] per share.

"III. When the Board ascertained that the deposit of T. P. C.'s for exchange for Banco stock on the ratio of [illegible] shares of Banco for one participating Share was almost unanimous, it set in motion plans to amend the [illegible] Banco increasing its capital from [illegible] shares to [illegible] shares.

"IV. In January [illegible] shares which was increased from [illegible] which was [illegible]

"V. [illegible] of the Board [illegible] authorizing a contract with Black & Company and M. M. Bullock & Company for the sale of [illegible] shares of Banco stock at [illegible] per share.

In the light of subsequent events, this plan for a company having a working capital of $30,000,000 or more, in addition to a controlling interest in the National Bank of Kentucky and the Louisville Trust Company, may seem to have been a very grandiose conception. As was said by Judge Simons, writing the opinion of the Court in Atherton v. Anderson, 86 F. (2d) 518, 536:

"It is true that Banco was conceived in the vaulting imagination of the President of the bank; that it was promoted and fostered by the appellants; that the directorates of the two corporations, though not identical, over-lapped; that the great majority of trust participation certificates representing stock in the bank became the property of Banco, and that there is a suggestion of identity in the name adopted for the new company. But Banco was not a mere holding company for the bank's stock. It was organized for clearly defined purposes, too optimistically conceived, perhaps, but neither illegal or unlawful. It had its own capital with cash resources at one period almost twice the entire capital and surplus of the bank. While in the very beginning the bank stock may, as found by the court, have been its principal asset, and may have continued thereafter to be its most valuable single asset, it had other assets of very substantial value, and there was warrantable inference at the time of its organization and for a substantial period thereafter that it could well meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank. At any rate there is nothing in the record to point to its creation for the purpose of escaping such assessment. Indeed when the assessment was finally made by the Comptroller it was enforced against Banco and not against the stockholders. See Laurent v. Anderson, supra. Its separate corporate existence was recognized by the very receiver on whose behalf we are now asked to ignore it."

* * * * *

"The BancoKentucky Company was certainly not a sham, for nearly $10,000,000 of actual cash paid for its stock attest its reality and there is nothing in the record to point to it as an instrumentality of the bank. The master absolved the appellants of all suspicion of bad faith and the court approved his findings in the last of three carefully reasoned opinions (11 F. Supp. 9, 14). Certainly we must accept this as the deliberate judgment of the court rather than as an euphemism, easing the blow to the sensibilities as it fell heavily upon the purse."

At the time of which we are now speaking, that is, at the time of the organization of Banco, the persons who participated in its organization, who transferred their Participation Certificates for Banco stock, and in addition purchased additional stock for cash, believed and had every reason to believe that both the Bank and the Trust Company were sound. The directors of the Bank knew that some of its assets had been criticized by bank examiners, although the President of the Bank followed the practice of concealing from them the more serious criticisms. But their confidence in these two institutions was not unjustified and was supported by the knowledge that Participation Certificates having a par value of $10.00 per share, were currently selling on the market at five to one, or $50.00 a share.

The District Court found (R., Vol. 1, p. 267) that,

"There were irregularities in the handling of some of the credit accounts of the bank, but the soundness of the bank and its ability to meet its obligations could not be questioned until long after the formation of Banco."

As further evidence of the confidence of the organizers of Banco and of the public in the soundness and good faith of this new project, we would point out the fact that, whereas there had been 2,255 Participation Certificate holders, there were now (January 1, 1930) 5,660 holders of Banco shares. There were 646 Participation Certificate holders who, in addition to the Banco shares received in exchange for T. P. C.'s, purchased an additional 178,878 Banco shares for $4,471,950 in cash. There were 3,505 "outsiders" who had never held any bank stock or any Participation Certificates but who purchased 215,908 Banco shares for $5,397,700 in cash (R., Vol. 1, p. 256).

During its brief career, Banco had at its disposal cash resources amounting to $12,777,312, to-wit $9,869,650 realized from the payment of subscriptions to its stock, $1,307,662 received as dividends and interest, and $1,600,000 borrowed from the Chemical Bank of New York. The expectation of creating a working capital of $30,000,000 by the sale of additional Banco shares was defeated by the stock market crash of October 29, 1929, and the ensuing depression which made it impossible to find a market for those shares at the fixed price of $25.00 per share. Of the sum mentioned above ($12,777,312), $6,561,506 was expended in the purchase of bank stocks and the remaining $6,215,806 was practically exhausted in the following manner. In order to meet a criticism by bank examiners, the Murray Rubber Company debentures and the Humphrey note held by the Bank were purchased by Banco for $600,000 (R. 2, p. 97). Brown secretly abstracted

$2,000,000 from the treasury of Banco for his own purposes (R. 2, p. 98). In order to support the declining market for Banco shares (of which he held 60,000), Brown purchased on the market, with Banco's funds, 106,000 Banco shares at about $22.00 per share or a total outlay of $2,374,137 (R. 2, p. 99). The loss on the Murray-Humphrey purchases was total. The loss on the purchase of Banco shares was total. The loss on the "loan" to Brown of $2,000,000 was $1,557,420, or a total loss of $4,531,557.

Far from being a mere "holding company" with no other assets than bank shares, the company would and should have had sufficient cash assets remaining in its treasury to satisfy the claims of the receiver but for the tragic unfaithfulness of its chief officer in the respects above noted.

CONCLUSION.

This brings to an end this sketch of the origin, purposes and history of the BancoKentucky Company. That project was certainly not a scheme devised by a coterie of financial moguls for the monopoly or consolidation of banking power. The greatest publicity was given to the proposal. Public participation was widely invited and even solicited, with the result that $5,387,700 in cash was paid in by 3,505 "outsiders," who had held no T. P. C.'s and no Bank stock. The individual purchases of members of this group ranged from a high of 8,000 shares ($200,000), to a low of one share ($25.00). The average was about 60 shares

($1,500). Included in this group were about one thousand subscribers, none of whose purchases exceeded 50 shares per capita or a mean of 25 shares (Defendant's Ex. No. 8; R. 3, p. 37).

The motives ascribed to respondents by petitioner (Reply Brief, pp. 3-5) certainly can not have influenced the "outsiders" described above. No knowledge of the asserted condition of the Bank on their part has been shown nor is there the slightest ground for imputing such knowledge to them. They can not have had any intention of escaping double liability on Bank stock, since they were under no such liability. They can have taken no part in an alleged "reorganization" to escape income tax upon a gain from the sale of T. P. C.'s, since they had no T. P. C.'s to sell.

Five times it has been held by the courts that the BancoKentucky Company was the real owner of the bank shares represented by T. P. C.'s held by it: Keyes v. American Life and Accident Insurance Company, 1 F. Supp. 512; Laurent v. Anderson, 70 Fed. (2d) 819; Anderson v. Abbott, 32 F. Supp. 328; BancoKentucky's Receiver v. National Bank of Kentucky's Receiver, 263 Ky. 155, 92 S. W. (2d) 19; Anderson v. Abbott, 127 Fed. (2d) 696. In a sixth case, Atherton v. Anderson, 86 Fed. (2d) 537, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit reached the following conclusion:

> "But Banco was not a mere holding company for the bank's stock. It was organized for clearly defined purposes, too optimistically conceived, perhaps, but neither illegal or unlawful. It had its own capital with cash resources at one period almost twice the entire capital and surplus of the bank. While in the very beginning the bank stock may, as found by the court, have been its principal asset, and may have continued thereafter to be its most valuable single asset, it had other assets of very substantial value, and there was warrantable inference at the time of its organization and for a substantial period thereafter that it could well meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank. At any rate there is nothing in the record to point to its creation for the purpose of escaping such assessment. Indeed when the assessment was finally made by the Comptroller it was enforced against Banco and not against the stockholders. See Laurent v. Anderson, supra. Its separate corporate existence was recognized by the very receiver on whose behalf we are now asked to ignore it. * * * The BancoKentucky Company was certainly not a sham, for nearly $10,000,000 of actual cash paid for its stock attest its reality and there is nothing in the record to point to it as an instrumentality of the bank. The master absolved the appellants of all suspicion of bad faith and the court approved his findings in the last of three carefully reasoned opinions (11 F. Supp. 9, 14)."

It is true that petitioner, in his Reply Brief, reasserts his claim that in the Laurent Case Banco was sued exclusively as the registered or "record" holder of the bank stock represented by T. P. C.'s held by it. But there is not a shred of evidence to support this claim. In point of fact, the BancoKentucky Company was not the registered holder of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky (Deft's Ex. No. 6). In petitioner's pleadings filed in the course of that litigation, the BancoKentucky Company was always described as the "owner" or "owner and holder," but never as the record holder, of the bank shares represented by the T. P. C.'s held by Banco.

In any event, Judge Cochran, sitting as judge of the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, found that the BancoKentucky Company was "the actual and real owner" of the stock of the National Bank of Kentucky, and in affirming that judgment the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit declared that the evidence showed "that Banco was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the national bank stock involved." In addition to this we have referred to eight cases from other jurisdictions (supra, page 7), in which the Laurent Case was cited as a real owner case.

We submit that the instant case presents a situation which is totally different from that found in each of the cases where the corporate entity of a holding company was disregarded and its stockholders held liable as the real owners of the bank shares upon which a Comptroller's assessment had been levied. The plan submitted to the holders of T. P. C.'s and to the investing public provided for the acquisition by Banco of a majority of those securities and in addition a working capital of $30,000,000 which was to be used in carrying on the financial and promotional activities described in the Prospectus. If the time had been propitious so that the project could have been carried out as planned, and if the interest of Banco had not been betrayed by its chief officer, there could be no doubt that the creditors of the National Bank of Kentucky would have been fully protected. Banco was not formed to evade the statutory liability. It was organized "for clearly defined purposes, too optimistically conceived, perhaps, but neither illegal nor unlawful." At its inception it had ample means to carry out those purposes and "to meet any assessment that might be levied upon it as a stockholder of the bank" (quotations from Atherton v. Anderson, supra). It has never been the law that a transferor of bank shares must guarantee the present or continued solvency of the transferee and the ends of justice do not require that this rule be departed from in the instant case.

The general rule, frequently announced by this Court, is that the stockholders of a corporation are not the owners of the assets of the corporation: Klein v. Board of Supervisors, 283 U. S. 19; Cannon Manufacturing Company v. Cudahy Packing Company, 267 U. S. 333; Moline Properties, Inc., Petitioner, v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 319 U. S. 436. Petitioner has strenuously sought to bring his case within some of the exceptions to this general rule. He first sought to show that these respondents had attempted to make a fictitious transfer of their stock to avoid impending assessment liability. As to this there was a complete failure of proof. He could prove neither that the bank was in a failing condition nor that these respondents knew it. He then attempted to show that BancoKentucky Company was a mere sham or shell, without other assets than bank stocks and having no independent and separate purpose for existence. Here again there was a complete failure of proof. Then, as a last extremity, petitioner sought to urge that respondents, in spite of the failure to prove or demonstrate any sufficient reason, should nevertheless be termed the "real owners" of the bank stock and hence liable for the assessment. But here petitioner was met not only by an overwhelming weight of persuasive authority against him, but also by the fact that he himself had called the company, and not its stockholders, the "real owner" of the bank shares, and five decisions of State and Federal courts had followed where he led.

The ends of justice do not require a different conclusion by this Court.

The questions of res judicata and election have been sufficiently covered in our former brief and we shall not lengthen this supplement to that brief by further reference to these subjects.

MEMORANDUM BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR REHEARING.

May it please the Court:

Respondents, with full recognition of the power, and sometimes the duty, of the Court to declare new principles of law on proper occasion, and with full awareness of the finality of any adjudication made after full consideration of the case presented, believe they have a right to insist that the judgment of this Court, as distinguished from general observations in the opinion, should be founded upon a correct analysis and statement of the facts presented. It is most earnestly and respectfully submitted that the Court has been misled in the instant case into the acceptance of certain errors as to facts which were fundamental to the determination of the case, facts which, if correctly stated, must change the conclusion reached. Counsel charged with responsibility for the interests of over three thousand individual stockholders feel that an adjudication against these respondents in this Court of last resort should at least be based upon a meticulously correct interpretation of the record and should have due and proper regard for findings of fact made by the courts below and accepted by this Court.

Impelled by this firm belief, respondents have felt themselves fully justified in presenting herewith their Petition for Rehearing in full confidence that the Court will insist upon conforming its decree to the precise case before it. In support of their petition, respondents, avoiding any general reargument of matters which were obviously given close consideration by the Court, briefly present the following matters, important to a correct decision, which seem to have escaped the careful attention of this Court.

I.

RESPONDENTS ARE ENTITLED TO HAVE THEIR PLEAS OF ELECTION AND RES JUDICATA ADJUDICATED UPON THE ACTUAL FACTS AS PRESENTED BY THE RECORD.

Whether respondents are right or wrong as to their contention that the legal principles of election and res judicata are applicable in this case, they are at least entitled to have these principles applied with reference to the exact facts.

The Court rejects respondents' pleas of election and res judicata based upon the case of Laurent v. Anderson, 70 F. (2d) 819, upon the ground that the basis of liability in the Laurent Case—that is, "apparent" or titular ownership"—was different from the basis of liability in the instant case—that is "actual or beneficial ownership." This is the familiar distinction between the record holder and the real owner, the former being held liable on the ground of estoppel and the latter on the ground of ownership.

The law is right but the facts are wrong. If Banco had been merely the record holder of the Bank stock in question, petitioner might not have been put to an election to sue either Banco or the actual owners, whoever they might be. He might have sued both, as the Court has said. But if he had obtained a judgment against Banco as the real owner, petitioner could not thereafter have maintained a suit against any other persons in that capacity, since in the nature of things (except in cases of joint ownership not here involved), there can not be two real owners of the same shares. This is the law as laid down in the Court's opinion. It is the law as laid down in innumerable cases, including many cases from this Court. It is the law of this case.

Banco is not, and never was, the "record" holder of shares of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky. The contrary has been asserted by the Receiver but no evidence has ever been produced to support that assertion.

Petitioner's "Request for Admissions" filed in evidence by him contains in part the following statement of fact, admitted as true by respondents:

> "That at the time of the closing of the National Bank of Kentucky it had issued and outstanding 40,000 shares of capital stock of the par value of $100.00 each; that 39,820 of said shares were registered on the stock ledger of said Bank in the names of Henry Vogt, Thomas J. Minary, Stuart E. Duncan, Allen P. Dodd, Charles H. Bohmer and Ben J. Metcalfe, as Trustees under Trust Agreement dated April 22, 1927. * * * That the remaining 180 shares of said Bank were registered on the stock ledger of said Bank, 10 shares each, in the names of eighteen directors * * *" (II R., p. 76).

The Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky were affiliated institutions. Shares of the capital stock of each were held by trustees who, in turn, had issued Trustees' Participation Certificates. The holders of these certificates were not the record holders of stock in the two institutions albeit they were the actual owners.

All that BancoKentucky ever held was Trustee's Participation Certificates. It was never the record holder of a single share of stock in the National Bank of Kentucky.

The trustees under the Trust Agreement between the stockholders of The Louisville Trust Company and the National Bank of Kentucky were the record holders of the shares. No one else was a record holder of those shares.

BancoKentucky was held liable for the statutory assessment in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, because it was the actual owner of the shares by virtue of its holding Trustees' Participation Certificates, and for no other reason.

In that opinion the Court said (p. 824):

> "The evidence establishes that Banco was in every sense the true and beneficial owner of the National Bank stock involved; the trustees holding only a bare legal title to the stock. * * *
>
> "The petition and especially the evidence sustain recovery against Banco as the real and beneficial owner under section 64 of the National Banking Act (12 U. S. C. A.)."

Similar conclusions were reached in Anderson v. Abbott, 127 Fed. (2d) 696, and BancoKentucky's Receiver v. Louisville Trust Company's Receiver, 263 Ky. 155.

Thus the position of Banco, as the actual, as distinguished from the record, owner is doubly established; by the record itself, and by final adjudications to the same effect by courts of competent jurisdiction.

We believe that the principles of election and res judicata are clearly applicable in this case on well-established grounds. Certainly they may not properly be disallowed on the only ground stated in the opinion.

II.

THE COURT HAS INCORRECTLY ANALYZED THE RECORD AS TO WHAT BANCO WAS; AS TO THE INTENTION AND KNOWLEDGE OF TRANSFERORS OF STOCK; AND AS TO THE TYPE OF SECURITY ACQUIRED BY OUTSIDE PURCHASERS.

The opinion of the Court contains the following statement:

> "It [Banco] was negotiating for the purchase of the shares of an investment banking house when that house, the Bank and the Trust Company failed. This was in November, 1930—a little more than a year after Banco began its financial career" (Opinion, p. 3).

The statement with reference to the "purchase of the shares of an investment banking house" refers to the purchase by Banco of one-half of the capital stock of Caldwell & Company of Nashville. We respectfully submit that the Court has misunderstood the record with reference to that matter. Banco was not "negotiating" for the purchase of the Caldwell shares at the time when the National Bank of Kentucky failed. The facts with reference to this transaction are as follows:

The negotiations with Caldwell were initiated about eight months before the failure of the Bank, and within six or seven months after Banco was organized. At a meeting of the directors of Banco on April 15, 1930, President Brown reported the result of prior negotiations between himself and Caldwell. A resolution was adopted authorizing President Brown to close a contract with Caldwell & Company upon the terms submitted by Brown (Plaintiff's Exhibit 23, Vol. III, p. 1105). The contract was actually executed on May 29, 1930 (idem, p. 1107). On June 2, 1930, President Brown announced in the public press the "consummation" of these negotiations, declaring that the "financial structure" thus erected would "undoubtedly stand out in the future as one of America's greatest financial institutions" (Plaintiff's Exhibit 26, Vol. III, p. 1207). On the same day, the local press in Louisville carried a full announcement of the transaction, including the following (idem, pp. 1208-1209):

> "Combination of the institutions is expected to be of much importance in further extension and development in commercial and investment banking and insurance fields, according to the heads of the organizations.
> "'The importance of the association of the BancoKentucky Company and Caldwell & Co. to the greatest business section of the United States cannot be overestimated,' Mr. Caldwell said. 'It brings to the Middle West, the Eastern Central and the Southern States capital that will be sufficient to meet every requirement of business, industry and development in this entire section of the country, and will be a great stabilizing factor in the financial structure of this territory.'"

Ten thousand shares of Caldwell & Company were transferred to Banco and thereafter appeared as an asset upon the balance sheet of that company. Seven hundred thousand shares of Banco were transferred to Caldwell & Company, two hundred thousand additional shares being held in escrow pending the valuation of the assets of Caldwell & Company, with provision made for a fixed, financial adjustment, one way or the other, if the appraisal showed that the value of the Caldwell assets was either more or less than the amount stated in the contract.

It was not until November 5, 1930, more than five months after the closing of the contract and the exchange of shares, that the Louisville press published a dispatch from Nashville, Tennessee, to the effect that Caldwell & Company was in difficulties and its affairs had been placed in the hands of a committee of the Nashville Clearing House (Plaintiff's Exhibit 26, Vol. III, p. 1215). On the following day, November 6th, the papers published a false statement from President Brown to the effect that the negotiations between Banco and Caldwell had never been "consummated" and that consequently Banco was "not connected in any way with the affairs of Caldwell & Company" (idem, p. 1220).

For present purposes it is entirely unnecessary to pursue further the argument as to whether the sale was consummated or not. That question is now immaterial. However, the following facts in connection with this transaction, completely overlooked and disregarded by the Court, are of extreme importance.

First: Caldwell & Company, admittedly a reputable and apparently successful investment house and found by the court below (I R., p. 258) to be "known as the largest and strongest investment house in the South" represented in writing in this contract (I R., p. 260) that—

> "as of May 28, 1930, its assets were of such fair aggregate value that, after deducting therefrom all of its liabilities, it had a net worth of not less than $9,000,000.00."

Second: Banco represented in the same writing (I R., p. 260) that it—

> "had no liabilities and on said date (May 1, 1930) it had cash to the amount of $1,297,893.47 and good and collectible notes in the principal amount of not less than $2,000,000.00."

Third: The Receiver of the Bank, petitioner here, recognized this transaction as valid and binding, at least to the extent of five hundred thousand shares of Banco stock; made no effort to set aside the transaction; and in his bill of complaint admitted these five hundred thousand shares as validly issued and outstanding by including them in the 2,072,468 Banco shares alleged to be subject to the assessment liability asserted in his bill.

Fourth: The very fact that this transaction was undertaken—whether it was consummated or not—corroborates all of the evidence in the case to the effect that Banco was not, and was not intended to be, merely a bank stock holding company.

Fifth: As of the date of said contract (May 28, 1930), if the representations therein made by persons of reputed character and integrity were true (and so far as these thousands of stockholders knew, they were), Banco would have had free assets, aside from bank shares, of a declared value of $7,797,893.47* as against a maximum assessment liability on all bank shares held by it of $7,502,650.00,† and it actually then had approximately 30 per cent of its outstanding stock issued for assets and securities other than bank stock.

Sixth: This was the last publicly announced transaction of any importance that Banco had, or of which the stockholders may be held to have had knowledge or to have approved.

The opinion of the Court ignores all of these facts and brushes them aside with the bare statement above quoted (Brief, p. 8). It scarcely comports with conceptions of fair play, for the Receiver of a National Bank to admit that Banco issued a large percentage of its capital stock for non-banking investments when such admission seems advantageous, and then to induce this Court to deny that fact when such a course appears better to suit his purposes.

It is easy to understand why the Receiver and his counsel, by looking back at it through the haze of 15 years, seek to dismiss this transaction as a meaningless

*As declared in the Caldwell contract (I R., pp. 259-262), and composed of the following items: Cash, $1,297,893.47; Good and Collectible Notes, $2,000,000.00; and one-half interest in Caldwell as represented, $4,500,000.00.

†This was a variable figure. The par value of bank stocks owned at the time of the Caldwell contract, as listed therein (I R., p. 260) was $7,502,650.00. The par value of bank stocks owned at the date of closing (Nov. 17, 1930) was $7,770,780 (II R., p. 97).

exchange of worthless stock between two broken-down companies, as has been done both in brief and argument because the transaction stands in the way of the case he tries to make. The best evidence of the reality of this transaction, from a thoroughly unbiased observer, is found in the report of the Chief National Bank Examiner as of September 17, 1930 (Pl. Ex. 20, II R., p. 930), where he spends six pages of his report giving a careful analysis of the relationship between Banco and Caldwell and its collateral effects upon the Bank. The transaction was real enough to him.

It was also real enough to the Kentucky Court of Appeals as appears from its opinion in a case in which that question was an important issue. Kentucky Title Trust Company v. Weil, 281 Ky. 763. In its opinion the Court said:

> "But excluding all incompetent evidence, there is left sufficient competent evidence which clearly and convincingly proves Brown perpetrated a fraud upon Weil by representing to him that there would be no merger with Caldwell & Company until an audit was completed showing that company to be in good shape, when at that time the merger had already been consummated as Brown knew."

The ultimate conclusion of the Court that "Banco emerged as a bank stock holding company" is therefore incorrect. Such a statement presents a picture of Banco as being other than it was and forms an untenable basis of liability against these respondents.

Had the representations of Caldwell & Company been true, and had that company not later failed, these respondents, as we read the opinion, would not have been liable. Their liability therefore is made to arise either (a) because Caldwell made a false statement or (b) because Caldwell later failed, neither of which ground is a sufficient basis for liability under the statute.

The Court's opinion apparently does not mean that stockholders, even of a bank stock holding company, are perpetual guarantors of its assets, or even of the integrity of its officers, with liability fluctuating between existence and non-existence dependent upon unpredictable market variations or changing individual characteristics. As the Court pointed out, shareholder relationship and responsibility should not depend on merely "whimsical" circumstances.

In any event, Banco's situation at the date of the Caldwell transaction appeared to meet all of the requirements as to "solvency" as indicated in the opinion. A correct understanding and evaluation of these facts is essential to a fair adjudication of the liabilities of the respondents in this case.

III.

IF A NEW AND EXPANDED CONCEPT OF LIABILITY IS TO BE APPLIED, IT SHOULD HAVE RELATION TO THE ACTUAL CASE PRESENTED AND NOT TO A MERELY HYPOTHETICAL CASE.

If respondents are to be subjected to liability in this case, their liability should at least arise out of their own actions. They should not be held liable for things they never did nor intended to do.

The Court accepts the findings of fact of the courts below. The District Court found that "Banco was formed for the purpose set out in the letter of July 19, 1929, and for no other purpose" (I R., p. 267). The Circuit Court of Appeals concurred in this finding and this Court says that it accepts it.

But the Court takes no notice of the evidence of the purposes of investors in Banco stock or of the findings of the courts below upon this subject. It proceeds to discuss the case as involving a corporation owning only bank shares. This is entirely inconsistent with the facts shown by the record, and found by the courts below, findings which this Court has accepted as supported by the record.

The prospectus of July 19, 1929, is undoubtedly the best evidence of such intention. This prospectus was mailed to each certificate holder (Finding 20; I R., p. 255). It is the only piece of information definitely shown by the record to have been actually received by any substantial group of stockholders. It was published at length in the local press on two separate occasions, July 20 and 21, 1929 (Pl. Ex. 26, Vol. III, pp. 1165, 1168). Upon the trial of the case, petitioner also was of the opinion that this prospectus was the best evidence of intention. On that ground he objected to the respondents giving testimony as to the purpose for which Banco was organized (III R., p. 177), and did his best to prevent them from testifying.

The prospectus is silent as indicating any intention that Banco should be merely a bank stock holding corporation. It mentions no bank stock at all except that of National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company. Most of the respondents did not have occasion to testify on this question because the District Court, after hearing the testimony of some of them, on its own motion and in order to save time, suggested a stipulation by the parties as the basis of an order which the Court entered, to the effect that the remaining respondents (except officers, directors or employees), if introduced as witnesses, would testify

> "that they acquired their stock in BancoKentucky Company in the belief that they were making a sound financial investment in a separate corporation, and that the BancoKentucky Company was to do the things authorized by its corporate charter, as indicated in the letter of July 19, 1929". (I R., p. 174; III R., pp. 275, et seq.).

The knowledge and intention of the stockholders has been considered an important element in all cases in which the question of double liability was considered, including those mentioned in the opinion as pointing the way toward the extension of the doctrine of double liability in so-called holding company cases.*

For example, in Nettles v. Childs, 100 Fed. (2d) 952, the decisive point in the case was whether or not the stockholders knew that the company was intended to be solely a bank stock holding company, and those stockholders who were not advised of the fact that the company held only bank stock were excused from liability on the ground that they were incorrectly informed.

The kind of company that Banco was intended to be is made perfectly clear by the evidence and the matters leading up to its organization are undisputed. The officers and directors of the two banks had a number of informal discussions prior to the issuance of the prospectus. From the outset, Banco was intended to be an operating company. It has never been denied that the acquisition of an interest in certain banks was an important part of the plan. As one witness put it:

> "The purpose, or one of the purposes, was to acquire banks in the Ohio Valley as a reservoir of finance" (III R., p. 53).

Another expressed the purpose of acquiring interest in banks as > "a means to an end, and certainly not the thing that would yield the greatest profit" (III R., p. 220).

And still another witness described the purpose thus:

*In passing, it is pertinent to observe that these so called "point-the-way" cases were all decided long after the organization of Banco.

> "We didn't expect to make very much money out of the banks, that was merely to be an outlet for the business that Banco expected to do. We never would have bought a bank for the money we could make out of it" (III R., p. 271.)

Obviously general discussions among relatively large groups would lead to differing impressions received by the several members of the group, and it is not strange that individual expressions of intention should vary (III R., pp. 66, 139, 178, 195, 220). For this very reason, the prospectus must be taken as representing a composite picture of an aggregate purpose. The above statements are fully corroborated by the minutes of the Board of Directors of the Bank held on June 7, 1929, which recite:

> "Mr. Brown's proposition to form a new Company with a proposed capital of $20,000,000 organized to own stock of other corporations, all, or any part, buy and sell securities, original and refinancing, etc., was submitted to the Board of Directors and the Board expressed themselves as favorable and on motion duly seconded and unanimously carried the President was authorized to proceed along the lines outlined" (Pl. Ex. 21, Vol. II, p. 992).

There was never any dispute in the evidence that Banco was at all times intended to have a very large working capital to carry on its various enterprises over and above the acquisition of bank stocks.

In view of the undisputed evidence and findings of the courts below, we respectfully submit that it is not fair to respondents to say that their intention was evidenced by statements made by, or to, the Chicago Board of Trade or Blyth and Company, and that their liability is to be hinged on any such inconclusive evidence. The respondents in this case were all residents of Louisville or the Western District of Kentucky. There is no showing that they ever knew or heard of these casual statements emanating from Chicago. Petitioner made no effort to make any such showing and respondents were not given an opportunity of denying it. As a matter of fact, evidence of this character was so obviously incompetent that much of it was very properly excluded at the trial. (See III R., p. 3[illegible]). If they are to be held responsible for their acts and intentions, such acts and intentions should be measured by information locally available at the time Banco was organized.

The seeming discrepancies between the purposes of the stockholders and the final "emergence" of Banco is easily explained. In point of fact, Banco never did "emerge" in accordance with the original intention. Within one month after subscriptions had been closed, the first calamitous break in the stock market occurred on October 29, 1929. Thereafter, it was impossible to raise the amount of free capital which had originally been intended. Every step to enable the corporation to do so was taken, including an increase in its authorized capital stock. This was to be available for sale generally for the purpose of providing such capital as soon as market conditions improved. In the meantime, it was found that certain exchanges of stock could be made upon a fair basis. The situation was thus explained in the record (III R., p. 115):

> "After the stock market break in October, the charter of Banco was amended so as to increase the authorized capital stock from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 shares. The reason we did exchange some of this newly authorized stock for bank stock instead of selling it on the market for cash is an economic proposition, that there was a parity of value of the corporation where you are trading stock, just a little different from raising cash. When the crash in the market came, it was easier to swap stock than it was to sell for cash, at that particular time. The plan of the organizers of Banco-Kentucky to create a fund for the purpose of engaging in the lines of business and the purchase of other types of shares other than Bank stock, had not been abandoned in any way."

But, as we have pointed out, the Court takes no notice of all this, treating the findings of the courts below as to intention as having no significance. "It is," says the Court, "the condition of Banco at the end of the promotion which is significant. Banco emerged as a bank-stock holding company." This is a novel use of the word promotion. In the sense in which that word is customarily used, the promotion of Banco terminated with the incorporation and organization of that company or, at least, with the closing of the subscriptions to its stock as of September 19, 1929. The company then attempted to enter upon the activities for which it was organized. This is the time at which it "emerged" as an operating company, having then obtained possession of substantially all trustees participation certificates and having, in addition, approximately $10,000,000.00 in cash.

The ultimate purpose to have a working capital of at least $20,000,000.00 was never abandoned until the collapse of the market and of the company rendered it impossible.

It will thus be seen that the Court is not adjudicating the rights of the respondents on the basis of what they intended to do, or of what they knew or expected, when they acquired their stock. It is, on the contrary, treating them as stockholders in a kind of corporation which they never did organize or invest in.

Liability accordingly is made dependent upon intervening events and not upon an analysis of their stockholder relationship to the corporation.

CONCLUSION.

In the latter part of the opinion (page 13) the Court has correctly stated that liability has been placed by Congress upon "stockholders" or "shareholders." With this we are in entire agreement. This statement, however, cannot possibly be reconciled with grounds of liability indicated in the earlier part of the opinion where the Court says that liability is to be determined by questions of "control" and "solvency."

In September, 1929, whatever elements of "control" may have then existed, Banco had, at that time, free assets of approximately $10,000,000.00 which was more than double the amount necessary to meet any claim of double liability. Had the company remained static at this point, the opinion concedes that the stockholders of Banco would not have been liable. But if they were not liable, it must have been because they were not then stockholders of the Bank. Their position as stockholders did not change between September, 1929, and November, 1930. Either they were stockholders during the entire period or they were not. If they would not have been liable in September, 1929, at what point thereafter did they become liable and for what reason? Again, in May, 1930, as above shown, Banco had a substantial investment in non-banking assets, and was believed to have free assets approximately equal to 100% of all possible assessment liabilities. Respondents feel entitled to ask whether they were then the stockholders of the Bank or were not. The principal event after that date was the unauthorized dissipation of its assets, in supporting the market for its shares, unknown to, and unheard of by these respondents.

The concept of non-liability on the ground of solvency and the concept of liability on the ground of stockholder relationship are completely irreconcilable. It is apparent, therefore, that the Court has not enforced a declared public policy, but has originated a new basis of liability.

The solvency concept of liability is entirely different from liability grounded on fraud, transfers to avoid liability or other evasions. In such cases there is always the fact of fraud or evasion, easily susceptible of proof at a given point of time and in direct reference to the particular means employed to effectuate such purpose. A court of equity from time immemorial has been empowered to look through or disregard such transactions, and to remit the parties to their original position. Thus, there is no inconsistency in saying that stockholders who have been guilty of fraud or evasion continue to remain as such.

This is entirely different from saying that stockholder liability does not exist under a corporation organized with a reasonable amount of free assets, but may spring into existence anew upon the later dissipation of such assets or their mere reduction in value.

Even Congress in 1933 did not go so far. Congress did not, in fact, impose any such liability at all. It said only that certain safeguards should be created if the corporation wished to vote the stock. The decision here goes far beyond any policy even hinted at by Congress.

Unless liability here asserted is to be imposed absolutely, without reference to knowledge or intention, the decision should be changed. And certainly knowledge and intention, except in cases of clear statutory liability, are important factors to be considered by a court of equity. The equity forum was chosen here deliberately by petitioner. The issues of fraud and evasion were elaborately tried in the District Court and petitioner lost. It now appears that the decision is to turn upon questions and issues hardly conceived when the case originated.

Regardless of what the Court may determine as to the policy of Congress in the case of a corporation formed for the sole purpose of holding bank stock, respondents respectfully submit that they are entitled to have their case heard and adjudged on the basis of the exact facts. Despite a few, scattered indications to the contrary, the overwhelming weight of the evidence, and the findings of two courts, show that Banco was not intended to be, and in fact was not, a mere bank-stock holding company. It was not the type of company discussed in the opinion. It always had non-banking assets, sometimes of a value twice the total assessment liability on bank stocks held by it, sometimes not so much, but, so far as these stockholders knew or were advised, always substantial in amount. In the difficult market situation in which Banco found itself it went as far as the circumstances permitted to carry out the purposes for which the company was formed.

It is respectfully submitted that respondents' Petition for Rehearing filed herewith, should be granted.

A. M. ANDERSON, RECEIVER OF THE NATIONAL BANK OF KENTUCKY, OF LOUISVILLE, Petitioner,

v.

KATHERINE KIRKPATRICK ABBOTT, ADMINISTRATRIX, ET AL.,

Respondents.

RESPONSE TO PETITION FOR REHEARING

The petition for rehearing claims that the Court has misinterpreted certain facts. It argues that if these facts had been "correctly" stated the Court should have reached a different conclusion (p. 4). We respectfully differ with the argument and further submit that the facts are correctly stated in the opinion.

The first claim (p. 6) is that BancoKentucky was not the "record owner of the bank stock." This is disingenuous. The bank stock certificates were issued in the name of Trustees. Banco was the registered holder of the "Trustees Participation Certificates." Respondents conceded that "The T. P. C.'s are admittedly bank stock for the purpose of this case" (Brief for Appellees, filed in Circuit Court of Appeals, p. 40). Each such trust certificate evidenced the record ownership of stock in two banks (National Bank of Kentucky and Louisville Trust Company). The bank and the trustees were each required by paragraph 6, of the Trust Agreement, to keep "a register of Trustees Participation Certificates issued by them similar to the ordinary stock certificate book." (Ex. 7, Vol. 1, p. 25.) The bank kept such stock register as its record of the "titular" holders of the bank stock. This record kept by the trustees and the bank showed that BancoKentucky was the holder of record of approximately 95% of the bank stock represented by the trust certificates.

This point was previously argued in "Brief for Respondents," p. 57. The identical argument presented here was advanced in respondents' brief on reargument, p. 6. These arguments were fully met in our brown cover reply brief, pp. 22-26. This Court fully understood and correctly stated the facts. See Opinion, Footnote 2.

Respondents' reargument on election and res judicata is not new. It was carefully analyzed and disposed of in the Court's opinion. It was rejected by both the District Court and the Court of Appeals in the instant case. 23 F. Supp. 265, Conclusion of Law 13, R. 1, p. 268. It was also rejected by the District Court of Illinois. Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853.

It is next claimed (p. 8) that the Court erred in stating, in the opinion, that Banco was "negotiating" for Caldwell at the time of the failure. Respondents apparently claim that the Banco-Caldwell deal was consummated several months before the failure. If we were to assume that respondents were correct on this point, we submit that it does not affect the conclusion of the Court. However, respondents are one hundred per cent wrong in claiming that the Banco-Caldwell deal was consummated; and in criticizing the Court's statement that the deal was in process of negotiation at the time of failure. The District Court found as a fact that the Banco-Caldwell deal was not "consummated,'" R. 1, p. 262. The Banco-Caldwell contract distinctly provided that the deal would not be consummated until an audit was made. No audit was ever made or even started. It is true that some Banco stock was issued to Caldwell when the contract was signed. Caldwell returned half of this stock before the failure. No dividends were ever paid on the stock that Caldwell retained. The evidence proves conclusively that the Caldwell deal was never consummated. The facts of the Caldwell deal are presented in our gray cover brief entitled "Supplemental Record References Re Caldwell."

The third point raised in respondents' brief on rehearing, p. 15, relates to the alleged secret mental processes of defendants with respect to the unperformed purposes of Banco which are directly disproved by the written statements referred to by the Court. Similar statements were also filed with the Louisville Stock Exchange, where most of the defendants reside. (Ex. 71, Vol. 4, p. 1695.)

The third point is not based on any alleged error of fact. It is the same argument previously advanced on pages 11 to 19 of respondents' "Supplemental Brief on Reargument of the Case." Our reply thereto will be found in our white cover "Reply to Supplemental Brief," pp. 7-9, and in our gray cover "Supplemental Record References Re Caldwell," pp. 6-8.

BRIEF OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY AS AMICUS CURIAE.

Comes now, Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, and by leave of Court first had and obtained, respectfully submits his brief as amicus curiae, in support of the petition for writ of certiorari filed by A. M. Anderson, Receiver of The National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville, Kentucky, in the above entitled cause.

I.

Foreword.

Citation of the opinions below, statement concerning the jurisdiction of the Court to issue the writ of certiorari, specification of errors, summary of the facts, and statement of the questions presented and the reasons relied on for allowance of the writ, have been fully covered in the petition filed by the Receiver, and consequently reference is here made to the same in the interest of avoiding repetition.

II.

Reasons Urged by the Comptroller of the Currency in Support of the Receiver's Petition for Writ of Certiorari.

(a) The National Bank of Kentucky, of Louisville, failed November 17, 1930. Its depositors have received dividends to date of 77 per cent. This alone evidences the fact that it had sustained heavy losses. It had been severely criticized in the National Bank Examiners' reports for several years. Copies of these reports were regularly sent to the Board of Directors of the bank. Letters from a Deputy Comptroller of the Currency were also sent to the Board of Directors with reference to the criticism of the Examiners. Copies of such letters and copies of the Examiners' reports will be found in the record in this case. (Exhibits 33-1 to 33-25, pp. 1275 to 1305). The letter of Deputy Comptroller Stearns, addressed to the directors, dated June 30, 1927, with reference to an examination completed on May 12, 1927, three years before the bank failed, is typical, and reads in part as follows:

> "In addition to the estimated losses of $137,775, which it is understood are to be charged off on June 30, the bank is carrying an excessive amount of slow and doubtful assets amounting to $5,820,271, and $601,618, respectively, which have been steadily increasing, in spite of the fact that a substantial amoun of losses has been charged off following each examination in the past two years. Overdue paper is also excessive in amount, the aggregate being $2,172,827, and includes statutory bad debts of $968,658. The examiner has listed on the sheets following Page 6, a long list of large lines and other loans especially mentioned, which in his opinion require reduction, security, or supporting credit information. He has also listed several loans in excess of the legal limit, and a number of unwarranted overdrafts and cash items.

"It is evident that these matters have not been receiving sufficient attention, and it is urged that you review the report at your next board meeting, and take the necessary remedial measures."

If the owners of a national bank, in the condition indicated above, can under the law retain all the advantages of real ownership and at the same time evade a statutory individual liability simply by the transfer of bank shares for holding company shares, it would seem, on principle, that a way is open similarly to circumvent other provisions of law. Therefore, while the question presented in this case, as set forth in the petition of the receiver, primarily concerns the substantial rights of thirty thousand depositors of the National Bank of Kentucky, it also vitally concerns the Comptroller of the Currency in the administration of the National Bank Act with respect to bank stock holding companies. The domination of a number of state and national banks located in different communities and states through a bank stock holding company presents a very complicated problem of supervision and it is submitted that the matters and issues involved in this case are of general public interest and come within the class of cases indicated by the rules to be appropriate for review.

(b) An examination of the decided cases seems to indicate that this Court has not had occasion directly to consider the question of the liability of a bank stock holding company shareholder with respect to an assessment levied upon the bank shares. Except in the instant case, Federal, District, and Appellate Courts have uniformly held the holding company shareholders liable for the bank assessment. This Court has several times denied certiorari in such cases. We have found no case, except the one presented here, where the holding company shareholders escaped such a liability. The decision of the Court of Appeals in the instant case seems to be in direct conflict with similar decisions in other circuits. This becomes important because of the fact that identical cases to the case at bar are pending in other circuits awaiting the outcome of this case.

III.

CONCLUSION.

The Comptroller of the Currency therefore earnestly urges this Honorable Court to grant the petition for certiorari filed by the Receiver in the instant case.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN F. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Preston Delano,
Comptroller of the Currency.

Conclusion 22

The Receiver in no way "pulled his punches" in characterizing the iniquity of Banco. Receiver says, in his Brief (p. 62) that Banco was "unlawful" a "corporate instrumentality of the shareholders" of National Bank of Kentucky—"organized to support a failing National bank"—"never qualified" to do business in Kentucky, and "expressly forbidden by Kentucky law," etc., etc. (p. 28) "a creature born out of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky"; that (p. 35) "its stockholders and their agents, the officers and directors, are responsible"; that the condition of the Nation Bank of Kentucky progressed from bad to worse through the following steps—(p. iii) "unhealthy on April 23, 1927"—"no improvement in its condition during the next Six Months"—"getting worse" on March 9, 1928—"very bad" on October 13, 1928—when Banco was promoted and organized, it was in a "precarious condition"; that (p. 6) "knowing" this condition the stockholders of National Bank of Kentucky "evolved the scheme" of Banco, and mislabeled the stock "non-assessable," through which they were "plainly and intentionally attempting to evade" the United States Statutes; that by reason thereof they are "not entitled" "in equity and good conscience thus to shield themselves" by Banco.

The law of "equity and good conscience," so correctly invoked by the Receiver in this case, entitles Class B Stockholders and defendants, who lost money to the Bank, which used the said money for the Bank's purposes, to participate like the Bank's other creditors in the Bank's assets.

BRIEF FOR APPELLEES AND CROSS-APPELLANTS, SUSIE E. TELLMAN, EMMA BISCHOFF, AND OTHER CLASS B DEFENDANTS SIMILARLY SITUATED.

May it please the Court:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

This Court recently entered an order herein giving to Mrs. Susie E. Tellman, et al., cross-appellants in the lower Court, who paid for part of the record there, and which was brought up to this Court, the right to file this their brief herein.

If this Court should affirm the judgment of the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals, then this brief can be disregarded. If, however, this Court reverses the lower Court and holds that Banco was, as Receiver alleged in his bill and contended during the trial, and thus concludes in his brief (p. 62) "unlawful" a "corporate instrumentality of the shareholders" of National Bank of Kentucky—"organized to support a failing National bank"—"never qualified" to do business in Kentucky, and "expressly forbidden by Kentucky law," etc., etc., then the innocent Class B stockholders, who bought stock in said outlaw corporation and agency of the Bank, have a just claim for the return of their money paid into Banco and used by the Bank for its own purposes, and for furthering its own ends.

BRIEF OF THE ARGUMENT.

1. There Would Result a Paradox if Receiver Would Be Permitted to Recover Herein From Stockholders of Banco on the Ground of Banco's Illegality, and if, at the Same Time, Innocent Class B Stockholders, Would Not Be Permitted to Recover on the Same Ground the Money They Put Into Banco.

If Banco, by reason of the alleged illegality and constructive fraud, etc., did not come into sufficient and substantial existence, as to legality, so as to insulate its promoters, it also did not come into a sufficient and substantial existence, as to legality, so as to support a sale of its stock to innocent purchasers, upon the inconsistent hypothesis that it was a legal "honest to goodness" independent substantial corporate entity.

If Banco was a fraudulent or sham or masquerade corporate device, as the Receiver charges it to have been, in order to enable the Bank to engage in unlawful acts, surely Banco could not at the same time be so substantial and virtuous as to be the basis of taking money from innocent and duped outsiders to whom its fraudulent stock was sold.

Without, of course, casting any personal aspersions on the Receiver, whose integrity and diligence are unquestioned, yet we respectfully submit that the Receiver attempts herein to blow both hot and cold. He desires Banco to be meat for him, yet poison for others. He characterizes Banco as unspeakably foul, then in the same breath he attempts to embrace it to his bosom. He condemns Banco in unmeasured terms, only to immediately thereafter seek to use and appropriate it for his own advantage. He discards Banco as a counterfeit, then tries to pass it off on others as genuine and thereby seeks to profit from it. The law does not permit any legal magician, by the mere wave of a magic wand, to thus accomplish such an impossible feat and to thus wreak deadly havoc upon thousands of innocent purchasers of Banco stock. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

2. "Equity and Good Conscience"—the Yardstick in This Case.

The Receiver has properly invoked equity, in this case, to quote from his Bill, for "winding up the affairs" of the Bank (R. 57). He appropriately asks for a decree in accordance with "equity and good conscience," which he repeats in his Bill (R. 69), and Prayer (R. 74). Anything short of this position by the Receiver would have been inconsistent with the law and the faithful Receiver he has been.

The particular "occurrence or transaction," which the Receiver asks the Court to examine and make a decree concerning is the legal status of those who held stock in the corporation—BancoKentucky.

It is fundamental that equity once taking jurisdiction will not stop at part-way measures, but will do absolute, full and complete justice to all the parties, even though the Court may have to do so on its own initiative.

3. The Equities in the Case, If the Receiver's Charges Should Be Upheld.

If, as the Receiver charges, Banco was the illegal and constructively fraudulent (R. I. 220) agency and instrumentality of the National Bank of Kentucky and its organizing officers, then "equity and good conscience" requires that this Court of Equity recognize that the nearly 3,000 Banco stockholder defendants herein fall into two classes, viz.:

Class A—Promoters, organizers, planners and launchers of Banco, made up of National Bank of Kentucky's officers, directors and stockholders, who held 95% of the Bank Stock, and who exchanged their Bank Stock into Banco Stock, and who retained and exercised absolute dominion over Banco.

Class B—Purchasers for cash of Banco Stock, made up of the outside public, who had nothing to do with the organizing of Banco, and who did not own any National Bank of Kentucky Stock, and who did not exchange any of said Bank Stock for Banco Stock, and none of whose money, which was paid for Banco Stock, ever went to buy any of the National Bank of Kentucky Stock (for Banco never purchased a share of National Bank of Kentucky Stock), and who had nothing to do with the management and operation of Banco.

and that, in administering "equity and good conscience," this Court should adjudge that, under the facts and circumstances of this case, Class B defendants have equities, which entitle them herein to affirmative relief, viz., the recovery of the money they were induced to invest in this legally condemned corporation (in the event this Court should hold it to have been such a corporation).

4. Statement as to Susie E. Tellman, Emma Bischoff Et Al., of Class B Group of Defendants.

The record shows that Susie Tellman, Emma Bischoff and P. A. Gaertner belong to Class B stockholders; that neither of them owned any National Bank of Kentucky Stock, nor any Trustees Participation Certificates in Bank Stock, which were exchanged into Banco Stock; that they bought their Banco Stock for cash, and that they were not the promoters, organizers, planners or launchers of Banco, and had nothing whatever to do with its management or operation.

Mrs. Susie E. Tellman is a housewife and Emma Bischoff, who died since this action was filed, was a stenographer and clerk, each of whom invested their savings of $2,500.00 cash in Banco Stock. As "Miss Emma" was for many years the stenographer of one of the writers of this brief (in fact the first one he had when he was admitted to the bar), it can be seen that his real personal interest was easily enlisted for her and for those in similar position with her.

"When this action was filed against Tellman and Bischoff and others, for approximately $232.00, with interest, against each of them, and against other of the Class B stockholders, for comparatively small amounts, it was apparent that the record would be so voluminous and expensive as to be absolutely prohibitive for Tellman, et al., Class B Stockholders, to employ and adequately pay counsel to perform the necessary work involved for a full and complete investigation into the affairs of Banco, in the stock of which these persons had been induced to invest. When we, therefore, were besought by Tellman and Bischoff to protect their interests as best we could, we recognized that about all we could do would be to merely watch the proceedings, which were to be so voluminous and expensive, and then, in a more or less general way, point out to the Court the equities, which were developed in the record in favor of these Class B defendants, and pass up to the Court the task of working out "equity and good conscience" to them. It is out of this approach and relationship that we respectfully write this brief, believing that the record is such as to cause the Court to decree that such equities exist herein in favor of the Class B defendants as to entitle Class B defendants to affirmative relief in the event any recovery is decreed herein for the Receiver.

5. Equities and Claims, Applicable to One Defendant Herein Are Applicable to All Similarly Situated.

In this case, with several thousand defendants, the case was practiced below in accordance with the following portion of the lower Court's order of October 31, 1939:

> "All pleadings and motions heretofore filed by any defendant, which relate to the merits of the case in general and not to some special fact or decision applicable to the particular defendant filing such pleadings, shall inure to the benefit of all defendants."

6. Claims and Counterclaims of Defendants Against the Bank, Growing Out of the Transaction Involved in the Action Are To Be Adjudicated by the Court, and If Allowed, a Pro Rata Distribution of Assets in Receiver's Hands Is To Be Made to Such Claimants, Along With Claimants Who Were Depositors in the Bank.

When this action was filed in February, 1936, the above proposition of law was unsettled, but later on, April 26, 1937, the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision in a bank receivership case, in which the Supreme Court held that a person, who had bought stock through misrepresentations of the bank's affiliate, had a just claim against the Receiver of the bank, which claim would participate on a pro rata basis with other claimants basing their claim upon money on deposit in the bank at the time it closed. This was the case of Oppenheimer v. Harriman National Bank & Trust Company and Conservator of Harriman Bank and Trust Company, 301 U. S. 206, 81 L. Ed. 1042; 57 S. Ct. 719, decided April 26, 1937. This Court has had occasion to follow the above Supreme Court decision on the procedural or jurisdictional question in a very recent case of Lucking v. Schram (1941), 117 F. (2d) 160, affirming Schram v. Lucking (1940), Eastern District of Michigan, 31 F. Supp. 749. The lower Court said:

> "Admittedly in the Oppenheimer case there was payment of the assessment before suit against the Bank was instituted but the decision does not determine that two suits were necessary, and the trend of new rules and Courts in general is to discourage separate actions tending towards multiplicity of suits and is now rather partial towards combining in one litigation, wherever possible, for determination, the rights of all parties in one action in one subject matter or arising out of one transaction. This is not only the spirit of Rule 13, but it is also the spirit and intention of Rule 14, where extra parties who might be affected by or have some rights in the litigation are permitted to be joined and brought into the same action, even where jurisdictionally they could not originally have been made defendants in Federal Court. * * * The parties being present, this Court determined that the only logical and sensible thing to do was to proceed with a hearing on the merits of defendant's counterclaim. * * *. This court can see no logic in compelling defendants to start a separate action against plaintiff when plaintiff has already brought them into court."

This case was affirmed in 117 F. (2d) 160 (1941), by the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. However, the counterclaim was held to be illegal in a decision upon its merits. The counterclaim in that case was not in any way similar to the counterclaim asserted herein by Banco's Class B Stockholders. In that case the counterclaim was attempted not by an innocent Class B Stockholder who had bought for cash his stock, but by a Class A Stockholder who had exchanged Bank Stock for the holding company stock, etc.

7. If This Court Should Hold, After Considering the Great Mass of Testimony in This Case, that Receiver Has Made Out Its Case that Banco Was Illegal and Constructively Fraudulent, Then Innocent Class B Stockholders, Such as Tellman, Et Al., Have a Just Claim Against the Bank and Its Assets in the Hands of the Receiver, for Recovery for the Amount They Paid for Said Worthless Banco Stock.

If Banco should be held to be the illegal, etc., entity, which—

1. Receiver charges in his Bill (R. I. 66-69);
2. Receiver charges in his request for Findings Nos. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 (R. I. 184-187) and Nos. 28, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34 (R. I. 192-195 and Nos. 57, 58 (R. I. 212) (R. I. 120);
3. Which Receiver charges in his Brief on this appeal, particularly in footnote on page 105 of Receiver's Brief, then Tellman, et al., Class B Stockholders, have a just claim against the Bank's assets for the money they paid for said worthless stock, which claim is based on the following:

1. That illegal Banco was organized and attempted to be launched by officers and directors of the National Bank of Kentucky, and thereafter was the Bank's child and agency, completely dominated and under the dominion of the Bank, which used Banco's assets for the Bank's own purposes.

2. The statement in Banco's Articles of Incorporation that "VIII, the private property of the stockholders shall not be subject to the payment of any corporate debts whatever."

3. The statement on Banco's Certificates of Stock that the Stock was "full paid and non-assessable."

8. The Above Statements Constituted Misrepresenting and Misbranding of the Article Sold, Measured by the Legal Yardstick, Well Set Out as Follows.

> "Goods are misbranded if they bear any statement which will deceive or mislead any purchasers who are of normal capacity and who use that capacity in a common sense way."
>
> United States v. Two Cases of Chloro-Naphtholeum Disinfectant, 217 Fed. 477, 484.

That the above were material statements of fact, not only admitted but charged by the Receiver in Paragraph XVI of his Bill (R. I. 68-69), is seen from the following portion of Receiver's Bill:

> "The holders of the Trustees Participation Certificates who organized the BancoKentucky Company as a holding corporation for their bank stock, well knowing that said bank stock was subject to the individual liability of shareholders of national banks, imposed by the Acts of Congress, Sections 5151 and 5234 of the Revised Statutes of the United States and knowing that Bank stock of state banking institutions was subject to individual liability imposed by state laws, nevertheless, in the organization of the said BancoKentucky Company, intentionally undertook to evade the provisions of said sections of the Acts of Congress by deliberately omitting from the Articles of Incorporation any provision for the payment of the liability upon national and state bank stocks provided by the laws of the United States, the Commonwealth of Kentucky and other states, and deliberately and intentionally sought to evade said liability by including the Articles of Incorporation of Banco-Kentucky Company the following language:

> 'VIII. The private property of the stockholders shall not be subject to the payment of corporate debts to any extent whatever,' and by printing in its certificates of stock the words 'full-paid and non-assessable,' and in so attempting to evade such assessment liability perpetrated a fraud upon the depositors and creditors of the National Bank of Kentucky for whose benefit this action is brought."

Also in the opening statement before the trial, by Judge Marx, for the Receiver, we find the Receiver laying great stress on these "misrepresentations" in the following (R. II. 8):

> "Mr. Marx: Well, that is what they did. Now, how did they do it? They undertook to organize a general corporation under the laws of the State of Delaware, and almost the first article that they wrote into that corporation charter was—these men sitting as bank directors, these men who were the shareholders of that bank, these men who knew that they were subject to double liability, wrote into that article of incorporation, 'The personal property of the shareholders thereof shall be exempt from the payment of its debts,' and then, on top of that, they caused stock certificates in the company to be printed, and put on the face of them 'fully paid and non-assessable.''

Throughout the taking of evidence and all through the trial the Court will see how the Receiver laid emphasis on the above statements in Banco's Articles of Incorporation and Certificates of Stock.

If these "misstatements" and "misrepresentations" can be any basis of Receiver's claim against Class A defendants, surely they are equally sufficient in "equity and good conscience" as a basis of Class B defendant's claim to remedy the wrong done them.

9. The Receipt of Banco Dividends Has No Adverse Effect on the Right of Class B Stockholders to Recover Out of Bank Assets, Except Probably to Give Credits for Dividends Received.

Receiver's counsel attempt to fasten the double liability, applying to Bank stock, upon Class B stockholders of Banco, upon the ground that these stockholders received some dividends on Banco stock, and that some of the money, which paid these dividends could be traced as having come from dividends, which Banco received on the National Bank of Kentucky stock. Receiver's counsel argue that these stockholders knew, or should have known, the source from which their dividends came, and that as a result, this fastens double liability upon the stockholders, in spite of the fact that the said stockholders themselves, never owned a share of stock of the said Bank, and that not a cent of money, which they paid into Banco, was ever used by Banco to buy a single share of stock in said Bank.

The only possible effect the receipt of such dividends could have upon a stockholder so receiving them, would be to make such stockholder liable for a return of any dividends illegally declared. Receiver's counsel do not contend that the dividends were illegally declared, and do not ask for any return based upon any such alleged illegal declaring of same. They merely attempt, through some species of reasoning, to contend that the receipt of such dividends, which were small, would have the effect of making the recipients liable not for the dividends, but doubly liable for Bank stock, which the recipients never owned, and for which none of their money ever went to buy.

That the Receiver is wrong in this contention is seen by the opinion of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, in the case decided on January 9, 1939, Nettles v. Childs, 100 F. (2d) 952, which case was a sequel to the case of Nettles v. Rhett, cited by the Receiver. In the Childs case, supra, the Court said:

> "Four semi-annual dividends of 3¼% each were paid the preferred stock during 1930 and 1931. The payments were made out of funds received by the holding company as dividends on the bank stock, which it held. The defendants in the pending case, however, had no knowledge at the time of the receipt of these dividends that the earnings of the company were derived from bank stock, and did not suspect that such was the case until after the failure of the company."

The Court discarded the contention that the receipt of such dividends fastens liability on stockholders of the holding company, saying:

"The acceptance of dividends by the defendants does not impair their defense. They had no knowledge of the illegal business of the holding company until long after the dividends were received; and without knowledge, there could be no ratification or acceptance on their part of the illegal acts of the corporation. The present suit does not seek a recovery of the amount of the dividends received, but a much greater sum equal to the par value of the shares as an extra statutory liability. It was held in McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397, 19 S. Ct. 743, 43 L. Ed. 1022, that dividends paid by a solvent national bank to a stockholder entirely out of capital are not recoverable if the stockholder receiving them acted in good faith. A federal statute, 12 U. S. C. A., §56, forbade any national bank during the continuance of its banking operations to withdraw or permit to be withdrawn in the form of dividends or otherwise, any portion of its capital; but the court held that a shareholder who in good faith receives a dividend paid out of capital could not be said to have participated in the withdrawal of capital."

Any point the Receiver might attempt to make that Class B stockholders of Banco must have known that the four dividends of 20c per share each which they received from Banco could be traced to dividends which Banco received from National Bank of Kentucky stock, is only an unjustifiable inference and assumption. No proof whatever shows this knowledge and it cannot be assumed. And even bare knowledge would not be sufficient in "equity and good conscience" to hold them doubly liable when not a cent of their money nor Banco's money ever went into National Bank of Kentucky Stock.

10. The Finances of the Case Make Easily Possible the Working Out the Mechanics of Class B's Equities, Should Any Recovery for the Receiver Be Decreed Herein.

It is indeed fortunate that should the Court hold the Receiver as entitled to any recovery herein, then there will be sufficient money to pay Class B defendants their pro rata distribution, as seen from the following facts and figures:

THE AMOUNT PAID BY CLASS B DEFENDANTS WAS $5,397,500.00.

Total amount paid in cash into Banco was $9,869,650
(White, A. 373, p. 470)

Holders of Bank & Trust Co. participating certificates paid in cash for Banco stock 4,471,950
(Shuck, p. 885)

Leaving amount put up by outside public or Class B defendants $5,397,500

Class B defendants have valid and just claims against the Bank's assets for $5,397,500.00, which amount they invested in illegal Banco, a fraudulent and illegal Company, promoted and attempted to be launched by the Bank and its officers, directors and stockholders.

From this should be deducted four dividends of 20c per share, or a total dividend of $80.00 on each 100 shares of Banco stock, which was sold for $25.00, or a total of $2,500.00. These dividends totalling $80.00, on stock costing $2,500.00, means the total dividends paid are equivalent to 3.2 percent on the total cost.

Total amount paid by Class B defendants $5,397,500.00

Less total dividends paid (equivalent of 3.2 percent on $5,397,500.00) 172,720.00

Net amount due Class B defendants . . $5,224,780.00

Class B defendants and claimants are entitled to participate in the distribution of the Bank's assets, and to receive a distribution dividend of 77 percent, the amount heretofore paid to other of Bank's creditors. This 77 percent distribution on $5,224,780.00 to Class B defendants would amount to.....$4,023,080.00.

The total assessment against the Bank's stockholders was $4,000,000.00 with interest, approximating.....$6,160,000.00, which should be the total amount apportioned against Class A defendants.

The actual collection to be realized,
Figured at 90 percent would be.....$5,444,000.00
Figured at 85 percent would be.....$5,236,000.00
Figured at 80 percent would be.....$4,928,000.00.

Only $4,023,080.00 is needed to make Class B claimants receive 77 percent and to be equal to other claimants, who have heretofore received 77 percent distribution. The balance remaining, after 77 percent distribution to Class B defendants and claimants, would be distributed to all of those to whom the Bank was under obligation, including Class B defendants.

11. Tellman, Et Al., by Proper Pleadings in the Case, Invoked for Themselves and All Other Class B Defendants Similarly Situated, an Equitable Claim Against the Bank's Assets in the Hands of Receiver Along With Other Claims Against The Bank for Their Loss Occasioned by Purchase of Misrepresented and Misbranded Stock in Illegal Banco.

These pleadings are an answer and amended answer, counterclaim and cross-action of Tellman, et al. (R. 158-168, Rec., Vol. 1), the latter of which was filed on November 1, 1938. After this filing, the Receiver did not make any effort to file any reply until November 15, 1939,—over a year later. In the meantime the case had stood for trial, in the spring of 1939, for an extended period of time and much testimony and proof had been taken and the taking of testimony closed. The case was then set for the fall, for briefs and final arguments. During the summer the Receiver and other defendants, as well as Tellman, et al., filed and exchanged briefs with each other and the case was set to November 15, 1939, for oral arguments. On this late day the Receiver tendered and offered to file a Reply to Tellman's, et al., pleading filed over a year before, to-wit, on November 1, 1938, to which filing Tellman objected, but the Court allowed the pleading to be filed. Tellman's counsel proceeded, however, to argue the case, addressing themselves to the points of law involved, rather than any points of fact, except the admitted ones, and the whole case was submitted.

The lower Court held that Banco was a legitimate corporate entity and dismissed Receiver's claim. It was, therefore, unnecessary for the lower Court to consider Tellman, et al. contention. This is also what happened in the Court of Appeals.

In Receiver's brief in the Court of Appeals, it was contended that Tellman, et al.'s claim was barred by limitation. To this Tellman, et al. answer that their claim grows out of the same transaction and subject-matter on which Receiver's claim is based, and the law is that so long as the main action by plaintiff is timely, then defendant's claim is not barred by limitation. This was specifically decided by the Supreme Court in Bull v. U. S. (1935), 295 U. S. 247, 79 L. Ed. 1421, wherein the Supreme Court, speaking unanimously, through Justice Roberts said that "such a defense is never barred by the Statute of Limitations so long as the main action itself is timely." See also Stone v. White. (1937), 301 U. S. 532, 57 S. Ct. 851, and Aultman & Taylor v. Meade (1905), 121 Ky. 241, 89 S. W. 137.

We can conceive of the decision in this upper Court being such that it would be necessary to remand the case, leaving open the determination of certain questions by proof which the upper Court might direct the lower Court to take or have the Master take. In any event, we feel that as this case has been pending now for so many years, this Court should, on these appeals, consider all the questions of law raised by way of defense and counterclaim, so as to operate as a guide to the lower Court in the event this case should be reversed and remanded for "further proceedings," etc.

RELIEF ASKED OF THIS COURT BY CLASS B DEFENDANTS.

Class B Stockholders and defendants respectively ask this Court, in the event it should hold that the Receiver is entitled to any recovery herein, to also hold that "equity and good conscience" entitles Class B defendants to a decision that the cross-appeal of Tellman, et al., for Class B Stockholders, from so much of the judgment below as dismissed their counterclaim, be sustained on the following ground:

> That Class B Stockholders, on so much of their answer as amended, as was uncontroverted up until months after the evidence had all been taken in the case and the briefs prepared and exchanged, and the case was in the process of argument, have a claim against the assets of the National Bank of Kentucky, in the hands of the Receiver, from which assets they are entitled to a pro rata distribution, just like the other creditors of the Bank, for the amount of money which they invested in Banco, the illegal agency of the Bank, which money, through the Bank's officers dominated Banco, was appropriated for the Bank's use, and squandered in wild, illegal transactions.

CONCLUSION.

The Receiver in no way "pulled his punches" in characterizing the iniquity of Banco. Receiver says, in his Brief (p. 62), that Banco was "unlawful" a "corporate instrumentality of the shareholders" of National Bank of Kentucky—"organized to support a failing National bank"—"never qualified" to do business in Kentucky, and "expressly forbidden by Kentucky law," etc., etc. (p. 28)—"a creature born out of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Kentucky"; that (p. 35) "its stockholders and their agents, the officers and directors, are responsible"; that the condition of the National Bank of Kentucky progressed from bad to worse through the following steps—(p. iii) "unhealthy on April 23, 1927" "no improvements in its condition during the next Six Months"—"getting worse" on March 9, 1928—"very bad" on October 13, 1928—when Banco was promoted and organized it was in a "precarious condition"; that (p. 6) "knowing" this condition the stockholders of National Bank of Kentucky "evolved the scheme" of Banco, and mislabeled the stock "non-assessable," through which they were "plainly and intentionally attempting to evade" the United States Statutes; that by reason thereof they are "not entitled" "in equity and good conscience thus to shield themselves" by Banco.

The law of "equity and good conscience," so correctly invoked by the Receiver in this case, entitles Class B Stockholders and defendants, who lost money to the Bank, which used the said money for the Bank's purposes, to participate like the Bank's other creditors in the Bank's assets, as decided in the recent case of the Supreme Court of the United States in Oppenheimer v. Harriman National Bank & Trust Company and Conservator of Harriman Bank and Trust Company, 301 U. S. 206, 81 L. Ed. 1042, 57 S. Ct. 719, decided April 26, 1937.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY M. JOHNSON,
Attorney for Susie Tellman, Emma Bischoff and other similarly situated Class B Defendants.

P. 23.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

No. 3.—October Term, 1943.

A. M. Anderson, Receiver of National Bank of Kentucky, of Louisville, Petitioner, vs.

Katherine Kirkpatrick Abbott, Administratrix with the Will Annexed of the Estate of David J. Abbott, Deceased, et al.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

[March 6, 1944.]

Mr. Justice Douglas delivered the opinion of the Court.

The primary question in this case is whether on these facts shareholders of a bank-stock holding company are liable under § 23 of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 U. S. C. § 64, and § 12 of the National Bank Act, 12 U. S. C. § 63, for an assessment on shares of a national bank in the portfolio of the holding company.

The essential facts[1] may be briefly stated.

Banco Kentucky Company was organized under the laws of Delaware in July, 1929. It had broad charter powers in the field of finance. It was organized by the management of the National Bank of Kentucky and of the Louisville Trust Company—banking houses doing business at Louisville. Banco perfected the desired alliance between them by acquiring most of their shares[2] in exchange for its shares. The Bank, the Trust Company, and Banco each had the same directors and certain common officers. Some of the shareholders who made the exchange also purchased additional shares of Banco stock at $25 per share. Banco stock was also sold at that price on the market to those who did not

[1] Further details concerning the financial transactions indirectly involved in this litigation may be found in Atherton v. Anderson, 86 F. 2d 518, 99 F. 2d 883; Banco Kentucky's Receiver v. Louisville Trust Co.'s Receiver, 263 Ky. 155.

[2] The shares of the Bank and the Trust Company had been earlier transferred to trustees who issued Trustees' Participation Certificates. It was these certificates which Banco received from the shareholders of the two banks in exchange for its shares. The command which Banco had over the underlying shares is described in Laurent v. Anderson, 70 F. 2d 819.

own any shares in the Bank or the Trust Company. All told some $9,900,000 in cash was realized by Banco from the sale of its shares—about $6,000,000 of which was financed on loans from the Bank and from the Trust Company. Banco's stock certificates stated that the shares were "full-paid and non-assessable". Its certificate of incorporation provided that the stockholders' property should "not be subject to the payment of corporate debts to any extent whatever".

The closing date for the exchange of shares was September 19, 1929. Beginning about September 25, 1929, Banco acquired a majority stock interest in each of five banks in Kentucky and two banks in Ohio, and a minority stock interest in another bank in Kentucky. Of these eight banks, two were national. The shares of the state, as well as the national, banks in the group carried a double liability.[3] The price paid for the shares in these banks was about $11,500,000—of which some $6,500,000 was paid in cash and $5,000,000 in Banco's shares. Not all of Banco's funds were invested in bank shares. It acquired for $2,000,000 a $2,000,000 note of its president.[4] It purchased 625 shares of a life insurance company for $25,000 cash. It purchased and retired 106,000 of its own shares at a cost of over $2,300,000—some $275,000 less than Banco received for them. It received dividends of about $1,180,000 on the bank stocks owned by it and paid them out at once as dividends on its own shares. It borrowed $2,600,000 from a New York bank and paid back $1,000,000. With $600,000 of that loan it purchased from the Bank certain dubious assets[5]—a transaction which the Ken-

[3] See Ky. Rev. Stat. 1942, § 287.360; Ohio Code Ann. 1940, § 710-75. At or about the time of Banco's failure the shares in the other banks were sold or disposed of at rather nominal prices. It appears that the closing of the Bank was followed by heavy runs on these other banks; and the local interests in most of the cities where the banks were located were willing to support the banks to keep them open if Banco would surrender control. Banco, it seems, was also anxious to avoid double liability on those shares.

[4] The president of Banco was also president of the Bank. This note was acquired in November, 1929, from Wakefield & Co. It was secured by 60,000 shares of Banco stock and 22,500 shares of stock of Standard Oil of Kentucky. Nothing was ever paid on the note. Nothing was realized on the Banco stock. Some $440,000 was realized on the Standard Oil stock. In December 1930 the president of Banco and maker of the note filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He was discharged. Wakefield & Co. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors in 1931 and apparently no dividends have yet been paid its creditors.

tucky court later set aside. Banco Kentucky Co. v. National Bank of Ky., 281 Ky. 784. It was negotiating for the purchase of the shares of an investment banking house when that house, the Bank and the Trust Company failed. That was in November, 1930—a little more than a year after Banco began its financial career. In November, 1930 a receiver was appointed for the Bank and one for Banco. In February, 1931 the Comptroller of the Currency made an assessment on the shareholders of the Bank in the amount of $4,000,000 payable on or before April 1, 1931. And in March, 1931 the receiver of the Bank notified the stockholders of Banco that he had demanded payment of the assessment from the receiver of Banco and that he intended to proceed against them for collection of the assessment to the extent that he was unable to collect from Banco. In October, 1931 the receiver of the Bank brought an action against Banco as holder of substantially all of the Bank's shares. He obtained a judgment (Keyes v. American Life Ins. Co., 1 F. Supp. 512) which was affirmed on appeal. Laurent v. Anderson, 70 F. 2d 819. Some $90,000 was paid on that judgment. The receiver of the Bank thereupon brought this suit against those stockholders of Banco who resided in the Western District of Kentucky in which he seeks to recover from each his proportionate part of the balance of the assessment. Similar suits against other stockholders were brought in federal district courts in other states. The District Court, after a trial, dismissed the bill. 32 F. Supp. 328. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed that judgment. 127 F. 2d 696. The case is here on certiorari.

I.

We are met at the outset with the contention that the decision in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, holding Banco liable on the assessment, is res judicata of the present claim; and that petitioner by bringing that suit made an election which bars the present action. We do not agree. Either the record owner or the actual owner of shares of a national bank may be liable on the statutory assessment.[6] Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 58; Keyser v. Hetz, 133 U. S. 138, 149; Pauly v. State Loan & Trust Co., 165 U. S. 606; Lantry v. Wallace, 182 U. S. 536;

[6] Provisions for the termination of double liability on shares of national banks are contained in the Act of June 16, 1933, 48 Stat. 189, and the Act of August 23, 1935, 49 Stat. 708, 12 U. S. C. § 64a.

Ohio Valley Nat. Bk. v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162; Early v. Richardson, 280 U. S. 496; Forrest v. Jack, 294 U. S. 158. A receiver may sue both — partial satisfaction of the judgment against one being a pro tanto discharge of the other. Ericson v. Slomer, 94 F. 2d 437. And see Continental Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. O'Neil, 82 F. 2d 650. The basis of liability of each is different — apparent or titular ownership in one case, actual or beneficial ownership in the other. Hence the issues involved in each suit are not the same.[7] See Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Pelts, 123 F. 2d 503; Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Barrett, 131 F. 2d 745, 748. If the receiver were barred from proceeding against one because he had already proceeded against the other, creditors of banks would be deprived of the full benefits of these statutes. The wisdom of the receiver's first suit rather than the fixed statutory liability would be the measure of their protection. There is no justification for such an impairment of the statutory scheme. The rules of election applicable to suits on contracts made by agents of undisclosed principals (Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. v. Bennett, 73 F. 2d 387, 389) have been pressed upon us. But they have no application to suits to enforce a liability which has this statutory origin. Cf. Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 225.

II.

The District Court found, and the Circuit Court of Appeals agreed, that Banco was organized in good faith and was not a sham; that it was not organized for a fraudulent purpose or to conceal enterprises conducted for the benefit of the Bank; that it was not a mere holding company; that it was not formed as a means for avoiding double liability on the stock of the Bank; and that the soundness of the Bank and its ability to meet the obligations could not be questioned until after the formation of Banco. Some of these findings have been challenged. But we do not stop to examine the evidence. We accept those findings, as they were concurred in by two courts and no clear error is shown. Brewer Oil Co. v. United States, 260 U. S. 77, 86; Ala-

[7] It is true that the court in Laurent v. Anderson, supra, stated that Banco was "in every sense the true and beneficial owner" of the shares of the Bank. 70 F. 2d p. 824. But it is apparent from the opinion that the court was answering the contention that the trustees of the participation certificates were responsible for the assessment. Banco's defense was based on § 63 of the National Bank Act. It argued that under that section only funds in the hands of the trustees were liable. That argument was rejected by the court.

bama Power Co. v. Ickes, 302 U. S. 464, 477. We conclude, however, that the courts below erred in dismissing the bill.

It is clear by reason of Early v. Richardson, supra, that if a stockholder of the Bank had transferred his shares to his minor children, he would not have been relieved from liability for this assessment. And see Seabury v. Green, 294 U. S. 165. That follows because of the policy underlying these statutes. One who is legally irresponsible cannot be allowed to serve as an insulator from liability, whether that was the purpose or merely the effect of the arrangement. A father who transfers his shares to his minor children has not found a substitute for his liability. See Weston's Case, 5 Ch. App. 614. It does not matter that the transfer was in good faith, without purpose of evasion and at a time when the bank was solvent. Early v. Richardson, supra. The vice of the arrangement is found in the nature of the transferee and his relationship to the transferor. Cf. Nickalls v. Merry, 7 Eng. & Irish App. 530. The same result will at times obtain where the transferee is financially irresponsible. This does not mean that every stockholder of a national bank who sells his shares remains liable because his transferee turns out to be irresponsible or impecunious. It is clear that he does not. Earle v. Carson, 188 U. S. 42, 54-55. But where after the sale he retains through his transferee an investment position in the bank, including control, he cannot escape the statutory liability if his transferee does not have resources commensurate with the risks of those holdings. In such a case he remains liable as a "stockholder" or "shareholder" within the meaning of these statutes to the extent of his interest in the underlying shares of the bank. For he retains control and the other benefits of ownership without substituting in his stead any one who is responsible for the risks of the banking business. The law has been edging towards that result. See Hansen v. Agnew, 195 Wash. 354; Metropolitan Holding Co. v. Snyder, 79 F. 2d 263; Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. 2d 510; Nettles v. Rhett, 94 F. 2d 42. We think the result is necessary, lest the protection afforded by these double liability provisions be lost through transfers to impecunious or not fully responsible holding or operating companies whose stock is owned by the transferor. Whether the transfer is made in avoidance of the double liability as in Corker v. Soper, 58 F. 2d 190, or for business reasons which may be considered wholly legitimate, the result is the same. Depositors are deprived of the benefit of double liability in either event.

Thus it is no bar to the present suit that Banco was organized in good faith, that there was no fraudulent intent, that Banco was not a sham, that it was not a mere holding company, or that the shareholders of the Bank had no purpose of avoiding double liability. We are not concerned with any question of good intention. The question is whether the parties did what they intended to do and whether what they did contravened the policy of the law. By that test it is clear to us that the old stockholders of the Bank are liable. For they retained through Banco their former investment positions in the Bank, including control, and did not constitute Banco as an adequate financial substitute in their stead. Banco's asset position immediately after its sales of stock cannot be taken as the measure of its financial responsibility. Its liquid condition was fleeting; the raising of the cash was but an interim step in the planned evolution of Banco as a bank-stock holding company. It is the condition of Banco at the end of the promotion which is significant. Banco emerged as a bank-stock holding company. Technically it was not merely such a holding company as it had other interests and investments. But its main assets were stocks in banks, stocks which carried double liability. Its other assets—apart from the $25,000 of life insurance stock—were always highly suspect and dubious. In substance Banco as a going concern had no free assets which could possibly be said to constitute an adequate reserve against double liability on the bank stocks which it held. It was in no true sense comparable to an investment trust or holding company which holds bank stock in a diversified portfolio. If the small amount of life insurance stock be left out of account, the situation is in point of fact not materially different from the case where the only assets held were bank stocks carrying double liability. Such an arrangement, if successful, would allow stockholders of banks to retain all of the benefits of ownership without the double liability which Congress had prescribed. The only substitute which depositors of one bank would have for that double liability would be the stock in another bank carrying a like liability. The sensitiveness of one bank in the group to the disaster of another would likely mean that at the only time when double liability was needed the financial responsibility of the holding company as stockholder would be lacking. However that may be, the device used here can be so readily utilized in circumvention of the statutory policy of double liability that the stockholders of the holding company rather than the de-positors of the subsidiary banks must take the risk of the financial success of the undertaking.[8]

That is a basis of liability sufficiently broad to include also the stockholders of Banco who had not been stockholders of the Bank. As we have noted, many of them acquired their shares either for cash or for shares in other banks. It must be assumed that in making those purchases or effecting those exchanges they knew what kind of an enterprise Banco was. See Nettles v. Rhett, supra, pp. 48-49; Anderson v. Atkinson, 22 F. Supp. 853, 863. Circulars of the Chicago Stock Exchange, on which Banco's shares were listed, gave a plain indication of the nature of the enterprise.[9] So did circulars of dealers.[10] And there would not seem

[8] The history of bank-stock holding companies shows that their organisers were acutely aware of this problem and at times took steps to protect the depositors of the subsidiary banks on possible assessments on the bank stocks. One holding company is said to have kept "at all times an amount in cash or its equivalent equal to our aggregate stockholders' liability on the bank stocks owned by us." Branch, Chain, and Group Banking, Hearings under H. Res. 141, 71st Cong., 2d Sess. (1930) p. 1181. A similar method was for the holding company "to carry in its treasury a large reserve of readily marketable securities which may be liquidated in order to make good any shareholders' liability that may be imposed upon the holding company." Bonbright & Means, The Holding Company (1932), p. 331. Cf. Nineteenth Annual Report, Superintendent of Banks of California (1928), p. 21. Another method of safeguarding the depositors was to make express provision in the charter of the holding company that its stockholders were ratably liable for any statutory liability imposed on it by reason of its ownership of bank stocks. Branch, Chain, and Group Banking, op. cit., pp. 1042-1043; Barbour v. Thomas, 86 F. 2d 510, 513-514. Wisconsin provided for such a liability by statute. Wis. Stat. 1941, § 221.56.

[9] "The BancoKentucky Company was organized under the laws of the State of Delaware on July 16, 1929, with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares of $10 par value. The Company was organized for the purpose of owning a controlling interest in state and national banks located primarily in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana. Its charter gives it broad powers entitling it to engage in a wide range of investment and other activities.

"The BancoKentucky Company has acquired, through an exchange of stock, nearly 100% of the shares of the National Bank of Kentucky-Louisville Trust Company, and in addition its stockholders have subscribed to 480,000 shares of its stock for cash. This cash will be used for acquiring majority interests in other banks and for other corporate purposes."

In listing its shares on the Chicago Stock Exchange it gave the Exchange the following description of its business:

"(b) Primary purpose: To acquire control and operate Banks and Trust Companies.

(c) Nature of Business: This company has not engaged in the business of investing and reinvesting in a diversified list of securities of other corporations for revenue and profit, but has limited its activities to acquiring control of Banks and Trust Companies and the operation of same."

[10] Thus a circular of Blyth & Co. stated:

"The Banco Kentucky Company was recently formed to acquire and hold controlling interests in commercial banks throughout the Middle West.

to be any doubt that the old stockholders of the Bank were given at the time of the exchange a fair picture of the nature of the enterprise which Banco was about to launch. Some shareholders of Banco claim the right to rescind their purchases of its shares on the ground of misrepresentations in the sale. But whether or not such relief might be granted in some instances, it seems clear that Banco's stockholders are bound by the decisions of the directors which determined, within the scope of the corporate charter, the kind and quality of the corporate undertaking. As was stated in Christopher v. Brusselback, 302 U. S. 500, 503, "A stockholder is so far an integral part of the corporation of which he is a member, that he may be bound and his rights foreclosed by authorized corporate action taken without his knowledge or participation. Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, 58." And see Pink v. A. A. A. Highway Express, 314 U. S. 201, 207, and cases cited. The legality of the investments of Banco's funds for the most part is not challenged. It must be assumed that they were not ultra vires. They fall indeed into the category of acts of directors which normally cannot be challenged by stockholders. Cook, Corporations (8th ed.) § 684. These principles, basic in general corporation law, are relevant here as indicating that the stockholders of Banco cannot escape responsibility for the inadequacy of Banco's resources merely because the choice of its investments was made by the officers and directors—acts in which the stockholders did not participate and of which perhaps they had no actual knowledge. The fact that they may have claims against an officer or director for mismanagement does not relieve them from liability to the depositors of the subsidiary banks. Cf. Scott v. DeWeese, 181 U. S. 202, 213; Lantry v. Wallace, 182 U. S. 536, 548-554.

Normally the corporation is an insulator from liability on claims of creditors. The fact that incorporation was desired in order to

By charter, broad powers are conferred upon the Company, so that all types of operations in the financial field are permitted but no investments are contemplated other than controlling interests in financial institutions.

"Upon completion of present transactions the Company will control the National Bank of Kentucky, organized in 1834, the Louisville National Bank and Trust Co., organized 1884 as Louisville Trust Company, both of Louisville, Ky., the Pearl Market Bank & Trust Co., organized 1907, and the Brighton Bank & Trust Co., organized 1898, both of Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, organized 1906, of Covington, Ky. In addition, the Company has funds of approximately $6,000,000, which are expected to be used for the acquiring of additional banking institutions."

obtain limited liability does not defeat that purpose. Elenkrieg v. Siebrecht, 238 N. Y. 254. See 7 Harv. Bus. Rev. 496. Limited liability is the rule not the exception; and on that assumption large undertakings are rested, vast enterprises are launched, and huge sums of capital attracted. But there are occasions when the limited liability sought to be obtained through the corporation will be qualified or denied. Mr. Justice Cardozo stated that a surrender of that principle of limited liability would be made "when the sacrifice is essential to the end that some accepted public policy may be defended or upheld." Berkey v. Third Ave. Ry. Co., 244 N. Y. 84, 95, United States v. Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit Co., 142 Fed. 247. See Powell, Parent & Subsidiary Corporations (1931) pp. 77-81. The cases of fraud make up part of that exception. Linn & Lane Timber Co. v. United States, 236 U. S. 574; Rice v. Sanger, 27 Ariz. 15; Donovan v. Purtell, 216 Ill. 629, 640; George v. Rollins, 176 Mich. 144; Higgins v. California, P. & A. Co., 147 Calif. 363. But they do not exhaust it. An obvious inadequacy of capital, measured by the nature and magnitude of the corporate undertaking, has frequently been an important factor in cases denying stockholders their defense of limited liability. Luckenbach S. S. Co. v. Grace & Co., 267 Fed. 676, 681; Oriental Inv. Co. v. Barclay, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 543, 559, 64 S. W. 80, 88. And see Weisser v. Mursam Shoe Corp., 127 F. 2d 344. Cf. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295, 310; Albert Richards Co. v. Mayfair, Inc., 287 Mass. 280, 288; Erickson v. Minnesota & Ontario Power Co., 134 Minn. 209. That rule has been invoked even in absence of a legislative policy which undercapitalization would defeat. It becomes more important in a situation such as the present one where the statutory policy of double liability will be defeated if impecunious bank-stock holding companies are allowed to be interposed as non-conductors of liability. It has often been held that the interposition of a corporation will not be allowed to defeat a legislative policy, whether that was the aim or only the result of the arrangement. United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 220 U. S. 257; Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic & Commerce Assoc., 247 U. S. 490; United States v. Reading Co., 253 U. S. 26. The Court stated in Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic & Commerce Assn., supra, p. 501, that "the courts will not permit themselves to be blinded or deceived by mere forms or law" but will deal "with the substance of the transaction involved as if the corporate agency did not exist and as the justice of the case may require." We are dealing here with a principle of liability which is concerned with realities not forms. As we have said, the net practical effect of the organization and management of Banco was the same as though the shares of the Bank were held in trust for beneficiaries who were in point of substance its only owners. Those who acquired shares of Banco did not enter upon an enterprise distinct from the banking business. Their investment in Banco was in substance little more than an investment in the shares of the Bank. They were as much in the banking business as any stockholder of the Bank had ever been. And they continued in that business through Banco which as a going concern lacked assets adequate as a reserve against the contingent statutory liability. Its stockholders were in point of substance the only source of funds available to satisfy the assessments. For these reasons the old group of stockholders must be held to have retained and the new group of stockholders must be held to have acquired liability as stockholders of the Bank.

To allow this holding company device to succeed would be to put the policy of double liability at the mercy of corporation finance. The fact that Congress did not outlaw holding companies from the national bank field nor undertake to regulate them during the period of Banco's existence can hardly imply that Congress sanctioned their use to defeat the policy of double liability. It is true that Congress later addressed itself to this problem and in the Banking Act of 1933 (48 Stat. 186, 12 U. S. C. § 61) established certain controls over them. In general, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System was authorized to issue a voting permit entitling a holding company to vote the stock controlled by it on certain conditions. Apart from requirements for examination and non-affiliation with securities companies, § 19(a) and (e), certain standards for financial responsibility were established and holding companies seeking such permits were granted a specified period of time within which to meet those standards. Where the stockholders of the holding company were liable for the statutory liability, a specified reserve of readily marketable assets was required. § 19(c). Otherwise, the holding company was required to maintain free of any lien "readily marketable assets other than bank stock" in an amount equal to a larger percentage of the par value of the bank stocks owned. § 19(b). It is apparent that Congress in that Act protected its policy of double liability by prescribing one standard of financial responsibility for holding companies whose shares were assessable by their terms and another for those whose shares were non-assessable.[11] We need not stop to consider what would be the measure of liability in cases arising under that Act where there had been no compliance with it. But if that Act had been applicable to Banco and Banco had complied with it, Banco would then have met the standards of financial responsibility which Congress had prescribed as adequate for the depositors. Yet the fact that Congress later wrote specific standards into the law means no more than a recognition on its part of an evil and a fashioning by it of a specific remedy. It can hardly mean that Congress by its earlier silence had sanctioned the use of the holding company to defeat the protection which it had provided for depositors of national banks. The legislative policy which Congress had long announced was the policy of double liability. It is that policy with which we are here concerned. It is that policy, declared by Congress, which the judicial power may appropriately protect in the way we have indicated, in absence of a choice by Congress of another method.

It is of course true that Delaware created this corporation. But the question of liability for these assessments is a federal question. The policy underlying a federal statute may not be defeated by such an assertion of state power. Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 349; Seabury v. Green, supra. The spectre of unlimited liability for stockholders has been raised. But there is no cause for alarm. Barring conflicting federal incorporation statutes, Delaware may choose such rules of limitation on the liability of stockholders of her corporations as she desires. And those laws are enforceable in federal courts under the rule of Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U. S. 64. But no State may endow its corporate creatures with the power to place themselves above the Congress of the United States and defeat the federal policy concerning national banks which Congress has announced. We are concerned here with that problem and with that problem alone.

[11] As stated in S. Rep. No. 77, 73d Cong., 1st Sess., p. 11: "The affiliates of this type (holding companies) are prohibited from voting the stocks of national banks unless they are willing to undertake to accept examination by the Federal Reserve Board, divest themselves of ownership of stock and bond financing concerns, and comply with regulations designed to insure their ownership of sufficient free assets to make sure that they can satisfy the double liability of their shareholders in case any of the banks owned by such a company should go into the hands of receivers or be closed."

The result which we reach may be harsh to some of the stockholders of Banco. But rules of liability are usually harsh especially where they are not bottomed on fault. Thus private investors have frequently found contrary to their expectation or understanding that they purchased with their investment an unlimited liability for the debts of the enterprise. Thompson v. Schmitt, 115 Tex. 53; Frost v. Thompson, 219 Mass. 360; Weber Engine Co. v. Alter, 120 Kan. 557; Rand v. Morse, 289 Fed. 339. It has never been supposed, however, that the innocence and good faith of investors were barriers to such suits. Horgan v. Morgan, 233 Mass. 381, 385. Nor can we accede to the suggestion that those defenses should be available here. The policy underlying double liability is an exacting one. Its defeat cannot be encouraged through the utilization of financial devices which put a premium on ignorance.

The suggestion that there should be no liability without fault unless a statute establishes it denies the whole history of the judicial process in shaping the rules of vicarious liability. The liability of a master for the torts of his servant certainly started from no such foundation. And the rules which made those who purchased shares in Massachusetts business trusts responsible for the debts of the enterprise were evolved, with few exceptions, on a common law, not a statutory, basis. Magruder, The Position of Shareholders in Business Trusts, 23 Col. L. Rev. 423. In the field in which we are presently concerned, judicial power hardly oversteps the bounds when it refuses to lend its aid to a promotional project which would circumvent or undermine a legislative policy. To deny it that function would be to make it impotent in situations where historically it has made some of its most notable contributions. If the judicial power is helpless to protect a legislative program from schemes for easy avoidance, then indeed it has become a handy implement of high finance. Judicial interference to cripple or defeat a legislative policy is one thing; judicial interference with the plans of those whose corporate or other devices would circumvent that policy is quite another. Once the purpose or effect of the scheme is clear, once the legislative policy is plain, we would indeed forsake a great tradition to say we were helpless to fashion the instruments for appropriate relief.

In summary, we see no difference between the various classes of stockholders of Banco which would support a difference in their liability. Those who purchased stock of Banco for cash were as much participants in the banking business as those who acquired their stock in exchange for shares of the Bank. Together they shared the benefits of ownership of the subsidiary banks, including control. Certainly a sale of shares of Banco by the old stockholders of the Bank did not give those shares an immunity bath. To draw distinctions between the classes of stockholders of Banco would be to make the protection afforded by these statutes turn on accidents of acquisition quite irrelevant to the concept of "stockholders" or "shareholders" on whom Congress placed this liability. One simple illustration will make that plain. A purchases shares of an underlying bank for $10,000 in cash and exchanges those shares for shares of Banco. B hands over to Banco $10,000, Banco purchases the shares of the underlying bank, and then issues its shares to B. From the practical point of view A and B are investors of the same class. To say that A is liable and B not liable when both start with cash and end with identical investments is to make the difference between liability and no liability turn on distinctions which have no apparent relevancy to the legislative policy which the rule of double liability was designed to protect. And to say that courts may hold A liable but not B is to make the occasions for the assertion of judicial power turn on whimsical circumstances.

The final suggestion is that the old stockholders of the Bank remain liable for the full assessment on the shares of the Bank which they exchanged for shares of Banco. But that overlooks the fact that their interest in those underlying shares was diluted by the issuance of Banco's shares to others.[12] Double liability is an incidence of ownership. It has long been held that a stockholder who in good faith parts with all his interest in the shares rids himself of that double liability, even though his transferee is not responsible. Earle v. Carson, supra. We could hardly adhere to that principle and still hold the old stockholders of the Bank [12] The old stockholders of the Bank have a lesser interest in the shares of the Bank than they had prior to the exchange. Their interest in the shares of the Bank decreased proportionately with the increase in the outstanding stock of Banco. That resulted in a pro rata reduction in their liability. The other group of stockholders of Banco acquired that portion of the liability of which the old stockholders of the Bank were relieved.

liable for the full assessment on the shares which they exchanged for shares of Banco. The other stockholders of Banco acquired through their investment in it an interest in the shares of the Bank. To the extent of that interest the beneficial ownership of the old stockholders of the Bank in its shares was as definitely reduced as if they had made a transfer of that part of their holdings.

Certain stockholders of Banco claim that they are entitled to rescind their purchases of Banco's shares because of misrepresentations made to them when they acquired the shares. We do not reach those questions. Nor do we stop to determine whether such a defense would avoid liability on the assessment (cf. Oppenheimer v. Harriman Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 301 U. S. 206) and, unlike the case where some shareholders are insolvent (United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 425), increase the pro rata liability of the other shareholders of Banco. It is sufficient at this time to state that the liability of the shareholders of Banco would be measured by the number of shares of stock of the Bank, whether several or only fractional, represented by each share of stock of Banco; and that the assessment liability of each share of stock of Banco would be a like proportion of the assessment liability of the shares of the Bank represented by the former.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and the cause is remanded to the District Court for proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

Mr. Justice JACKSON, dissenting.

Mr. Justice ROBERTS, Mr. Justice REED, Mr. Justice FRANKFURTER, and I find ourselves unable to join in the judgment of the Court.

The Court accepts concurrent findings of fact by the two lower courts, but reverses their concurrent judgment. It holds that the findings establish liability as matter of law on two very different kinds of stockholdings: (1) holding company stock taken in exchange for double liability stock of the National Bank of Kentucky; and (2) holding company stock bought and fully paid for in cash. We think holders of the latter are not liable on any principle heretofore known to the law and that if owners of the former are to be held it must be on a quite different principle than that stated by the Court.

I.

Former National Bank of Kentucky stockholders had stock in the Bank itself which carried double liability.[1] The Bank failed November 30, 1930, and if they had then held that stock, each would have been liable for assessment upon his shares. The aggregate assessment was $4,000,000. Only about a year before the failure, on September 19, 1929, this double-liability bank stock was exchanged for shares of the holding company purporting to be fully paid and nonassessable. At the same time Bank of Kentucky stockholders also bought additional holding company stock for cash to the amount of $4,471,950. Bank of Kentucky stockholders as a group thus paid into the holding company cash more than sufficient to meet the assessment now levied. In addition to that, investors who were not connected with the Bank bought shares for cash amounting to $5,397,000. The Court nevertheless holds that the Bank of Kentucky stockholders contravened the policy of the law and are subject to the double liability because they "did not constitute Banco as an adequate financial substitute in their stead." We do not see how such a statement of fact, and it certainly is not a matter of law, can be conformable with acceptance of the findings of fact of the courts below. Nor are we able to reconcile the view that "the old group of stockholders must be held to have retained . . . the liability as stockholders of the bank" with the one later expressed that their interest was "diluted" so as to give them a pro rata reduction of liability. (See

[1] The pertinent sections of the Bank Act follow:

"The shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible . . . for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares; . . ." 12 U. S. C. § 63.

"The stockholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, each to the amount of his stock therein, at the par value thereof in addition to the amount invested in such stock. The stockholders in any national banking association who shall have transferred their shares or registered the transfer thereof within sixty days next before the date of the failure of such association to meet its obligations, or with knowledge of such impending failure, shall be liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee fails to meet such liability; but this provision shall not be construed to affect in any way any recourse which such shareholders might otherwise have against those in whose names such shares are registered at the time of such failure." 12 U. S. C. § 64.

note 12 of the opinion of the Court.) [Emphasis supplied.] It seems to us that the transfer of their bank stock to the holding company either was valid, in which case it relieved of all liability; or it was invalid, in which case it relieved of no liability. The doctrine that a transfer may be good enough to dilute liability but bad enough to carry along a part of it is new to us and we have difficulty grasping its implications.

We are, however, agreed that it would be a proper use of the power of this Court for it to examine the evidence that lies back of these findings and determine whether clear error has been committed and whether the conditions disclosed are such that a bona fide transfer of the stock took place sufficient to shake off double-liability obligations.

In spite of the exchange of National Bank of Kentucky stock, its stockholders through the holding company kept both a large measure of control of the Bank and the benefits of investment in it. They, or those acting in their behalf, had determined the policy of the holding company, had sponsored its representatives, and had selected its officers and personnel, including the manager who proved to be false to his trust. There is evidence that the National Bank of Kentucky had for some time been under criticism by the Comptroller for many of its loans and some of its policies, although it is found not to have been insolvent. The exchange did not consist of individual acts but was a concerted movement, planned by the Bank management, by which the holding company absorbed all of the stockholdings and all of the double liability.

The Court might properly, if examination of the evidence should warrant it, reach a legal conclusion that the double liability of the stockholders of the National Bank of Kentucky survives the exchange and that those who have continued their interest in the Bank through the holding company are liable upon assessment in the same manner and to the extent that they would have been had the holding company transactions never occurred. But this would be because the formal transfer of the stock out of their own names would not be recognized as a defense. The Court's conclusion rests on a quite different theory. It concludes that the transfer was valid to relieve these stockholders of their liability as stockholders of the Bank, but that they became subject to a new and smaller liability as stockholders of a holding company. With this we cannot agree.

The holding company, its financing, its management, and all that relates to it constitute relevant material as to whether under principles that have long been recognized the transfer is good. We do not think they create a new liability.

II.

After holding that former owners of National Bank of Kentucky shares are liable because they did not find an adequate substitute for their own personal liability, the Court proceeds to hold purchasers of holding-company stock for cash to be under a substituted liability pro tanto. The grounds upon which Bank of Kentucky stockholders and non-Bank of Kentucky stockholders are both held seem to conflict. If the new stockholders for cash are liable it is hard to see why the old ones have not found a substitute, and if the Bank of Kentucky stockholders have not found a substitute, it is difficult to see a basis on which the new stockholders are liable.

Stock purchasers for cash have at no time owned a stock that purported to carry double liability. On the contrary, by the terms of the stock certificates and by the law of the corporation's being, their shares were fully paid and nonassessable. These stockholders cannot be said in any way to have assumed any express or implied contractual assessment liability. No statute of the United States and no applicable state statute then or since has purported to impose a double liability upon these holding-company shares. No controlling precedent in this Court at the time these stockholders purchased or since (until today) purported to attach a double liability to such shares.[2]

[2] The authorities cited to support the Court's disregard of the corporate entity fall far short of persuasion. The quotation of the statement by Mr. Justice Cardozo from Berkey v. Third Avenue Railway Co., 244 N. Y. 84, "that a surrender of that principle of limited liability would be made 'when the sacrifice is essential to the end that some accepted public policy may be defended or upheld'" has a very different significance in its context. The facts, including interchangeable names of parent and subsidiary, complete financial and operating domination, and use of one company's assets by the other, indicated a stronger case for disregard of the corporate fiction than do the findings here. Nevertheless, Chief Judge Cardozo considered that the corporate entity could not be disregarded in favor of a tort claimant and said: "In such circumstances, we thwart the public policy of the State instead of defending or upholding it, when we ignore the separation between subsidiary and parent, and treat the two as one."

Other cases cited afford no more support for the decision. United States v. Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit Co., 142 F. 247, held that payments by a carrier to a corporation wholly controlled by a shipper

The reason given for this decision is that "the interposition of a corporation will not be allowed to defeat a legislative policy" and that "no State may endow its corporate creatures with the power to place themselves above the Congress of the United States and defeat the federal policy concerning national banks which Congress has announced." [Italics supplied.]

might constitute rebates under the Elkins Act. The statements in Powell, Parent & Subsidiary Corporations, 77-81, are completely general and to be read in the light of the specific categories which precede the page citation, all of which involve active wrong by a parent corporation. Linn & Lane Timber Co. v. United States, 236 U. S. 574, involved the question whether an "instrumentality" corporation could acquire rights which would enable it to stand better than its transferor-creator. Rice v. Sanger Bros., 27 Ariz. 15, found a corporation to be organized for fraudulent purposes and the former partners who became its stockholders were held liable. Donovan v. Purtell, 216 Ill. 629, holds nothing more than that an officer of a corporation who is personally guilty of fraud will be held liable therefore. George v. Rollins, 176 Mich. 144, stands for the proposition that equity will enforce a restrictive covenant against a successor corporation formed for the purpose of evading it. Higgins v. California Petroleum Co., 147 Cal. 363, held that in the circumstances certain successor corporations assumed a lease and therefore had to pay royalties; there was no disregarding of the corporate entity involved. Luckenbach S.S. Co. v. Grace & Co., 267 F. 676, comes nearer the mark, but still is far wide of it. A steamship corporation leased its fleet of vessels to a $10,000 corporation, formed and 90 per cent owned by it, for an utterly inadequate rental. It was held that this turning over of the corporation's ships to a subsidiary which was "itself in another form" rendered the parent corporation liable for the subsidiary's breach of contract. Oriental Investment Co. v. Barclay, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 543, allowed a hotel employee to recover for personal injuries against the parent holding company, even though technically he was the employee of the subsidiary operating company, of whose existence he was unaware and which had been capitalized with $2,000 to operate a property whose monthly rental alone was $1500. Weisser v. Mursam Shoe Corp., 127 F. 2d 344, arose on dismissal of the complaint and it was held that on a full trial it might be found that the subsidiary was "only a tool of the other defendants, deliberately kept judgment proof, to obtain the benefits of a lease with plaintiffs without assuming any obligations. The plaintiffs allege that this was done fraudulently. . . ." Pepper v. Litton, 308 U. S. 295 and Albert Richards Co. v. Mayfair, Inc., 287 Mass. 280, both dealt with cases where parent corporations claimed priority over other creditors of a subsidiary; in each, the subsidiary was held to be an instrumentality of the parent and, to avoid a fraud on creditors, the latter's claim of priority was denied. In Erickson v. Minnesota & Ontario Power Co., 134 Minn. 209, a parent corporation was held liable for damage caused by a dam owned by a subsidiary; the parent paid the operating expenses of the dam, took all the earnings of the subsidiary, had a mortgage on all its assets, and in addition had a direct right of control over the operation of the dam. United States v. Lehigh Valley Railroad, 220 U. S. 257, and United States v. Reading Co., 253 U. S. 26, held that a railroad's exercise of its power as a stockholder might amount to such a commingling of affairs as to make it liable for a violation of the commodities clause. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. Co. v. Minneapolis Civic Association, 247 U. S. 490, held that additional terminal charges made by a wholly owned subsidiary as compared with terminal charges by the parent might be held to constitute a discrimination.

We have been unable to find that Congress ever has announced a legislative policy such as the Court announces. And the Court nowhere points it out. The National Banking Act applicable at the time provided that the stockholders "of every national banking association" shall be under assessment liability. But Congress nowhere has said that the stockholders of a corporation that is not a national banking association shall be liable to assessment because the latter corporation held some or all of the stock of a national bank. Indeed, the history of banking legislation shows that Congress has considered the problems created by the holding company and not only has failed to adopt such a policy as the Court is declaring, but has made other provisions inconsistent with such a policy.

No legislation on the subject appears until 1933, when Congress enacted detailed regulation of the relations between holding companies and national banks. It required the holding company to obtain a permit to vote national bank shares and empowered the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to grant or withhold the permit.[3] No permit can be granted except upon

[3] § 19 of the Banking Act of 1933, amending § 5144 of the Revised Statutes, provides in part as follows:

" . . . shares controlled by any holding company affiliate of a national bank shall not be voted unless such holding company affiliate shall have first obtained a voting permit as hereinafter provided, which permit is in force at the time such shares are voted.

. . . . . .

"For the purposes of this section shares shall be deemed to be controlled by a holding company affiliate if they are owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such holding company affiliate, or held by any trustee for the benefit of the shareholders or members thereof.

"Any such holding company affiliate may make application to the Federal Reserve Board for a voting permit entitling it to cast one vote at all elections of directors and in deciding all questions at meetings of shareholders of such bank on each share of stock controlled by it or authorizing the trustee or trustees holding the stock for its benefit or for the benefit of its shareholders so to vote the same. The Federal Reserve Board may, in its discretion, grant or withhold such permit as the public interest may require. In acting upon such application, the Board shall consider the financial condition of the applicant, the general character of its management, and the probable effect of the granting of such permit upon the affairs of such bank, but no such permit shall be granted except upon the following conditions:

"(a) Every such holding company affiliate shall, in making the application for such permit, agree (1) to receive, on dates identical with those fixed for the examination of banks with which it is affiliated, examiners duly authorized to examine such banks, who shall make such examinations of such holding company affiliate as shall be necessary to disclose fully the relations between such banks and such holding company affiliate and the effect of such relations certain conditions, and assumption by holding-company stockholders of an assessment liability is not among them. In general, they are (a) that the holding company must submit to examination in the same manner as the national bank and must publish periodic statements of condition; (b) that after five years from the statute's enactment, each holding company must possess readily marketable assets and free assets other than bank stock in a prescribed amount; and (c) that after five years a holding company whose stockholders or members are individually and severally liable may be relieved of establishing a part of this reserve under certain circumstances. Congress was informed that some bank stock holding corporations were, by the law of the states in which they were incorporated, subject to double liability just as were stockholders upon the affairs of such banks, such examinations to be at the expense of the holding company affiliate so examined; (2) that the reports of such examiners shall contain such information as shall be necessary to disclose fully the relations between such affiliate and such banks and the effect of such relations upon the affairs of such banks; (3) that such examiners may examine each bank owned or controlled by the holding company affiliate, both individually and in conjunction with other banks owned or controlled by such holding company affiliate; and (4) that publication of individual or consolidated statements of condition of such banks may be required;

"(b) After five years after the enactment of the Banking Act of 1933, every such holding company affiliate (1) shall possess, and shall continue to possess during the life of such permit, free and clear of any lien, pledge, or hypothecation of any nature, readily marketable assets other than bank stock bank stocks controlled by such holding company affiliate, which amount shall in an amount not less than 12 per centum of the aggregate par value of all be increased by not less than 2 per centum per annum of such aggregate par value until such assets shall amount to 25 per centum of the aggregate par value of such bank stocks; and (2) shall reinvest in readily marketable assets other than bank stock all net earnings over and above 6 per centum per annum on the book value of its own shares outstanding until such assets shall amount to such 25 per centum of the aggregate par value of all bank stocks controlled by it;

"(c) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, after five years after the enactment of the Banking Act of 1933, (1) any such holding company affiliate the shareholders or members of which shall be individually and severally liable in proportion to the number of shares of such holding company affiliate held by them respectively, in addition to amounts invested therein, for all statutory liability imposed on such holding company affiliate by reason of its control of shares of stock of banks, shall be required only to establish and maintain out of net earnings over and above 6 per centum per annum on the book value of its own shares outstanding a reserve of readily marketable assets in an amount of not less than 12 per centum of the aggregate par value of bank stocks controlled by it, and (2) the assets required by this section to be possessed by such holding company affiliate may be used by it for replacement of capital in banks affiliated with it and for losses incurred in such banks, but any deficiency in such assets resulting from such use shall be made up within such period as the Federal Reserve Board may by regulation prescribe . . . . ." of banks. It was also informed that other bank holding corporations by the law of their incorporation were not so liable.[4] It did

"Mr. Wakefield. The stockholders of the First Bank Stock Corporation, being a Delaware corporation, do not have a double liability. When we started to organize this institution we did all the work on the theory we would have it a Minnesota corporation, which would have double liability. At the last minute, when we found that every stockholder in North Dakota, South Dakota, and Montana would, in case of death, have a double inheritance tax, they complained so strongly about that situation we shifted and put it into a Delaware corporation.

"The other factor that we have heard discussed and that I think of in connection with banking such as we are doing is this thought in the public mind, or some minds, that, for instance, our being a Delaware corporation was intended to avoid the double liability of stockholders. I would say that if that is of importance it might be easily provided that a holding company should create a surplus account in its holdings or build up a surplus account of some proportion of the capital of the banks that should be kept in liquid securities, or something of that sort. . . . ." Earlier, Mr. J. W. Pole, Comptroller of the Currency, had testified:

"Mr. Pole. We call that a group banking system in the Northwest. In the case of the Northwest and the First Bank Stock Corporation, I think that their stock is not subject to the double liability, although the stock of some holding corporations is subject to double liability. But in the case of those two corporations, in those particular cases—not that it obtains too generally—they have invested in securities other than bank stocks, so that a judgment against either one of those corporations would be good for the assessment.

Mr. Willis. In those particular cases?

Mr. Pole. In those particular cases; yes, sir.

Mr. Willis. But there are cases where they are not subject to the assessment?

Mr. Pole. There are cases where they are not subject to the assessment; yes, and where they hold nothing but bank stocks.

Mr. Willis. In those cases where you have an affiliated bank that buys all the stock of the bank itself, what becomes of the double liability of the shareholder?

Mr. Pole. The securities company where it buys the stock of the bank itself, would be the holder of the stock and subject to assessment.

. . . . . .

Mr. Willis. Is not the double liability then very largely neutralized?

Mr. Pole. Yes.

Mr. Willis. What have you done to correct that?

Mr. Pole. We have done nothing to correct it.

Mr. Willis. What can be done by law to correct it?

Mr. Pole. That is a big problem.

Mr. Willis. Can you make a recommendation covering that along with your other problems?

Mr. Pole. Yes."

not expressly or by implication recognize or create a uniform double liability by federal act on stockholders of state-created holding companies. It made specific provision, on the contrary, for each class of corporation. Where does this Court get authority to disregard the distinction Congress has thus created and to impose a single rule of its own making instead? When Congress has expressly set up a standard of diversification for holding company assets and has given the companies five years to meet it, from what do we derive authority to say the five-year adjustment period shall be ignored? How can we say retroactively that there is a liability for failure to do before Congress acted something which, after it did act, it expressly gave five years to do? And how can such a result be said to be an enforcement of congressional policy, which we understand to be the basis of the Court's opinion?

III.

If to legislate were the province of this Court, we would be at liberty candidly to exercise discretion toward the undoing of the holding company. Some of us feel that as utilized in this country it is, with a few exceptions, a menace to responsible management and to sound finance, shifting control of local institutions to absentee managements and centralizing in few hands control of assets and enterprises bigger than they are able well to manage—views which are matters of record.[5]

But we are of one opinion that no such latitude is confided to judges as here is exercised. We are dealing with a variety of liability without fault. The Court is professing to impose it, not as a matter of judge-made law, but as a matter of legislative policy, and it cannot cite so much as a statutory hint of such a policy. The Court is not enforcing a policy of Congress; it is competing with Congress in creating new regulations in banking, a field peculiarly within legislative rather than judicial competence. Nor was such a policy of assessment liability one whose importance was so transcending as to set aside the policy of permitting corporate enterprise under limited liability. Congress has since repealed the

S. 419; testimony in support of a proposal to withdraw from holding companies tax exemption of intercorporate dividends, Hearings before Senate Committee on Finance, on H. double liability, even of holders of stock in national banks;[6] and when in force, it had little practical value to depositors.[7] States also have abandoned the assessment plan.[8] Courts should, of course, see that the congressional policy is not defeated by any fraud, by creating sham corporations, or by any other artifice. When, however, assessment liability is a failure only because the corporate owner of the stock is not solvent, that is not a circumstance which will warrant disregard of the corporate entity so as to render stockholders liable. The findings here, accepted by the Court, eliminate every charge of fraud, bad faith, or intentional evasion of liability.[9]

We are fully agreed that Bank of Kentucky depositors, however, should not be prejudiced by a transfer to the holding company of its stock in violation of letter or spirit of the National Banking Act. If the case warrants disregard of the transfer, the depositors then would have just the protection that they would have enjoyed had no holding company intervened. The Court, [7] Comptroller Pole stated at the Senate hearings: "We hear a good deal about double liability. It is not so important as at first one might so regard it. As an illustration, the deposits, we will say, of a bank with $100,000 capital would be ordinarily $1,000,000. If you collected the entire 100 per cent assessment, you would only collect 10 per cent of your deposits after all. . . . But in practice you would not collect over 50 per cent of that. We do collect, as a matter of fact, just about 50 per cent." Hearings, supra note 4, Pt. 1, p. 28.

Depositors in the bank have already received 77 per cent of their deposits. Few pre-depression investments have yielded so much. About 6,000 stockholders of Banco have lost 100 per cent of their investment, and are now faced with liability in undetermined amounts. As to many of them, it is idle to say that they had actual responsibility for the Bank's management or any better knowledge of its affairs than the depositors.

[8] Within the last decade at least thirty-one states which formerly had double liability have abolished it either absolutely or upon compliance with certain conditions. Only five states appear to have retained their double liability provisions intact, and in one of these a proposal to abolish it is currently being considered. See "Stockholders' Double Liability," Commerce Clearing House State Banking Law Service, Vol. II.

[9] Findings of the trial court included the following:

"61. Banco was organized in good faith.

62. Banco was 'certainly not a sham.'

63. Banco was 'not organized for a fraudulent purpose or to conceal secret or sinister enterprises conducted for the benefit of the Bank.'

64. Banco was not a mere holding company.

65. Banco 'was formed for the purpose set out in the letter of July 19, 1929, and for no other purpose.'

66. Banco 'was not formed as a medium or agency through which to avoid double liability on the stock of the Bank.'"

The removal of liability is conditioned upon giving the notice prescribed.

however, makes the holding company a windfall to bank creditors by extending the liability to persons never otherwise reachable. We may disallow the holding company as a sanctuary for stockholders escaping pre-existing liability without making of it a trap for unwary and unwarned investors.

To disregard the transfer of this stock, and to hold former stockholders liable to the same extent as if they had made no such transfer, is the manner of proceeding indicated under proper circumstances by the National Banking Act itself. Instead of considering whether to disregard the transfer the Court disregards the corporate entity of the holding company because it says these obligations arise from legislative policy. Even if we could find such a policy, legislative liabilities are numerous. It is probably a legislative policy that a corporation shall pay all of its debts. The reasoning employed by the Court, we should think, would leave it uncertain whether stockholders may not be liable for many other types of indebtedness. Congress, if the matter of banking reform were left to it, could define the limits of vicarious liability at the time it was imposed. The Court is leaving the limits and extent of that liability so vague that a whole cluster of decisions will have to be written to clarify what is being done today. And meanwhile we know of no way that a stockholder can learn the extent and circumstances of stockholder liability except to give his name to a leading case.[10]

The Court admits that the judgment is "harsh." Why is it so if it is according to any law that was known or knowable at the time of the transactions? To enforce a double liability so incurred would be no harsher than to enforce any contract obligation that had been assumed without expecting it would result in liability. This decision is made harsh by the element of surprise.[11] Its only harshness is that which comes of the Court's doing with backwards effect what Congress has not seen fit to do with forward effect.

[10] This Court has considered the disregard of the corporate fiction in Donnell v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 208 U. S. 267, 273 and Klein v. Board of Supervisors, 282 U. S. 19, 24.

[11] In authoritative studies made prior to the origin of this controversy which included studies of many of the cases cited by the Court's opinion we are unable to find a trace or suggestion of the present theory of stockholder liability for corporate obligations created by legislation. III; Wormser, Disregard of the Corporate Fiction (1927).
